F.H.—(1) The diet for a Grey Parrot is given in our reply to "E.W." in this issue, to which I must refer you; yours being an adult bird, should not require any boiled maize, it will be better without it, and in your case the water can be continuously left in the cage, and the caution as to grit will not be necessary. (2) The diet for a Blue-fronted Amazon is very similar—give the same seed mixture as you do the Grey, with the addition of one part small Indian corn. About a tablespoonful of boiled maize may be given once or twice a week with advantage. Note—boiled maize only keeps fresh one day, and the food vessel must be kept very clean). Also supply so as to vary the diet (not altogether), ripe fruit, plain biscuit, green food, boiled potato (dry), raw carrot, and nuts; with regular supplies of grit, cuttlefish and water. Do not in either case give any table scraps, tea, coffee, or milk slops, or any kind of animal food whatever.

Disdemed and Salvin's Amazons.

Pat.—I am sorry, but among the many works I possess, though they mention them, none give a description of these two species, and since your query came to hand I have not been able to get over to the Natural History Museum, but I will let you have an answer in an early issue. I may say, that they are large, handsome birds, and I should say, like most of the Amazons, fairly intelligent and possibly rather noisy. However, I don't care to trust memory too much, especially with a species only seen at rare intervals, but I will supply the information in some near issue.

The White-wood Swallow.

Barney.—I presume the bird you mean is the White-eyebrowed Wood Swallow Shrike (Artamus superciliosus). The upper surface of this is grey, and greyish-white on the under parts, the wing and tail feathers are tipped with light grey, giving a rather pretty spangled effect when the wings are closed; the breast is ruddy-brown; a distinct white superciliary streak is the only white in its plumage, and to this the bird owes its vulgar name. The hen may be said to be a subdued copy of the male, the white superciliary streak is only faintly marked, and the spangling on the wing scarcely discernable. They are largish active birds and require a good sized cage. Dietary should consist of some good insectivorous mixture— say, game meal, or crushed puppy biscuit, ants' egg, dried flies and ground silkworm pupae, in equal parts' same crumbly moist for use, such fruit as they will eat, and a fairly liberal supply of mea worms and other insects. I will enumerate a few others: Dusky Wood Swallow (A sordidus), Masked (A personatus), Little (A minor), Grey-breasted (A cinereus), and the White-rumped (A leucopygialis). If this does not meet your need, please repeat query. To every pound of the sample of soft food mixture sent, add 1lb each of ants' eggs and dried flies, and when mixing add 1 part crumbled sponge cake (stale). A good home-made food is given above, it only requires the addition of sponge cake to make it suitable for Tanagers, let them have as much ripe fruit as they will eat, also a few insects. I never use egg myself, for the reason that it putrifies very quickly.

An Indisposed Paradise Whydah.

J.W.G.—You will find the full treatment given in reply to another querist in this issue. Let it have a leaf of fresh lettuce two or three times a week, also a piece of apple to pick at. Give it for the next fortnight 3 or 4 mealworms daily and a spider or two if you can capture them. A couple of mealworms per day will help to keep these birds in condition. If the bird does not improve in a week's time, repeat query with full particulars. Note.—If you burn gas in your kitchen the cage must be placed below the level of the lights, whether gas or oil. The bird has not got over the journey to this country, and it is possibly tainted with some septic affection, contracted during same. Give one dose of Dinneford's magnesia (half-teaspoonful in four times its bulk of water) for one day, repeating the dose in 3 days' time; if it appears weak, use the chemical food in between. Keep its cage strictly clean—hope it will soon improve.

Pheasants and Parrakeets.

Grinston.—(1) I cannot give this, perhaps the editor can give you the number containing Mr. Arthur's article on Cockatiels. (2) There is no reason why these birds should not agree together. (3) Pheasants, Parrakeets, etc., have been kept in smaller aviaries than yours. Provide plenty of food hoppers, so that they will not have to crowd round one or two vessels, and they should do well. There is no reason why the Pheasants should not hatch out their own eggs, but they are rather erratic this respect. Better results are obtained by using some small breed of fowls, such as Silkies for the purpose, and this is the course I advise you to take, though you can give the Reeves' an opportunity to incubation after you have secured sufficient eggs for the Silkies [illegible]-to incubate [illegible] you will have luck with them. Note, logs and nest boxes for Parrakeets should be placed as high up as possible.

What Parrot?

S.A.—I think you have some immature species of Amazon, but which, from your description I cannot say. However, if you will send me the size of your bird, I will name it for you in our next issue.

Some Fine Singers.

One in Doubt.—I am of the opinion that you have a Grey Singing Finch, if so, you are rightly informed, they are very fine singers. I could have recognised the bird with more certainty had you described the colour of its under-surface. It is quite possible you may have an immature Albino Finch, this also is a sweet singer. If you will describe it a little more fully, I shall be able to definitely name it for you. Hybrids have been reared between these birds and a Canary, so that the experiment you purpose making with a Linnet, is not a hopeless one by any means. It is an interesting occurrence, but not a very uncommon one, for the Canary to hatch the Linnet's eggs, and successfully rear the young. One of these should be useful in attempting the cross you propose with your Foreign Finch.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Irish Show Report (Fair Play all Round, R. D., and others).—The etiquette of the Press prevents our dealing with this matter, or commenting on same. Our Irish contemporary appears to have made all the amends possible.

Newark Show (Unknown Friend).—Thanks for your thoughtfulness in sending along this report. You will see by last week's issue, however, that it happened we had made arrangements to receive one from another source.

Posters (C.B. Reader, Campbletown).—Many thanks for your kind offer. We are sending them to your newsagent as suggested.

Report (J. Davies).—Accept our best thanks.

What is Approval? (Lee Van Royl.—Your letter is one of a kind we cannot possibly publish, as so many quite innocent people would be placed under a cloud of suspicion thereby. We agree with you as to the utility of the deposit system; always adopt it when dealing with strangers.

Mis-spelt Name (A.J.W.S.)—We much regret the inadvertent wrong spelling of your name, and will do our best to get it in correctly in the future—printers are terrible folk, you know.

A Disclaimer (W. Nicholson).—Your letter is of a most libellous character, and before we could entertain its publication, we should want enlightening as to the reason you "fit the cap" on yourself regarding the perpetration of the two deeds you wish to disclaim.

Goole (J.R.).—Thanks for your notes. As it happened, we had arranged for a report from another quarter.

Opinion (Rhondda Fancier).—We cannot say more than that the fancier you name is a well-known breeder and exhibitor of the variety. You must use your own discretion.

Birdie Affection (A Hollingshead).—The people you mention are entirely wrong, and can have had little intimate experience of birds, for most pet birds certainly become exceedingly attached to their owner, and recognise him (or her) without difficulty at any time.

CORRESPONDENCE.

AN ALLEGED MISLEADING ADVERTISEMENT.

SIR,—Re Mr. H. W. Walsh's complaint. For the information of the numerous readers of CAGE BIRDS, and in answer to Mr. Walsh's letter of last week, I append a list of shows where I have exhibited at, last season and this. Last season I exhibited at South Shields, Blaydon-on-Tyne, Wallsend, Barrow, Birmingham, Windhill, Nantwich, Llanelly, Swansea, Guildford and Hanley, and won over 30 money prizes, including 9 firsts, 10 seconds, and 2 specials for best Yorkshire in show (I am not giving the minor prizes). This season, so far, I have exhibited at Peterboro', Windhill, Leicester, Welsh National, Cambridge, Blackpool, Barrow, Swansea, Ashington, and Shipley, and won over 20 money prizes, including 6 first and specials, 7 seconds, and 5 thirds. I trust that the above will be sufficient to convince Mr. H. W. Walsh that he is not the only Walsh possessing a winning strain of Yorkshires. The contents of his letter are of such a damaging nature to my interests, that unless he withdraws the accusation, along with an apology, the matter may have an unpleasant ending. I am not assuming to be somebody else, as it is my own name, with the full address.

W. WALSH (Baildon).

THE CHALLENGE SHIELD AWARD AT DULWICH SHOW.

SIR,—In his reply to my letter, Mr. Morris says he wishes me and all fanciers to understand that it was from no jealous motive he wrote. I am not aware that anyone has imputed jealousy to him, but if one may form an opinion from his letter, I should say that it was a most deplorable exhibition of petty jealousy, and I venture to say that had Mr. Morris won the shield, no complaint would have been heard from him. Mr. Hardy did give his expert opinion, and chose the Norwich he knew to be the best in the show (a wise choice, too). I was asked to stand by his award and back up the same. This I did, and it is immaterial to me how Mr. Morris accepts the award. Mr. Morris also asks why his Buff was awarded first. Really, I do not know; I am not an expert, and am not supposed to give expert advice. Doubtless the judge saw some merit in it, hence his award. I was very pleased to see Mr. Hodder's letter. His Yellow Norwich was a grand exhibit, and well merited its award. The magnanimous spirit he shows commends itself to all fanciers—it has the ring of a true sportsman in it, and shows he can take a defeat with the same good grace that he does a win. May the same spirit dominate the whole of the fancy. I have no wish to say anything further in reference to these awards.

WITHHOLDING AWARDS & PRIZE-MONEY AT KENTISH SHOWS.

SIR,—Having had the pleasure of perusing the Dover and District Show catalogue, singularly enough the first item to attract my notice was on the last page, "Dover Record," 995 entries. Well, this is indeed a satisfactory matter, and I congratulate them heartily. But on looking more closely into this catalogue, I found that in the Cage Bird Section it is a "record" which is not likely to give this show a record entry in this section another year. It is to the British I wish to particularly refer, although the other part of the C.B. Section suffered. The whole section numbered some 36 classes, and, as per schedule, half prize money would be paid in classes with less than eight entries, but, in addition to this, no less than 14 first prizes, 1 second, and 9 thirds (a total of 24 prizes) were denied the exhibitors, thereby the Dover Society stopped £2 7s. 6d. from those who sent along their entries and signed the usual entry form, thereby accepting the show rules. Are they legally entitled to do this? Although the Kent County C.B.A. also reduced the number of prizes per class at their late show, ought they, in the interest of the C.B. Fancy, to give their patronage at this sort of show? Now, as regards the British Section. The Softbill classes numbered respectively three and five entries, first, second, and third being given in these classes. The Hardbill classes were not treated in the same manner. Why? It cannot be said that the exhibits were not worthy of it. There were to my certain knowledge more than one exhibit in the Hardbill classes which had not, this season anyhow, won a second prize, and had won in quite as good if not better company than the winning Softbills referred to. Is this fair to those who are trying to win the K.C.C.B.A. British Bowl? I hope if any Dover member condescends to try to explain away the hard facts I have considered it my duty to lay before your readers, he will deviate from the usual way, and not begin by referring to me as a disappointed exhibitor, or that my intention is to depreciate this record show, my object being only to show how unjustly some show committees treat their exhibitors. In conclusion, I should like to hear an opinion on the fairness to exhibitors of appointing the pigeon judge, good judge that he undoubtedly is, to do the C.B. Section as well, making a total of about 450 exhibits in 61 classes. Was there sufficient daylight in Dover on the 26th inst. for this?

COMMUNE BONUM.

THE SONG OF THE EXHIBITION ROLLER.

SIR,—Seeing the criticism as to the monotony of the Rollers' song at Leeds Show, I can only say it is too true. In this struggle for purity we are fast losing the beautiful variations we used to get, and are now reduced to, say, four or five changes. People listen to my birds and say, "Yes, it is very beautiful, but is it not rather monotonous?" I can only admit it is true. I was short of singing birds lately, and purchased a Roller (I won't mention names), but it was quite refreshing to hear the variety and brillance of its performance, compared with mine, although I had given four times the amount for my own. Again, with regard to training and feeding, how little isolated breeders know about the correct methods of getting them in song and keeping them so. I think if some prominent breeder would give his views, it would be helpful to many besides myself. Personally, I can never got mine in anything like full song till December, and I have several now that are not full. Yet we have birds by the thousand that will sing almost as soon as unpacked. How is this? Is it a matter of feeding, breeding or training? I feel quite sure that Rollers would be much more popular if a little more light were to be thrown upon the more elementary things alluded to. Although, as I said before, I give as much as one and two guineas per bird, I can rarely breed one so good; they go off into high whistles, etc., and it occurred to me, it might be because they were not kept and fed under proper conditions. If some fancier will come to the rescue, with some such advice as I have indicated, I am sure it would be appreciated by other amateurs like myself, who are quite isolated from any club. As I don't want to advertise myself I will sign this VARIETY.

ALLEGED NEGLECT OF AN EXHIBIT.

SIR,—Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to bring to fanciers' notice the mismanagement and cruelty to my exhibit, a Greenfinch cock, at Cradley Heath and District Show, held November 27th and 28th. I safely packed my bird in carrying case, with food and water tins in same, at seven o'clock, Tuesday, 26th, and duly despatched him to the show, thinking he would certainly be in safe hands on arrival. Judge of my surprise when I visited show about nine o'clock on the 28th for the purpose of bringing my bird back, to find bird on cage bottom dying. I immediately reached cage down, and found my bird without food or water. I called the attention of one of the stewards to it, and he went in search of the person who unpacked my bird. When questioned as to not having been supplied with food and water, he replied that no vessels were sent with the bird. I contradicted him, and upon finding out my case, food and water tins were found inside, just as when despatched by me. One or two fanciers present tried every possible means to bring bird round, but without success. What I cannot possibly understand is how on earth could the bird be taken out of case without tins being seen or heard knocking together? Again, even though I had forgotten to enclose tins, should not vessels of some sort have been provided and charged to me? Is the rule at above show that exhibits, no matter of what value, should be allowed to die for the sake of a penny food and water vessel? Where was the "management" to allow a bird to be staged two days without food and water? When I called the Secretary's attention to it, he replied, "Get permission to take him out." Nice apology this. Ah! This is the first time I have exhibited at shows, and if it is not sufficient to dishearten a new beginner, what is? I have almost made up my mind to let secretaries and the management do all the showing and winning themselves for the future—all they want is £ s. d.; exhibits can live or die when they have got your entry fees. I sincerely hope no other fancier's bird shared the same fate as mine, and also write to thank the fanciers for the trouble they went to to try and bring bird round. I might add that the bird was in the tickets.

ALLEGED MISMANAGEMENT AT DULWICH AND PECKHAM SHOW.

SIR,—In reply to J. E. Reeves' suggestion, I beg to inform him that I absolutely refuse to do anything of the kind. His comments I can well afford to treat with the contempt they deserve. G. F. WOOLHOUSE.

SIR,—There is no doubt Mr. Woolhouse had too many entries—more than his staff could cope with. I was allowed in at 2.45 on the first day of the show, but what good was it to me, as a novice anxious to learn something? There were no catalogues out until about 5 o'clock, and then, of course, without awards in. I made four entries and the only one that I could find was my Goldfinch Mule (still on the floor at 4.30). I saw Mr. Vardy judge a class of Norwich and after he had awarded the cards another bird was brought up (marked absent) so Mr. Vardy had to judge again and the absent bird was awarded 2nd. How's that for mismanagement? There was not much chance to see the prize birds, as cages were packed half-way in front of each other, birds and cards quite out of sight. I might mention that the light has each year been very bad, and there is room for a great improvement. I came away from the show disgusted, and considered I had wasted both time and money. C. MARTIN.

SIR,—In my opinion the greatest credit is due to the officials for the way in which they worked, in the face of the very adverse circumstances, to make the show a success. I visited the show at seven o'clock on the first night, and was told of the difficulties which had been met with; the members of the club must have worked very hard to get things into any order at all. With reference to the feeding and watering, I went to my bird directly I entered, and found that he had both food and water. I then visited I think, pretty well every bird, and, with one exception, failed to see any case where it had not been attended to. As an exhibitor I was perfectly satisfied that the officials had done everything in their power to make the show a success, and I think far more credit would have been due to Mr. Reeves if, when he saw how things stood, he had taken off his coat and lent a hand, instead of waiting until after the show to find fault with men who did everything possible to put things right. S. STEPHENS.

A FANCIER'S DEPLORABLE LOSS.

SIR,—You will be very sorry, I am sure, to learn that I have lost the whole of my stock of birds (except my Waxwing) by suffocation. It was rather late (11.15) when I reached home on Saturday night from Winsford Show. I lit the stove, which was a syphon, about 12 o'clock, and left it burning all right. Feeling rather tired, I did not pay it a second visit, as I usually do, but retired to bed. On entering the room on Sunday morning, I found something had gone wrong with the stove, and the whole of my collection of birds dead. What caused the mischief I am at a loss to understand, as I am always very careful to see the stove is properly trimmed and kept clean. My own theory is that something caused the flame to draw up very much (but what, I know not), and make smoke, which, of course, turned into soot. This would adhere for a time in the barrel of the stove, then drop down the chimney of the lamp into the burner, which would choke, and so cause it to smoke more. I have a fume pipe attached to the stove but this I suppose, did not carry away the smoke fast enough, but allowed it to escape into the room. My stock consisted of a choice lot of Norwich, Yorks and British, many winners being among them—a better lot I never had My loss cannot be less than £50, to take them at a very low valuation. My well-known Waxwing is the only bird I have left. I brought him back from Winsford Show with me, and did not take him into the room that night.

ARTHUR C. BROTHERHOOD.

SIR.—We regret to learn that Mr. A. C. Brotherhood, of Newport (Salop), the well-known exhibitor and judge, has lost the whole of his valuable collection of birds, consisting of a choice lot of Norwich, Yorkshire and British, including many well-known winners. All bird lovers will feel much sympathy with Mr. Brotherhood in his loss. It had taken him fourteen years of hard work, with great expense, to build up his strain, and he had given unceasing care and attention to his pet hobby. It is estimated that his minimum loss is £50. It is proposed to open a subscription list to help Mr Brotherhood, who is a working man with a large family, to start afresh. Subscriptions will be gratefully received and acknowledged by P. VICTOR WILLIAMS,

A REPUTED CANARY-CHAFFINCH

SIR,—It will interest readers to hear of a veritable rara avis—a Canary-Chaffinch, with Canary beak, Canary legs, Canary back, mixed Canary and Chaffinch wings and tail, and a Chaffinch breast. Born in Hampshire, it was bred by people who had no idea of breeding. They simply put Chaffinch eggs under a Canary, which produced a hen Chaffinch. This they reared; and the next year (last year) they matched it to a Canary, the result being the specimen described above, to produce which has for many years been the great ambition of the Mule Fancy. I shall certainly send to all shows, including the Crystal Palace, so that it may be judged by the very best. Meanwhile, this grand bird may be seen at 93, Lower Sloane-street, S.W. T. DAWSON.

SCOTCH FANCY CANARY CLUBS.

SIR,—I am delighted to see Mr. Harrison taking up the Scotch Fancy in England; he is a resourceful gentleman, and with the knowledge he gained in Greenock, he should be able to guide the management of shows in England. If I might be allowed to make a suggestion, it would be in favour of the following classification: Clear or foul yellow cock, ditto hen; piebald or green yellow cock, ditto hen; clear or foul buff cock, ditto hen; piebald or green buff cock, ditto hen. Prize money: 1st, 25s.; 2nd, 20s.; 3rd, 15s.; 4th, 10s.; 5th, 5s.; 6th, card. No deduction for prize card. Entry money, 2s. each exhibit. Shows on these lines would draw from Scotland. If there is a fancier that can do it, that man is Mr. Harrison. Wishing him success,

SCOTCH FANCIER.

THE PROMPT PAYMENT OF PRIZE MONEY.

SIR,—I think the following is worth note, and that all societies should take a pattern by Shipley. I sent four entries in two classes. I took two first and specials and two thirds and special most points. My birds arrived back early on Sunday morning looking grand, and on Monday morning I received my prize-money and the special, a splendid fountain pen, which I am using to write this. We often see secretaries writing to say they are short of entries, but when once an exhibitor sends to a show and he has to wait a few weeks for settlements, he fights shy of them again. We have to pay our entries and the railway carriage spot cash, and I consider that we should have our prize-money within the week.

HERBERT J. CHICK.

THE APPROACHING DECAY OF CAGE BIRD CLUBS.

SIR,—The above heading may appear rather startling, but those who peruse this letter will, I am sure, agree with the writer. It is a well-known fact that the working classes are the sole supporters of our clubs. In the long winter evenings they forfeit their glass of grog, or beer, to enable them to procure materials for their breeding and show cages, which are mostly made at their homes. The housewife's smile is one of happiness, knowing her partner's ambition is to try and climb the ladder of fame by trying to breed two or three good show birds. As the breeding season advances, each fancier is doing his level best in getting his birds in perfect order. When the young are hatched they leave their beds at daylight, so that the old birds can have the fresh egg food for their young. In due course a visit is often made to each other's bird rooms, to see how Dame Fortune has favoured them. A remark is very often made as follows: "Well, old man, you have a good one there; it will take some beating." Then comes the club meeting, a date is fixed for the "show" in due course, an appeal is made to the public to support the working man's hobby, and this is generally responded to. Some kind donor presents a valuable cup, others silver medals, etc., and these are given in good faith for the working class hobby. The show day arrives, and every true fancier is full of glee, thinking his bird will be to the front. The show is visited by the fanciers, and the birds inspected, when a gloom comes over their countenances. They gaze upon birds of great value, they having been hired or bought for the occasion. The judges' awards are for the best birds, the board is swept, the true fancier's prizes are nil. They leave the building dejected men, vowing they will sell out at any price and have done with the hobby for ever. This is exactly what our clubs are drifting to. I would suggest that all members belonging to the cage-bird clubs be requested to sign a declaration that all exhibits shown by them are their own breeding, and if there are any doubts respecting this, members should have full power to visit the bird room and inspect the birds, and if any member objects to this, he should be expelled from the society and not allowed to exhibit at any shows. No honest fancier would mind showing his birds in this case. If this were carried out, the true fancier would then have an opportunity of getting to the front again. FANCIER.

SCOTTISH PLAINHEAD CLUB MATTERS.

SIR,—On looking over CAGE BIRDS, I need not say I felt somewhat alarmed, until I came to look whose signature was at the bottom of a letter, and saw it was only "W. Aitchison." We are getting somewhat accustomed now to Mr. Aitchison and his annual attack on the Scottish Plainhead Club, and more especially on its somewhat dull and stupid secretary. He charges me with cowardliness and evasion of the truth, and quotes a circular sent out by me to members of the club. We will now try and follow him through this wonderful letter, and I shall do my best to answer him. He commences with the 1906 Contest, Kelso Show, and says it did not comply with the conditions of the English Plainhead Club, viz. they did not give either patronage or support to mixed shows. All I have got to say on this is that there were no such conditions in connection with contest. How was it, Mr. Aitchison, that those self-same conditions were proposed at Manchester, on Saturday, 26th October, 1906 (you were present at the show), and confirmed at Preston Show in December, if such a rule was in force? Mr. Hector (Aberdeen), who was one of the promoters of the contest, says no such conditions were attached to the contest, such as mixed shows, and four money prizes, although personally I am quite in favour of such conditions. I should like to remind Mr. Aitchison (if he has a convenient memory—other readers have long ones) to look over his letter in CAGE BIRDS, September 29th, 1906, and see whether he mentions any conditions of the contest in it, and to consider whether he and others did not cause the Kelso Committee the expense he talks about. The General Meeting of the Club was held on 16th February this year. I wrote Mr. Raynes on April 10th, and received a reply on May 2nd. Several letters passed, arranging matters satisfactorily; reply received in July; voting papers issued by Mr Scaife Fauldhouse, July 25th; returned to Mr. J. Young Rutherglen, Tuesday, 30th July; returned to me August 3rd. The result of vote, along with classification, was sent on to Mr. Raynes. He replied, giving fixtures of competitions, and resulted as stated in circular. It will now be seen how far Mr. Aitchison is from telling the truth—July is not October. He draws attention to the business-like way the E.P.C. is managed. I have asked over and over again for any new condition of contests. The mixed shows and four money prizes were new conditions. Were the Scottish Club consulted? Perhaps Mr. Aitchison was. All I have got to say is that the club was not. If December was a condition of the Contest arranged by the Committee of the Scottish Club, why is it not in the minutes of the club? I have spoken to several of the then committee who arranged about the contest, and have been told that they know nothing about December conditions. The first time I knew of such a supposed condition was from Mr. Raynes last August (although, as I took no part in arranging the first contest as far as the Plainhead Club was concerned, I am not prepared to say Mr. Raynes is wrong). But if such was the case, why was it not brought to my notice before I took the vote? I am glad to see Mr. A is pleased in my just doing what I promised when I took office of secretary. I stated then, and I state now, I shall be guided by the members. I promised every member would have a copy of revised rules, and that no person would be on the roll without he had paid his annual subscription. What has been the result? Not what you predicted (failure), Mr. Aitchison. As you will see by the circular, a special meeting of the club took place at Glasgow. Along with the rest of the members, you, Mr. Aitchison, got notice of the meeting. You were at Glasgow; did you come to the meeting, like a man, to state your grievances? No; you were too much of a coward to do so. You state the next highest in votes should have got the contest. That may be so at a public meeting, but not so when votes of members who cannot attend the meeting are concerned. You cannot override the vote of the majority; besides, you would have just done what you say Kelso was led into. You would have caused Glasgow and West of Scotland a great deal of expense for losing the contest. But perhaps you would not have minded that. You next refer to what you call the "kernel" of the whole matter. You are far off the mark, Mr. A. This Scottish National bubble was burst long ago, and may well stink in some of your nostrils. But perhaps it would be as well to remind you that you are wrong again, as it was not at an adjourned general meeting of the S National that I was expelled (as you state I was). I still declare I was not a member, and could not be expelled, as all the meetings I attended were adjourned general meetings, and I had a perfect right to attend. I stated when I left the meeting that night I was finished with the S. National. I have just as much regard (perhaps more than what you have) for the Scottish National, and I have good reason, seeing the part I took the first four years of its existence. What my opinion may be of some of the members who managed it, is quite another matter. It is a long road that has no turning. You surely take the members of the Scottish Plainhead Club for a lot of fools. It just comes to this: that the members of the Scottish Plainhead Club are not to have a say in the contest at all. There is no use in taking a vote, as the contest, when in Scotland, has to take place (according to Mr. Aitchison) at the Scottish National. As to the circular sent out to the members, I stand by it, whether it pleased Mr. Aitchison or not. It is plain to everyone who takes an interest in this International contest, that matters in connection with it will have to be rearranged and put on a sound footing. It must be settled the first thing, at beginning of the season, where the contest has to take place. In conclusion, I have got to say, Mr. A., that when the contest took place in England, we always managed to send a team to meet them, very often when shows were on the same date in Scotland. One case I know where nearly all the exhibitors' birds were sent to Pendleton, and got a commended ticket, when there was a show not 200 yards from his own door, where he could have been well repaid for a large entry. Don't you imagine all the hardship is on the English Club side. We were not granted a second opportunity for contest; it was the E.P.C. who brought new conditions in on 1906. When you next write Mr. Aitchison, stick to the truth, as your letter is full of misstatement from beginning to end. If you did not receive your voting papers until October, how comes it I got them returned from Glasgow on August 3rd? You also state it was at the adjourned annual meeting I was expelled, when it was at a committee meeting on 27th September; and allow me to tell you the Plainhead Club never was in a better condition—17 months ago there were 46 on the roll, now there are 121 on it, and all paid. Compare the competitions this year and last year, and you will see whether it is doing good work to the open societies or not, as well as to the membership. Is this what is troubling you?

D. SMITH,
Secretary.

[A letter, signed "A Worker," has reached us concerning the above matter, but as the writer's name and address are not given we are unable to deal with it.—EDITOR.]

HYBRIDS AT PERTH SHOW.

SIR,—With reference to the above, and in reply to Mr. Ovenstone, I was surprised to see that his Canary-Bullfinch Mule was wrong classed at Perth, as being a Greenfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid. I can certify that the bird is no such cross, having gained 1st last year at Bo'ness under me. Being at Grangemouth on business on Friday previous to Perth Show, I saw the bird, just as it was going to Perth, and remarked "That I never saw it looking better and showing the cross so distinct." The best thing Mr. Ovenstone can do in future would be to send to shows where judges know what kinds of birds they have before them.

WHAT KIND OF NORWICH HAVE WE TO BREED?

SIR,—Will you please grant me a little space to ask a few questions on the above subject? The heading of this letter may seem somewhat strange, seeing we have a standard and model of this bird laid down for our guidance, but the fact remains that something is wrong if we take the placings of some of our winning Norwich at different shows, and under judges who are supposed to know what is required. As an example of in-and-outness, let me take the buff cock that was 1st and McLean Cup winner at last City of Glasgow Show. A week or two later this same bird was shown at a second-rate show (as compared with City of Glasgow) under a judge who, I am led to understand, has bred many good birds, and has long since left his apprenticeship behind, yet it was passed altogether by him. From report in CAGE BIRDS of City of Glasgow Show on this buff cock, you would think by the good things said in his favour that a better bird could scarcely be found. If report and the City judge are correct, then the judge who passed this bird must have been wrong. Bear in mind, the bird was in the same good condition and health as it was in when exhibited at City of Glasgow Show. As a novice, I want edification—that is my reason for asking for information as to which judgment is wrong. I shall be pleased if any one will set me right. I am getting my stock together for forthcoming breeding season, and competent advice will be much valued.

FOLKESTONE.

In its magnificent Drill Hall, Folkestone, on December 3rd and 4th, held the best show ever seen in the town, the entry right through being a record, to which consummation the cage birds very materially contributed, as they supplied 350 of the grand total of 1,000. A most extensive classification had been sent out, but some of the classes failed to fill. Norwich came up most excellently, and made quite the best show that we have seen at any mixed fixture this season in numbers and quality they were alike good, and the competition right through the section exceedingly keen. In the British came more keen fighting. There was much interest evinced in the disposal of the specials, and Mr. Dubson's task was by no means easy in deciding between Messrs. Broad's Crest and Mr. Morris's beautiful yellow Norwich. The Crest won, and weight and value possibly did it, but there, when it comes to a tussle between two champions, one must give way. The birds were very nicely arranged on suitable staging, which was covered with crimson cloth, and decorated with flowering and foliage plants. The committee were most attentive to their duties, and did their utmost to make a big success, which there were indications in the gate that it would be. This year's officials are Messrs. J. W. Witham-Wignall, chairman; A. C. Coleman, vice-chairman; Capt. J. O. Welch, treasurer; L. A. Brett, E. Brown, E. Clark, F. W. Coates, J. Collins, C. Davison, J. D. Drach, A. H. Gambrill, J. L. Greenland, J. S. Saunders, R. Sharpe, T. Teater, A. Weller, A. Wotton and Sergt. Sharpe, and a better lot one could not desire. Mr. J. Dobson judged, and there was very little grumbling at his decisions.

CHELMSFORD.

With an entry of near upon 170, in a show limited to a nine-mile radius, Chelmsford O.S. may well take credit to themselves. Of course, many circumstances contributed to this result. One was the possession of a veteran cage bird enthusiast as joint hon. secretary with Mr. S. J. Ballard, Mr. E. J. Ripper, who knows what cage bird fanciers want, because he knows how to show and win. In addition, the society has an excellent president in Mr. H. C. Wells, J.P., a practical committee, and an efficient band of stewards, amongst whom was the veteran fancier, Mr. A. Brazier. Add to this a beautiful hall, well lighted, commodious and free from draughts, and a capital entry, and there is no wonder all went merrily as a marriage bell. The quality throughout was good, especially in the Norwich Section. Crests and crestbreds were of average merit, and Brit. and For. numerous and good. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and we heard no grumbling at his awards. NOR. YELL. NAT. CLR. (11): 1, spl., Outten; ; 2, hc, Willett; 3, vhc, Clift; c, Temple. ALTRINCHAM C.B.S.

The Fourth Annual Show was held on Nov. 23rd at the Lecture Hall, Navigation Road, Broadheath. Mr. A. G. Davis, Manchester, was the judge, and his placing of the awards gave satisfaction. On this occasion the show was confined to members of the Society, and some superb specimens of birds were staged. The quality and standard of the various kinds of birds exhibited have gone up very considerably during the past year, and among the birds staged were those that have been winning at the various open shows throughout the country. Mr. R. Unwin was the winner of the Ross Challenge Cup. The room was very suitable for the purpose, being free from draughts and having good light. Mr. S. Harrison handled the secretarial duties in his usual masterly manner, assisted by a good working set of stewards, with the help of Mr. J. Douglas as assistant secretary. The entry was a record one for a members' show, numbering over 300.

CASTLE DOUGLAS.

Annual Show held Nov. 30, in the Town Hall, and in the cage bird section it proved a great success, there being a great increase in the number of entries. The quality, too, was of the highest order. Scotch Fancies opened the programme and brought together a very choice selection, the three winning birds in both classes being good all-round specimens. The special for best was awarded to the yell. var. hen. Borders followed, and here the competition was keen, some well known studs being represented. The special for best in this section was awarded to a grand uneven buff cock, and winner at Dumfries lately. Norwich and Yorks were an excellent all-round collection, the latter being a very level lot, the winners especially well drawn and well staged. Norwich were good, the special winning bird being the uneven buff cock. Mules were a warm lot, and keenly contested. Go dfinches, British and Foreign, were a show in themselves, the winners in each class being outstanding specimens. The special winning bird was a fine Yellowhammer, put down in a masterly fashion. Foreigners were good, the palm going to the grand pair of Indian Finches, which can only be described as living pictures. The society this year secured the largest hall in the town, it makes an ideal show room, being well lighted and roomy. Cage birds were neatly arranged at the end, free from all draughts, and on a raised platform, which gave the show a well-finished appearance. The management was all that could be desired. The hon. secs., Mr. J. C. Burnie, knows his work thoroughly, and had everything ready—the hall cleared for judges, cards up, and catalogues to hand—early. The smaller items were carefully attended to. He was ably seconded by Mr. McAllister, who had charge of the financial affairs. They received splendid assistance from a large and enthusiastic committee, whose labours were greatly appreciated by a large crowd of visitors and exhibitors. Mr. J. W. Bruce judged, and his awards were well received.

KEYNSHAM AND DISTRICT F.A.

The Keynsham and District Fanciers Association held their annual show on November 30th. We were, however, sorry to find our section very poorly represented—one class stood, and only eight entries in that. It seems a pity a better classification could not be given, and a recognised cage bird judge appointed. This and an advertisement in CAGE BIRDS would undoubtedly bring about more satisfaction. GOLDIE OR BULLIE: 1, Russel; 2, 3, Jones; res, Linden.

HETTON-LE-HOLE C.B.S.

The Hetton-le-Hole C.B.S. held their annual show on November 30th. Mr. Bewick judged, and gave every satisfaction. Mr. Nutley, the hon. secretary, worked very hard to make the show a success; in fact, was here, there, and everywhere. NORWICH CL. YELL.: 1, spl, H. Wilson; 2, Gowland; 3, Lawson. GOOLE.

In connection with Goole show held on November 28th, Cage Birds were provided with nine classes, and taken altogether, the show was a great success, the 59 classes bringing 1070 entries. This and the good gate will ensure a financial success, a result thoroughly deserved by the Society. Cage birds were nicely arranged at one end of the Market Hall, a capital place for such a show. The light being excellent and the space ample. The secretary, Mr. G. Butler is a most energetic official, and had the arrangements in capital order. Cage birds, limited to £5, came up splendidly and made a very attractive section, whilst many good birds were on view. They were well looked after by the stewards, Messrs. Harrison and Robertson. Mr. T. J. Ambrose judged. YORKS. (23): 1, vhc, hc, Champion, 1st yellow, grand length and position, nice shape, good feather, hot colour; 2, 3, 4, Emery, 2nd, clear buff, beautifully feathered, nice length and style, good build, 3rd, good colour, shape and feather, lengthy, 4th, yellow, of nice shape and feather, needs training; ex 3, Spencer, another grand in feather and in position, loses in length; ex 4, Murrell, long, slim bird of good shape, not nicely shown; 5 hc, Ramsden, good yellow; vhc, Barrett, Wainwright; hc, Ramsden, rare class for quality, and the committee alowed on request a couple of extra prizes. YORKSHIRE C.C. OF IRELAND.

The Yorkshire Canary Club of Ireland held their Annual Exhibition on Nov. 28th and 29th, and for the show the Committee secured the spacious and grandly-lighted room of the Royal Society of Antiquarians of Ireland. The room is as near perfection for the purpose as one could wish to have. The staging arrangements were capital, and the light being from the top, the exhibits could be viewed without any trouble. Under the direction of Mr. Sholedice, the capable and obliging secretary, who was well backed up by a hard-working Committee, headed by the respected Chairman, Mr. R. Devitt, everything seemed to go with the proper swing. Amongst others who worked hard, were Messrs. Dnignan, treasurer; Fry, Killeen and Cloke. Visitors patronised the show fairly well considering the bad weather on the first day. Yorkshires were, of course, the main feature of the show. The classification in this section was good, and the response was first-rate in the open classes, well over the hundred being staged; while in the classes confined to Nonco.our-fed birds there were over fifty birds exhibited, a few of which, in the judges' opinion, had, it was said, tasted of the forbidden fruit. In the six classes set apart for the Novice, seventy birds were exhibited, and over and above these four Limit or Selling classes were provided for the "straight 'uns," which contained over thirty more of the birds of the broad acred shire, making a total of over 250 Yorkshires, which must have been very pleasing to the officials and members of the Irish Yorkshire C.C. The quality was grand all through. In the Novice classes were put down birds of rare type, style and quality, and we venture to say that this was the best display of the Yorkshire Canary ever seen in Ireland both for quality and quantity. Crests and Plainheads, though under the Club's patronage and support, did not make a big show as regards numbers, but quality was good. Hybrids and Mules were a grand lot, averaging nearly ten per class. The teams of several exhibitors made a really grand show in themselves. The Britishers, next to the Yorkshires, were the feature of the show, leading off with a grand class of 25 Goldies. Linnet classes were distinctly good, the winner being one of the best, and dirt cheap at catalogue price, £4. Larks and Bullies were a grand lot. The majority of the placed birds, in fact, were all good enough to win at most shows, and were staged in such first-class style as to be a credit to the exhibitors. The Foreign were somewhat poorly represented, the only entries being a grand Toucan and a good Grey Parrot. We hope the show may be as good in success financially as it was from a fancier's point of view. We found the Dublin fanciers a capital lot all through, and we wish them and their Society the best of good fortune. Mr. H. W. Battye judged.

JARROW.

The first show of the Jarrow and District C.B.S. was held Nov. 29th and 30th, in the Mechanics' Institute, an admirable place for a bird show, being spacious, well lighted and free from all draughts. Considering this was the initial venture, and that several shows were being held on the same dates in close proximity, the show must be looked upon as a success, the entries numbering about 500. The quality in most of the classes was first rate, many notable winners being put down. The weakest section was the Norwich. Crests and Crestbreds were capital classes, as were the Yorkshires and Borders. The Mules and British were well represented by numbers and quality. The Members' classes contained many good birds that would no doubt have given a good account of themselves in the open competition, Yorkshires and Borders being the strongest in point of quality. All the exhibits were nicely staged at a convenient height and were well and carefully looked after by a good and enthusiastic body of fanciers, amongst the hardest workers being Messrs. Campbell (chairman), Sanderson, Blore, McKenzie, Wilkinson, Binns, Alty, Bowen, Picken and Hornsby. In the latter fancier, we think we met the record in our long experience of all sorts of shows as regards veteran workers. Mr. Hornsby is eighty-six years of age, but despite this fact he was working like a "two-year-old" amongst his fellow members, staging the exhibits the night before, until a late hour, and we hearn he was at the show soon after seven o'clock the next morning waiting to again take his share in the work. All honour to such an enthusiastic and energetic fancier of the old school, of whom the Society are justly proud. Mr. Carrick, the hon. sec., although quite new to the work, carried out his duties thoroughly well, and in a most conscientious manner—one would never think it his first attempt. In addition to his tact, he was most courteous and obliging. Mr. J. H. Payne made the awards in the open classes, Mr. R. Bewick taking the Selling and Members' classes.

GRAND XMAS NUMBER NEXT WEEK.

LAUNCESTON (Cornwall.)

Show was held on November 20th, and turned out a success. The four Norwich classes were not well filled, but some of the best birds in England were exhibited. Mr. W. Parnell's Yellow, which won the special for the best in the show, was a nice, fat, chunky bird, splendid type, and a credit to the owner. Messrs. Spillman and Collins also exhibited some grand Norwich Clearies. In the Yorkshire classes some of the leading West country exhibitors were represented, and Messrs. Parnell and Son put down two clinking specimens, which carried off both first prizes. In the Mules class many birds could have won under different classification. Mr. R. Browning, who has been to the front with Mules, for many years, won 1st and 2nd with two birds that were turned out in the pink of condition. The Goldfinch class contained twelve entries, the winners being well selected. Many without a card had won elsewhere, but were not good enough at this show. The large and small British classes were well worth going a long way to see. In the former the well-known Cornish Chough, "Prince," easily held its own, being a fine specimen of this now very rare bird. "Prince" went direct from Launceston to Cardiff (next day), and pulled off another 1st prize, beating Messrs. Bossey's Jay, Howe's great Grey Shrike, and Munley's Waxwing. In the small British bird class five or six birds would have won had they competed in classes for their variety. A splendid Wryneck won first, and a grand Yellow-hammer was placed second. The Foreign class, although small in number, was well up in quality, a fine King Parrot leading the way. In the local classes Messrs. Gloyn, Stapleton, Hocking, and Sargent, and Mrs. Mules exhibited nice birds. The Judge, Mr. T. D. Deeble, Plymouth, had some splendid classes to sort out, and he took great pains, and, what is more, selected the best birds in each class. The hon. sec. was Mr. F. Bright, whose name is a guarantee of the efficiency with which this section was looked after. The points special was won by Mr. Spillman. WOOLWICH.

The Woolwich P.S. held their 34th annual show in the spacious Drill Hall, on the 28th and 29th Nov. The cage bird section came up fairly well, although some amalgamation had to be resorted to. Mr. J. D. Reed, the secretary, had his hands full, but he acquitted himself splendidly. The show committee consisted of Messrs. Eves, Winder, Fairfield, and Curtis. Councillor J. J. Messent is president of the Society, Mr. H. P. Murphy, chairman of committee, and Messrs. C. H. Hitherstay and J. W. Ames, vice-chairmen. The quality of birds was very good, some very smart Norwich Plainheads being shown by Messrs. C. E. Silk, A. J. Kilby and other well known fanciers. In Mules and Lizards, which were sent by such men of renown as Messrs. Marshall, Parkman, Allison, Osborne, and others, an evidence of the quality to be met with. Cup for the best members' exhibit was won by Mr. F. Johnson with a Crest, and the other special winner were Messrs. Marshall, Golding, Pittis, Richardson and Johnson. The class for foreign birds was a very nice one, Miss Brammer winning with a grand pair of Lorries in beautiful feather. The Mule class contained a nice specimen of the Redpoll-Greenfinch Cross; Goldfinches were few in numbers, but top-op in quality; a spanking Linnet won in its class, and a lovely Chaffinch stood first in the A.O.S. Seedeaters. Members' classes came up well. Mr. Geo. Gardiner judged. OPEN CLASSES.—NORS. YELL.: (5) 2, Silk very stylish, looked as if it had had a rough journey; 3, vhc, Lowe. BERWICK.

Berwick and Dis. held their first annual exhibition on November 28th. The town Exchange, in which it was held, is an excellent hall for the purpose, being compact and splendidly lighted. The managing committee informed us that they would have it more comfortable still in future. As this was a first venture, of course these difficulties can scarcely all be surmounted at the first attempt. The staging was tastefully done, and presented a taking appearance. Berwick is a grand centre both as regards the number of fanciers and railway facilities. It is to touch with trains coming North and South, and this enabled fanciers to muster in goodly numbers. The list of office bearers was in itself sufficient to induce fanciers to help the society in their new venture, and this they did, a good entry turned up in most of the cage bird classes. President, Mr. H. G. M'Creath; vice-president, Mr. J. E. Carr; and chairman, Mr. W. K. M'Creath; committee, Messrs. R. Gray, G. Hogarth, J. L. M'Creath, J. Martin, W. Elder, T. Beveridge, T. Renwick, H. Thompson, W. Hay, T. Walker, A. Short, A. Thompson; auditors, Messrs. R. Calder and J. Peacock. The show secretaries, Messrs. Smart and Hay, are too well known in the Fancy to be introduced here; both worked with untiring energy for the welfare of the show. Two better adapted secretaries could not be found, and it is very gratifying to learn that everything passed off smoothly under their charge. We were pleased to see Mr. A. Hay again on the show bench with his team, the largest in the show, and it was surprising to learn that this was the only time he had exhibited this season, pressing duties keeping him from the bench. In the small British Hardbills he turned out an easy winner with one of the finest hen Greenfinches we have seen staged this season. Most of the above committee are well known fanciers, and we must congratulate them on the efficient manner in which their several duties were carried out. Scotch Fancies were short in entries, but a few very good specimens were staged. Norwich contained some extra fine birds and of grand type, the winning Buff Plainhead securing the special award for best Norwich in show. Border classes came out in full force, and a few eye-openers were here on view. Buff cocks and hens were grand classes, and contained many a real good one. Selling classes came up in strong force, and contained some very useful birds, while a number of these found new owners. Entries totalled 227 in open classes, and members' classes nombered 67. Mr. R. S. Bewick, Chester-le-Street had the judging of Norwich, variety British and Mules, and Mr. W. Bell, Jedburgh, judged the Border and Scotch Fancies and A.O.V. classes. Their awards were very well received, little adverse comment being heard.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.O.B.

The annual autumn event in connection with this popular and ever-increasing society was held at the Church Institute, Marylebone, Nov. 22nd and 23rd, and eclipsed all previous association records. To have to chronicle an entry of 456 at a members' show is a pleasant task, and compliments are the subject of the record. Anyone who visited the show could not fail to realise that the Association not only enjoyed popularity, but must inevitably be exercising a power for good upon the Fancy in London. The magnificent array of cups, shields, and other like trophies of interest was an eye-opener. The arrangements and the general management of the show, too, were smoothly, courteously, and methodically conducted by that astute, clever, kindly and practical secretary, Mr. V. Wynn, who has few equals in enthusiasm, certainly few superiors. The 433 entries represented the contributions of 58 exhibitors, so that a satisfactory proportion of the membership took part. The quality of the exhibits all round was excellent, and the number of visitors large, representing a substantial "gate." Catalogues sold rapidly. Canon and Mrs. Barker (the former of whom is the president of the Association), visited the show and amongst other London fanciers we noticed Messrs. Vane, Banoy, Frostick, Tomber, Geo. Gardner, Turner, R. J. Pretty, R. L. Crisp, Tyson, Lilley, Birch, Adamthwaite, Dewhurst, Norman, Trower, and Newley. The winners of cups were Coronation, Mr. Easterling; Yorks., Mr. Crisp; Nor., Mr. Curtis; Novice, Mr. Watling; shield, Mr. Lazarus; crest cup, Mr Shepherd; Novice crest, Mr. Dickinson; hen, Mr. Pooley; Mayfair, Mr. Rouse; Grosvenor, Mr. Curry; Trower, Mr. Francis; Wynne points, Mr. Wyse, best in show, Mr. Pooley (Crests, best Brit., Mr. Francis (Woodpecker). Last year the entries totalled 315, so that the entries exceed last year's total by 100 or more, and the list of prizes included the magnificent total of 95 specials, including 13 cups. The chairman of the council (Mr. A. C. Burn) was most assiduous in his efforts to make the show a success, and every member of the council work'd heart and soul to the same end. Mr. J. Robson judged Canaries, and Mr. C. Prior Mules, Brit. and For. Speaking generally, the Nor. Plains, in all sections, made a grand show. Crests, too, although not so numerous, were of highly meritorious quality. Yorks. were A1, and the Brit. section was a treat to see. The show was a really grand success, and should do much to augment the membership of the Association.

WINSFORD (Cheshire).

Third annual show took place in the Town Hall, on Nov. 30th. The hall is a capital place, being well lighted, warm and quite free from draughts. Entries came up well, numbering 128, an average of nearly thirteen per class. Bullfinches always turn up in strong force, a great number being kept in the district, and some of them without a doubt are capable of holding their own with the best. The Goldfinch class of 19 was a fine one, containing some capital Finches. Mr. Bowes held the whip hand, capturing first and second. The winning Bullie of Mr. Wigley's is a gem, and held same position last year. The Nightingale belonging to Mr. Williams, which stood at the head of the A.O.V. is a very fine specimen, one of the best on the show bench to-day. Mr. Brotherhood's champion Waxwing, which accounted for the first card in the large British, was the centre of attraction to many of the visitors. The Linnet-Bullie belonging to Mr. Pitchford, easily accounted for the Mule or Hybrid class, and, shown in lovely bloom, was awarded the spl for best in show. Canaries are not catered for very lavishly. We think the committee would do well to add a few more classes of the popular varieties to the schedule another year. The four classes that were provided contained some very typical specimens, and the winning birds were generally well selected. The exhibits were nicely staged (except the Yorks. which were "skid" a little too much) and were well looked after by an enthusiastic committee, a capital hard working body of fanciers. Mr. Ollier, the hon. sec., had everything well in hand, and a better man to fill his unenviable post it would be hard to find, he being courteous and obliging to all. The "gate" came up well, the platform where the birds were staged being pretty well packed nearly the whole of the time. Two classes in our section failed to come up to the requisite number to entitle them to full prize-money, but we understand full money will be paid throughout; the committee are to be complimented for so doing. Mr. H. Tams judged.

ORMSKIRK.

A capital collection of birds and a good attendance of the public was the outcome of the second members' show of the Ormskirk and Dis C.B.S., held on Nov. 30th, in the clubroom at the rear of the "Buck i' th' Vine" Hotel. Mr. P. Waring, of Preston, again handled the birds in a very satisfactory manner. Awards:—YORKS. CL., ETC., YELL. CK.: 1, spl, 2, Walker; 3, Field; vhc, hc, c, Johnson. EARLESTON.

Earlston O.S. held their annual show in the Corn Exchange on 30th November. The society has an excellent official in their secretary, Mr. J. Brockie, whilst the treasurer, Mr. A. Purvis, and the committee, are all good fanciers, Messrs. Pringle, Cairney, Purvis, Aitchison, Stallord, Morris, Murdison, Couchy, Aitken, Leslie, Bannerman, and Lamb, working very hard. Cage birds were well up to this society's average entry, and in the various classes were some very select specimens. The Border Fancies were quite the feature of th show.

EGREMONT (Cumberland).

The Twelfth Annual Show of this Society was held on November 29th and 30th, in the Town Hall, a place well adapted to such a show—good top light and all exhibits staged at a convenient height. Norwich opened the programme; although not large in numbers, they were grand in quality. The winning yellow hen is a beauty, not her first win, and will be heard of again. Messrs. Moffat, Younghusband and Wilcock put some rare teams down. Yorkshires were very strong both in numbers and quality, and Messrs. Stewart, Wilcock, Brown, Irwin and others put down teams which did credit to them. Border Fancies came up badly three classes out of the five provided having to be cancelled. There were only 12 entries in the two remaining classes. Surely Egremont deserve better patronage than this, how can show committees give good classification when badly supported? British birds were also somewhat badly supported, four classes having to be cancelled. The Goldfinches were a splendid lot, tho winner being a real gem. Linnets numbered 25, and gave the judge some work to separate. The Committee worked hard and well ,and every praise is due to them for the manner in which they attended to all the exhibits. The secretaries are Messrs. Woodburn and Lucas, to whom much credit is due for the safe and successful conduct of the show. Mr. A. Wellings, of Prescot, placed the awards, which on the whole, were favourably received.

HUTHWAITE.

The first annual show of the newly-formed Huthwaite and district C.B.S. was held Nov. 30, in the large room of the "Workpeople Inn," Huthwaite, a room well adapted to the purposes of a show, having a good light and a very cheerful appearance. The birds were well staged, where they could be seen to the best advantage, not a bird being in the shadow. The management was excellent, judging was over in good time and cards were up and the doors opened punctually at the hour advertised. Mr. Thomas Dove, Sutton-in-Ashfield, judged, and although he had only about 80 birds to place, we did not envy him his task, for this was no ordinary local show, every bird staged being a winner in the best company. The competition was a battle royal, amongst giants. There was not a waster in the whole show, and all were put down as only such men as those named in the list of awards can put them down. The committee consisted of the following fanciers, all being well-known as exhibitors and some of them as leading judges, Messrs. W. Vardy, J. Driver, J. Ingram, J. Vaughan, J. Adnett, F. Beardall, G. Walker, J. Hatton and treasurer and chairman, Mr. Geo. Marshall. The secretary is Mr. J. Thompson; he was courteous to everyone, and has a quiet, smooth, but determined way of "bossing his show" which spells success as a show secretary. It will be noticed that there is a general lack of vhc, hc, and c cards; these men do not believe in what they call "codding cards," and if their birds are not good enough in the best company to get in the money, they do not care for the mere paper card. Two silver medals were given for best red fed birds, Mr. W. Vardy taking Sandiford's, and Messrs. Adnett and Driver, Peats' medal.

NOR. YELL. COCK (5): 1, Beardall and Walker, grand yell., chest like a Bullie, neck well filled and good colour; 2, 3, Marshall and Vaughan second nice size, third equally good; vhc, Vardy, very close up. SUDBURY (Suffolk).

This show, which was held on November 26th in the commodious and well-lighted Drill Hall, in connection with the local live stock show, was a decided success, especially when it is borne in mind that the Cambridge show was held the next day. Added to this the schedules sent out bore the following rather unique announcement:—"The show this year is being held under Poultry Club rules, but is not under license from the Cage Bird Union in consequence of that Union's rule No. 17." Cage birds occupied the whole of the capacious balcony, the exhibits being well looked after by the stewards. The secretary, Mr. C. H. Row, is a very able official, and had everything in apple-pie order. Mr. Silver judged. NOR. CL. DUNBAR.

Dunbar and District held their 4th Annual Exhibition in the Assembly Rooms on Nov. 27th. President, G. Cunningham, Esq.; vice-president, G. Davidson, Esq.; secretary, Mr. J. R. McIntosh, a hard working and able official; treasurer, Mr. R. Huntly; committee: Messrs. Bell, Law, Burns, Harley, Gullen, Bisset, Gibson, Allan and Russell, all good and tried fanciers. Entries turned up rather disappointingly in numbers, but the quality was of the best, competition for the 2 Scotch Fancy Cups, bringing out some of the cracks from "Auld Reekie." Mr. John McLennan of that town staging two beauties in his clear buff hen and buff pied hen, winning both Cups (the second time) for best old and young birds. Borders turned up pretty well, and the shield, which was the magnet to draw them out in this section, was again captured by Mr. A. Gilchrist. This being the third year he has carried off this beautiful trophy, it now becomes his own property. Mr. Adam Melrose (Galashiels) handled Scotch fancies, and Mr. H. Bennet (Kelso) Borders. Norwich, etc. Prize tickets were up on the cages in good time and their awards gave general satisfaction.

ECCLES (LANCS.).

Eccles and Dis. C.B.S. held their annual show on November 30th, at the Crapes Hotel, Patricroft, when there were 129 birds staged, in a very remote room. Members' classes were a great success, but we were sorry to see that the entries in the open classes came up rather badly. We hope the committee will be better supported another year, and would suggest that they throw the show open to all comers, instead of confining it to a radius. The committee consists of very energetic young fanciers, and with the secretary, Mr. F. Wheatley, who spared no pains, and the vice-president, Mr. A. E. Clowe, had everything in first-class order. The principal winners in the open classes were Messrs. W. E. Knowles, A. E. Clowe, S. Cook, E. Houghton, and T. H Mort, whilst specials in members' classes were won by Messrs. Hawkesworth and Cashwell. Mr. J. Pendlebury judged, and his awards were his awards:—YORKS. YELL. BANBURY.

Try what they would, and securing the patronage of the C.B.U. as they did, the Banbury Society were unable to get a substantial entry, and although the management, the classification, and the list of specials were alike excellent, the result was discouraging, so far as entries were concerned. There were 14 classes and the entries only mustered 88. But the quality, however, was excellent. Messrs. Hazlewood and Nelson, the hon. secretaries, did their utmost to secure success, but while they richly deserved it, they did not get it. Messrs. H. Dale and G. Lovell, the stewards, did their duties well, and the judge, Mr. J. Nuson, got through in good time. Special for best in show was won by Mr. Mills, with a topping variegated dark Crest. Mr. Irons, of Northampton, sent a fine team of Nor. Plains. The Brit. birds were a nice collection. The weather was most inclement, it raining hard during the afternoon; in the evening a fairly good number of townsfolk visited the show.

OAKENGATES (Salop).

This show was held in the Town Hall on November 27th, and, for a first attempt, must be voted a success. Entries in the cage bird section came up really well, especially considering that the fixture was not advertised in the cage bird paper. The judge had far too much to do, it being late on in the afternoon before the cage bird judging was over. Mr. Lawrence Corbett makes an ideal secretary, sparing no pains in looking after both the exhibits and the visitors; he was well backed up by a hard-working band of stewards, consisting of Messrs. J. T. Eaton, J. T. Kearton, and R. Slaughterer. Mr. A. J. Gladwin judged. OPEN CLASSES (16): 1, spl, vbc, Brotherhood, tick. yell., grand colour and quality, nice shape and condition; 2, Beard, good quality Buff, nice exhibit; 3, Campbell, clear yell., rare type and quality, deserves its place; vhc, Wells, Eaton; bc, Callear, Bailey, Wells; c, Barnsley, Machin. COWDENBEATH.

The annual show of above society was held in the Masonic Hall, on 30th November. The entries this year were somewhat disappointing, despite the fact the society had given an extended classification. The Scotch Fancy, with 12 classes, had an entry of a little over 80, but what was lacking in numbers, was made up in quality, some grand birds being shown. The Norwich, etc., had a few very nice exhibits, but what was very noticeable, some of them were badly staged, which spoiled their chances greatly. In the Hybrid class, Mr. Paton showed his now well-known light Siskin-Mule, which for rarity and condition was all that could be desired. A fine specimen of the Cornish Chough, belonging to Mr. Crockatt, Arbroath, was very much admired; the beautiful lustre shone like velvet. Much of the success of the show is due to the indefatigable efforts of the secretary, Mr. William Falconer, who had everything in apple-pie order. He was ably assisted by a hard-working Committee. Judges, Mr. J. Stenhouse and Mr. W. Hogg, who did well.

SCOTCH FANCIES.—CL. YELL. CK.: 1, spl, Barclay, fine free neck, grand size and top, nice mover; 2, Dodds, fine reach, tail well under perch; 3, Renton, very fair size, and quick in action. CONSETT.

The Consett, Blackhill and District Society held its eleventh annual exhibition on November 16th, and met with rare success all round. That they are anxious to do their best for the cage bird section is proved by their this year (the second they have catered for them) engaging a separate hall to hold the birds, and much improving the classification. The entries showed this was appreciated, for nearly 150 more birds were to be seen than last year. Three or four classes had to be struck out, but taken on the whole the response was very fine and the birds worth going a long journey to look over. The day was an unfavourable one, unfortunately, but a crowd of fanciers attended nevertheless, and expressions of pleasure at the admirable arrangement and management of the show were heard on all hands. The staging is good, and we had plenty of room to move about, though late in the day the crowd got very thick, which looks well for the financial side of things. The Yorks made a nice lot, some good quality ones being put down by Messrs. Elliott, Carter, Cooper, Ellwood, Cuthbertson (some of whose birds we thought had hard luck), Taylor, Kemp and Sons and Davison. The Norwich were the pick of the show, some rare birds appearing, noticeably those shown by Messrs. Wade and Carr, Thompson, Stanger and Herdman, Bindett, Slater, and Bewick and Son. In Crests Mr. Hands held the whip hand as it were, while Messrs. Routledge, Almond, Bewick and Son, W. Taylor, and the Rev. Rickaby ran him close. Mr. Harvery put down a fine Scots Fancy, and Mr. Taylor and Mr. Craig were the runners-up. In Borders the winners were Messrs. Hawkins, Scott, W. Taylor, Lee, and Lindsay, who put down very typical ones. The Variety Breeds and Foreign, were a very pretty collection, and attracted much attention (especially the "talkers," among the parrots, most amusing birds). The chief winners came from Messrs. Maddison, Taylor, Forster, Oliver, Urwyn, Dunn, Clark, Stanger and Herdman, Shepherd and Son, Rocks, Stephenson, Ledger and Mackenzie. The members' silver cup was secured by Mr. W. Routledge, with his variegated Crest, a real good specimen, while the "Murray" cup went to Messrs. Stanger and Herdman. A real good lot of fanciers looked after the cage birds, and left nothing undone for their comfort. Messrs. T. Collins, L. and T. Emerson, O. Gray, A. Nichols (who very ably took charge), J. Thorpe, and E. Thompson being prominent in the good work. The duties of secretary fell on the shoulders of Miss M. Hutchinson, and that very heavy task was carried through in a manner which brought words of praise from all—lucky Consett to have such a capable lady at hand. Her brother, Mr. W. H. Hutchinson, was, unfortunately, unwell, a fact all deplored, and we were glad to learn he is on the high road to recovery. His sister's good work must be a great consolation to him. Mr. T. Dixon (Bedlington) gave satisfaction as judge.

OLDHAM.

The Oldham and Dis. C.B.S. held its annual show on Nov. 23rd in the George Street (Bardsley Brow) schoolroom. Although there were numerous counter attractions in the town—New Zealand v. Oldham football match, very severe weather, hail, sleet and rain—the "gate" proved very satisfactory, and spectators were loud in their praises of the excellent fare provided. The Federation of Cage Birds competition (Ashton-under-Lyne centre) took place in connection with this function, seven classes being allotted. Exhibits numbered over 200. The room is well-lighted, free from draughts, and centrally situated. The show arrangements were in the capable hands of Messrs. Sharples (president) Ackroyd (secretary) and Steeple and Nelson (vice-presidents), who piloted the arrangements, to all outward appearances, in a very efficient manner, and were ably backed up by Messrs. Cocker, Fitton, Harrison, Hampshire, Lowe, Shums, etc. Mr. Ackroyd makes a very able secretary, and deserves every credit for the capable manner in which he carried out the arrangements. Lizards and Lancashires were rather poorly represented as regards numbers; quality, however, was very pronounced. This is a most singular instance, when we take into consideration the fact that we are at the "home" of the varieties. Messrs. Hampshire, Lowe, and Fisher, had the Lizard classes to themselves. In the Norwich classes the birds of Messrs. Davis (a new exhibitor, who has purchased some very fine birds that have been winning up and down) Young, and Foxall were to the front. The Yorkshire section included some good specimens from Messrs. Bradley, Clayton, Gray, Wagstaffe and Fitton. Some excellent birds were up for disposal in the £1 selling class; Fitton's green Crestbred (fourth) was claimed by a member of the Stockport Society. Mr. R. Cowherd, the genial secretary of the Middleton Society, was deputed to act as representative of the C.B.U., and expressed satisfaction with the arrangements. After a decade, Mr. Bowyer, of Leek, was invited to adjudicate, and great pains he bestowed on all the classes. Light was against him at times; semi-darkness being prevalent on two or three occasions, which necessi[illegible]his waiting for natural light.

SOUTH LONDON C. AND F.A.

South London C. and F.A. held their 33rd anaual show at the Public Baths, Old Keat-road, on November 27th. This society is one of oldest in London. The hall is a fine one, and most suitable for a show of this kind, well lighted at top and sides, and comfortably warm. The secretary and treasurer is Mr. G. A. Jefferys, and the assistant-secretary Mr. C. Wallace-Davis—both very able officials, and deserving great credit on the management of the show. The chairmaa is Mr. G. Munday, and the vice-chairmaa Mr. T. Rombach. These, together with Messrs. G. F. Maies, S. Harris, aad A. J. Done, worked very hard to make the show a success, which it proved to be. In the champion Plainhead Norwich classes the principal winners were Messrs. Munday, Richardson, and Males, who showed some splendid specimens; Mr. G. Munday won 1st and three specials with a grand unflighted yell., and cup for best young bird in the show. Mr. Richardson won five firsts in Norwich, aad Mr. Males was well up in most classes. The winners in Yorkshires were Messrs. Done, Biss, Males, and Richardson, who showed some really fine specimens. In Crests and Crestbreds, Messrs. Horton, Spowage and Bizley showed some grand birds. The principal winners in the novice classes were, in Norwich, Messrs. Wilmot, Johnson, White and Palmer; in Yorkshires, Mr. Scott, who simply swept the board; and in Crests and Crestbreds, Messrs. Johnson, Palmer, and Bizley. Messrs. Johnson, Spowage, Males and White were the winners in the British section; Mr. White won 1st and special for best British in show with a fine Tree Pipit. Judge, Mr. J. Dobson. NOR. YELL., CL., ETC. (4): 1, Muaday, good quality wing marked bird, wins well; 2, Males, another wiag-marked, close up; 3, Harriss, nice quality; vhc, Richardson. BUFF CL. BOURNEMOUTH.

Bournemouth held their 17th Annual Show in the Winter Gardens, Nov. 26th and 27th, and it must be registered as a great success so far as entries were concerned. But the weather at the time of our leaving was "simply awful," and we think must seriously affect the gate. Entries came up to close on 600, and some of the Cream of England put in an appearance. The show was opened by the Earl of Malmesbury, accompanied by Lady Calthorp, supported by the Mayor of Bouraemouth and some of the leading residents. Mr. J. A. Crawshaw, vice-president, worked most ardently for the good of the Society, and was most busy and courteously backed up by the chairman and a good committee of workers. The secretaryship was in the hands of Messrs. Leech and Jones, and we doubt if it would be possible to find two men who could give them many lengths start in this capacity. Their work all round was admirable. The mode of keeping class references we have never seen equalled. Messrs Heath and E. Sik did the judging, the former taking open Canaries and the latter British and Foreign and Members' Canaries.

NOR. CL. YELL (8): 1, 2, Banbury; 2nd, was a bit the bigger of the two, 1st, very smart appearance, cleaner cut away behind—a good point in a first-class Nor., both well fed, teeming with colour; 3, Miles, also a good one, very typical, must have pressed hard; vhc, Lowe; hc, Tope; c, Schneider. LITTLEBOROUGH.

Littleborough, a hamlet situated about three miles from Rochdale, and bordering on to the moorlands, possesses a body of fanciers who are pushiug the hobby in the district, and this year tried their hand at offering open classes. They can, undoubtedly, compliment themselves on their first venture as their appeals brought forth a responsc averaging nearly 14 birds per class. In the Lancashire classes, 17 entries, a very good collection for quality was exhibited. In the Yorkshire section, 49 in three classes, were displayed some very fine "gentlemen" of the variety. Mr. Fitton won special for most points. Norwich classes, 13 aud 15 also were supported well, and Mr. Hirst won the special allotted for most points. Messrs. Smith and Sellars won spl. for most points in the unlighted Yorkies, and spl. for most points gained by a member throughout the Yorks. classes, also Club's spl. for most points in show and spl. for best bird (excluding Lancs.) in show. Mr. Mills gained spl. most points in Lancs, and Mr. Fish for best exhibit shown by a member. The room chosen was all that could be desired, being the well-lighted hall of the Conservative Club. The judge was Mr. Edward Lowe, of Oldham, and general satisfaction was expressed with his awards. He was well supported by the very excellent secretary, Mr. Crossley, and two able stewards, Messrs. Smith and Hallows, who had cards up and points spl allotted almost instantly judging had finished. Another compliment might here be given these gentlemen for the speedy manner in which they had their catalogue published. Messrs. Smith and Sellars were unfortunate in losing their Lancashire coppy, which had won for them second in the open and first in members. After judging, the stewards placed all the transferred members' birds back into the open classes, and during this process Mr. Smith noticed his bird take a drink and then collapse. In addition to the stewards and secretary, Messrs. Howarth, Sellars, Myers, Mills, Fish, Brooks, and Woodhead worked well and were always on the move.

OPEN CLASSES: LANC. COPPY, A.V. BOLTON.

After a lapse of several years Bolton and Dis. O. and R.C.S. held an open show, without doubt the most successful ever held in Bolton, on Nov. 22nd and 23rd, in the Co-operative Hall, Bridge Street. The hall was a magnificent one for the purpose, and was voted by both exhibitors and visitors to be one of the best in the country, being very well lighted and absolutely free from draughts. Thanks to the untiring efforts of the secretary, Mr. Jas. Stringer, the President, Mr. F. Procter, and Mr. R. Hollas, treasurer, everything was in apple-pie order, and all that could be desired was done. The last of the Birds was returned early on the Saturday night, in order to ensure their reaching home the same night. The successful exhibitors were paid their prize money in the afternoon. Special credit, however, must be given to Messrs. T. H. Cooper, R. Parkinson and C. Ellison, who were most energetic and devoted workers throughout both days and to whom the best thanks of the Society are due. The other members of the Committee, viz., Messrs. Eccleston, S. Smith, James Smith, Jun Smith, John Smith, Massey, J. Lomax, J. R. Mitchell, Lougworth and others also worked hard and helped to make the show the success it was. The show was formally opened by Mr. Councillor Joseph Edge, J.P.—an old member of the Society—who in a few appropriate remarks congratulated the Society on the splendid quality of the exhibits, wishing them every success. Entries totalled about 350, and included some very fine specimens in every section. Yorkshires came up well and were a very level lot, type size and quality being well maintained throughout, especially in the cases of Mr. J. Hodgson's clear Buff, and Mr. G. Wear's Yellow hen—two magnificent Yorkshires. In the Norwich classes, many notable winners were staged, including the usual grand team exhibited by Mr. T. Seed, another grand team belonging to Mr. J. E. Davies, and several very good specimens owned by Messrs. Dent, Cook, Hirst, Winter and Raynes. In the Crest Section Messrs. Hart, Hardy and Wilkinson, staged three stormers, and in the Border classes the now well known local Border fancier (Mr. H Parkinson) and Mr. C. C. Blackshaw accounted for most of the spoil. In the Mules, British and Foreign Birds, Messrs. Ward, Howarth, Almond, Mort and Makin staged some grand birds. CAGE BIRDS prizes were won by Mr. J. Almond, Hawfinch, 1; Mr P. Hardy, Crest-bred, 2; and Mr. Parkinson, Norwich Buff Hen, 3. There was also a members' Roller contest, which proved a good attraction to visitors. The judges were Messrs. J. Trengove, Canaries; J. Walsh, Mules, British and Foreign; and T. W. Walton, Rollers; and their awards gave every satisfaction. All prize money and money specials have been paid.

BUCKSBURN AND WOODSIDE.

The Bucksburn and Woodside O.S. held their annual show in the Burgh Hall, Woodside, on November 23rd. It proved to be the largest show yet held. Over 400 entries were beautifully staged round the room, which is lighted from both sides and free from draughts. The management was all that could be desired. The President, Mr. John Thomson, knows how to handle a show of this description, and he stuck to his post from morning till night, and kept everything moving in the best of order. The secretary, Mr. Alex. Thomson, has no equal in running a successful show. He adds to the funds year after year, is a hard working fancier, and does his best to please everybody. May he long continue in this office. The committee consists of the following:—Messrs. F. Scott (vice-president), Strachan, Dunn, Dugald, Johnstone, M'Pherson, Milne, Wright, Lyon, Jamieson, Stephen, Will, Duncan, Park, Rae, Ross, Duffus, Fraser, Stewart, Taylor, and Silver, all excellent fanciers. The Norwich classes contained some grand specimens of Nor. of beautiful type, and teeming with colour and quality. British birds created very strong competition, and the honours were well divided. The judges were: Mr. Milne, Montrose (Norwich, etc.), and Mr. Geo. Finnie, Aberdeen (British and Foreign), and their awards gave entire satisfaction.

WORTHING.

The Worthing F.A. held their fifteenth annual show on November 27th and 28th. The show venue was the Literary Institute, an ideal place for the purpose, having a good top-light and being free from draughts. Mr. Councillor W. Walter is the chairman, and Mr. H. Hopper was the steward. The hon. sec. is Mr. H. Tate, who is both able and obliging, and who deserves credit for the way in which he, with the aid of the chairman and steward, carried out the arrangements. There was a record entry of 146 in nine classes, which gave the judge some hard work. The quality throughout was grand, many noted winners putting in an appearance, and, in some cases, had to be satisfied with an honour, so keen was the competition. Two sets of winners could be found in almost every class. Some excellent birds were put down by Messrs. A. Burtenshaw, Councillor J. G. Denton, E. Hearsey, E. Skinner, and others. We hope the society will see their way clear to extend the classification next season. Mr. W. R. Miles judged, and his awards seemed to give general satisfaction. YORKS. (22): 1, spl, 2, Burtenshaw, former grand clear yell., rich colour, beautifully drawn, good type and feather; 2nd wing marked yell., not quite the length of winner, but a good one; 3, Denton, grand saddle-marked yell., wonderful length, nice silky feather; vhc, Skinner, Williams, Burtenshaw, and Wells; hc, Hearsey, Hill, and Walter. NOR. Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else

LOWESTOFT.

The first annual show of the Lowestoft and District C.B.S. was held in the Public Hall, Nov. 21st and 22nd. Competition was limited to Suffolk. The quality of exhibits was noteworthy, equal to many all-England shows. Entries in 25 classes totalled 380. Mr. George Francis, hon. secretary, is very "O.F.," and with the help of Mr. E. L. A. Crow, secretary Lowestoft Fanciers' Society, that good old fancier, Mr. Harry Hart, and the general committee, consisting of Messrs. Nichols, Kirk, Catchpole, Blackburn, Parke, Lay, and Bagshaw, things were made to go along very pleasantly. Mr. Jacob Mackley (Norwich) judged all classes, and his awards appeared to give satisfaction. Mr. E. L. A. Crow represented the C.B.U. NOR. CL. YELL. MACCLESFIELD (Cheshire.)

The Macclesfield fanciers had a rare good show in the Assembly Rooms, a good building, well lighted, and free from draughts on Nov. 30th. Judging from the crowds of people who blocked the aisles, there should be a nice balance in the hands of the treasurer. The birds staged were of more than average merit, and taken altogether we have no hesitation in saying that the show was an improvement on any show held in Macclesfield for many years past. Some of the classes did not fill very well; many of the exhibitors, we were told, could not get their birds in condition fit to show Mr. Bowyer judged and took the greatest pains with his work. The secretary and committee seemed to have done everything possible to make the show attractive and a success. A feature of the Macclesfield show, which some of the large show committees might copy, was the graceful palms, and other foliage plants.

WEST OF SCOTLAND NORWICH, ETC., ASSOCIATION.

The eighteenth annual show and competition of the West of Scotland Nor. and Bor. Fancy Can., Mule, Brit. and For. Bird Association was held November 30th in the City Templars' Hall, Ingram-street. The president is Mr. J. J. Manson, L.D.S., and vice-presidents Messrs. A. Buchanan and J. Laurie; sec. and treas., Mr. Geo. Smart. Judges, Mr. J. McLay (Kirkintilloch) and Mr. M. Craig (Glasgow). The weather conditions were most unfavourable, being very foggy and dark, which seemed to have its effect on many of the exhibits. This is the oldest Nor. etc., club in Scotland, and still teeming with life. The entries were sixty in excess of last year, or a total of 320. Norwich were a very good show. Borders and British birds were also a creditable turn out. The prizes were both numerous and valuable, and competition was keen. There were six handsome cups (a medal being given with each cup), and many other specials, about fifty in all, the result being a handsome entry. The Association is to be congratulated on their success. The hall is an excellent one for such an exhibition, being roomy and well lighted, and the birds were splendidly staged. Cup and medal winners were as follows:—Association Cup, for most points, Plainheads, Mr. Geo. Scaife; Association Cup and medal for most points in Crests and C.B., Mr. John Young, the same gentleman also winning the points cup in Border Fancies. Cup, most points in Mules and Hybrid, was won by Mr. A. Buchanan. Cup, by J. J. Manson, Esq., for most points in Brit. birds, was won by Mr. J. Muir; cup, given by J. J. Manson, for best young bird in hall, was won by Mr. S. McNaughton, with a Green Cres. cock, wing marked, a very typical bird. There was a good turn out of fanciers, and the general public, and had the weather been more favourable, no doubt there would have been a very large "gate." The courteous and obliging sec. Mr Smart, and his band of able helpers, had everything in the best of order, and such a successful result will no doubt spur the management on to greater efforts, if possible, for next year. The judges' awards were quite satisfactory, there being no grumbling heard. NOR. CL. YELL. HARMLESS TO OTHER ANIMALS

DARLINGTON.

The third grand annual exhibition in connection with the Darlington C.B.S., took place on Nov. 30th. The show was under the C.B.U. rules, and was held at the Corn Exchange, a place of a spacious character, well lighted, free from draughts, and in close proximity to the station, proving itself a most commendable place for such an occasion. Entries rolled up well, making a total of 660, thus creating a record, and giving the judges plenty to do to separate them, so keen was the competition in most of the classes. The schedule issued was a capital one, with a host of good cash specials, medals, etc. The show was opened by the Mayor of Darlington, Conn. Chas. Starmer, his speech being of a most encouraging nature. Mr. E. Brunskill replied in quite a masterly fashion, and one heard a rumour about, that for the next Borough election he deserved to be nominated as a prospective candidate. The staging was excellent, and every bird could be seen at a glance, great credit being due to those responsible for such neatness. A special word of praise must be tendered to Messrs. F. W. Reeks and C. Moss, who spent all Friday night in the show room, unpacking, and looking after the welfare of, the specimens that arrived. The committee of management consists of a band of very excellent workers, all doing their utmost to help on matters to a successful issue. The following are those who put their shoulders to the wheel to no mean purpose viz:—Messrs. R. Todd (chairman), H. C. Carter (treasurer), W. Allan, J. Brown, W. Carrol, W. Croshug, M. Corner, G. W. Cuthbertson, C. D. Cooper, W. Grainger, C. Grainger, H. Gregory, F. Horton, Hy. Holland, R. Hildon, C. Moss, Jas. Henderson, R. T. Hanson, J. Henderson, H. Heseldine, J. Keaton, J. Kirtley, H. Moss, J. Lumley, F. Reeks, T. Raine, A. Richmond, W. Rutherford, J. G. Stephenson, H. Todd, W. Underwood, H. Wilson and J. Wade. Many of these are well-known fanciers, practical and enthusiastic, and it is no wonder everything went off so smoothly and well. The worthy sec., Mr. E. Brunskill, is a most valuable asset, and Darlington are exceedingly lucky in having in their midst such a really capable secretary. He has every item at his finger tips, and is most obliging and courteous. No grass is allowed to grow under Mr. B.'s feet. Mr. P. M. Carter, acts as his "under study," and is also entitled to considerable praise for the capital assistance he renders. Yorkshires, the "Birds of Grace and Beauty," made a capital display, competition ruling very keen in most of the classes Norwich, too, provided a capital assortment, many of the birds being of superb quality. Borders, "the Bantams," added greatly to the attraction of the show. The British were one of the best collections we have seen this season, and many topping specimens were present. Members' classes contained a lot of very meritorious specimens, and one could have selected a goodly number, quite capable of doing well in the upper circles The judges were Messrs. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield) and J. Walsh (Blackburn), and their awards appeared to give entire satisfaction. Judging was over in good time, the cards displayed quickly and the management throughout superb. The Silver Medal, presented by Mr. A. Brown, for hottest fed, went to Messrs. R. Todd and Son.

ISLE OF THANET P.S.

This excellent and progressive Kentish society held its tenth annual exhibition on Nov 20 and 21, in the Hall-by-the-sea, Margate. They had a very nice fixture, and though entries ran small in one section, many birds of the right quality put in an appearance. Their was no question about the many visitors being well pleased with them, as they were the most popular part of the very fine and suitable hall. In the open Norwich classes, Mr. F. J. Gibbs had a walk-over, putting down some fine birds, which took practically all the spoil. Mrs. Bayly, Mrs Elliott, Miss Gwynn and Messrs. Taylor, Patterson, W. Jones, Holmes, Boncey and Thomas also had out some nice Plainheads. Crests and C.B.'s only mustered 7 in two classes, and Mr. Broad was in both with excellent specimens. Yorks. were also up but in small numbers, and here Messrs. Leaver, Gibbs, Shetler, and Reeves shared the prize-money with typical birds. Out of the entries in the Dark Mule class, four had to be "wrong classed" owing to having light feathers about them. The local classes were the brightest spot of all, for they proved that Kentish fanciers' can turn out good birds, well up to the required standard of their varieties. We were very pleased to see this. The birds of Mrs. Bayly, Miss Gwynne, and Messrs. L. J. Shaw, W. Jones, J. Brown, A. C. Morre, E. J. Kew, A. Hoybin, S. Boncey, and M. Marsh were highly meritorious The British and Foreign made a most attractive display. The chairman, Mr. J. Bing, and assistant sec., Mr. J. Brown, were very active, and rendered great help to the able hon. sec., Mr. W. J. Jones, who is a fine worker and a capable, well-liked official. The stewards, Messrs. H. J. Matthews, A. Moore, L. Shaw, and S. Boucey, did everything possible for the comfort of the birds, and the committee, a lot of good fanciers, also did their part well Mr. Robson judged.

CAMBRIDGE.

The 14th Annual Show of the Cambridgeshire A.S. was held in the Corn Exchange on Nov. 27th and 28th when the reputation of the Society was upheld in the highest degree. Mr. W. Driver, the hon. secretary acquitted himself well on this occasion as usual, and the arrangements were smoothly and successfully carried out. The Committee of management are fanciers of experience, and they rendered the most efficient and valuable aid to the secretary. The attendance was large, and the exhibits in the cage bird section were a source of great attraction. This was particularly so in the Foreign bird section, where Mr. Curtis, who judged, had a hard and delicate task. So meritorious were the exhibits, that they provoked the admiration of all parties. That astute show manager, Mr. Ramsden, of Crystal Palace fame, was on the alert to secure the patronage of Mrs. C. Anningson, whose exhibits were the feature of the show. This lady secured the Sectional Cup, with a most lovely Eclectus Parrot, charming in its glossiness and brilliant in colours. Mr. Stubbing's blue and yellow Macaw came in for a great share of admiration, and Messrs. DeVon and Co.'s splendid King Bird of Paradise was as lovely as it is rare in these Islands. Amongst the Foreign bird exhibits were the Leadbeater Cockatoo, the Cuba Parrot, the Shaft-tailed Whydah, the Long-tailed Whydah, Senegal Parrot, the Sugar bird, and many others, truly a glorious collection. Canaries came up well, and the Norwich and Crests were good. Mr. Palmer secured special for best Canary in the show, with a grand Crestbred; and the British were grand. Mr. W. Cook, sent a fine team, including a very fine Nutcracker, in splendid feather. Goldfinches were a teaser. One of the most beautiful Magpies we ever remember to have seen, at least, so far as condition and markings go, was shown by Mr. W. Linsey. Altogether, the show was a splendid success, and everything passed off satisfactorily. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged.

Open Classes.

NOR. YELL. (7): 1, Eaton, very nice body, neat head, very well up in polish; 2, 3, vhc, Brooks, a good team, leader fine in quality; 3rd, rare quality, little on the small side; hc, Tbring; c, Smith. TD., ETC. (8): 1, spl, 3, vbc, Brooks, grand shaped, short tail and flighted yell, good quality; 3, ticked buff; 2, Lees, grizzle-backed yell., lovely glossy feather, rather curled at throat; hc, Dillingham; c, Eaton. CRESTS (8): 1, Bloomfield, var. fairly massive crest of veiny feather, good body; 2, Hitchell, clear body, D.C. neat crest of nice length of feather, good body, well shown; 3, vbc, Brooks, former var. D. Crest, massive, very nice lay; bc, c, Shearman. C.B. (6): 1, spl, spl. best Canary in show, Palmer, var. wide entrance, massive back, skull, grand reverse, good one; 2, hc, Shearman, former green, rare head, massive; 3, Brooks, nice bead, dense feather; vbc, Bloomfield. A.O.V. (8): 1, spl, vhc, c, Brooks, former rich coloured, fine quality Cinn., well burnished; 2, 3, Shearman, former yell. cinn, latter a nice buff ditto, the yell. grand body; hc, Ingram. UNFLI. PARROTS, ETC. (10): 1, Cup for best For. in show, spl, res, vhc, Mrs. Anningson, the Cup winner being a splendid Eclectus shown in magnificent form, grand Cuba Parrot being reserve, and a pair of blue mountain Lorries reserve; 2, spl, Cook, tri-coloured Lorry; 3, spl, Chivers, Dufresnes Amazon; hc, Deighton; c, Miss Coates. A.O.S. SMALL (13): 1, spl, De Von and Co., a truly lovely King bird of Paradise, the colours of which were dazzling with gloss; this bird came in for much admiration; 2, spl, bc, c, Mrs. Anningson, former fine specimen of the Long-tailed Whydah; the vhc was a Ghosthead Lovebird; 3, spl., Cooper; a fine Shaft-tailed Whydah; vhc, spl., Cook.

Local Classes.

NOR. A. V. (6): 1, 2 spls., 2, Caudley; 3, spl., Hard; vhc, Ison; hc, Rogers; c, Bainbridge; a nice class for quality. LINNET, ETC. (10): 1, 2 spls, Argent, very fine Linnet, rich breast, feather like wax; 2, spl, Wesson, pretty, good coloured Redpoll; 3, vbc, spl, Smith; hc, Gifford; c, Edwards. GOLDIE, ETC. (12): 1, 2 spls, Williams, nailing good Goldfinch; 2 spls, Lambert, well marked, lustrous Chaffinch; 3, Chapman; vhc, Smith; hc, Ainger; c, Hinson. SELL. (7/6) (8): 1, Smith; 2, Bainbridge; 3, Linsey; vhc, Ison; hc, c, Edwards. FOR. A.V. (13): The whole of the prizes and honours, including 5 specials, falling to Mrs. Anningson, with a Golden-fronted Fruit Sucker, a Redsided Eclectus Parrot, a Senegal Parrot, a green glossy Starling, pair Pekin Robins, and a King Parrot—a wonderful collection from one exhibitor.

The Breeding and Exhibiting of Border Fancy Canaries.

By JAMES BULFIELD.

For those wishing to commence Canary breeding both as a pastime and for exhibition, the Border Fancy Canary offers exceptional facilities. The cost of these birds is very low, although it is not the least beautiful and interesting of the many different varieties. The chief point is its smallness, combined with style and beauty of carriage, the best specimens looking as though moulded from wax. They can be had both clear and marked, green and cinnamon. If not bred clear they are, as a rule, bred for even-marks; it is not so difficult to breed the former as the marks. The chief point is to keep to type and quality of feather, but in breeding marks there is more scope for work.

Means and Methods of Mating.

A knowledge of how the birds have been bred is very useful. The Border Fancy is one of the most prolific breeders in the world, thus counteracting the cheapness in price when selling surplus stock.

To commence a strain of this variety, obtain two or three pairs of a reliable breeder. If possible, the birds should be marked on the eyes and wings only, known as stationary marks. These will cost a bit more than if the birds were ordinary marked, but it will prove more satisfactory in the end In pairing, mate a bird marked on both eyes to one marked on both wings, or one marked on one eye to a bird marked on the opposite eye and both wings. There are other ways of mating, but this will give some idea of what is required.

In the second year the young from one pair may be mated to the young from the other pair, the markings being again regulated as far as possible, the birds to be yellow and buff respectively. Cinnamon blood is used in this variety, as in others, and is very useful at times, especially in the breeding of even-marks. A bird with a faulty wing carriage should be mated to one that is extra good in wing carriage. Similarly a bird with a flat head should be mated to one with a full round head. All faults as well as good qualities must be taken into consideration, so as to eradicate as far as possible such faults in the young birds. Colour feeding is not necessary with this breed, the natural beauty of which is one of its chief characteristics, and colour feeding does not suit it.

In feeding, the birds may have a staple diet of Canary seed, with a pinch of German rape seed every second day. In winter a piece of ripe apple may be placed between the wires of the cage twice a week. In summer the apple may be replaced by a bit of dandelion or a little lettuce or watercress. The cage or cages must be cleaned out once a week at least, or trouble in the shape of some kind of disease is likely to ensue.

Incubation, Before and After.

If the weather is suitable, the birds may be paired up by about the first week in April if in a cold room, or if in the kitchen or a warm room, about a fortnight earlier. A week or so before pairing, the birds may be given a half teaspoonful of egg food every second day until the hen has laid; the food must be stopped until the day before the young are due to hatch, plain Canary seed only being given during incubation, which lasts for 13 or 14 days. A cage not less than 20 inches long and 18 inches high should be used, but if larger so much the better for the birds.

On no account must the birds be paired before they are in condition, which they show by the cocks rushing about the cage and breaking into song every few minutes, and by the hens flapping their wings, putting their heads out of the water holes,and calling to the cocks. If paired when out of condition the result will most likely be a loss of time and temper, which might have been avoided with a little patience in getting the birds into form.

Some breeders pair one cock with two or more hens, but beginners will do much better if they keep to one cock and one hen until they have gained some experience. No hard and fast rule can be laid down for each individual to follow, some hens doing much better if left to hatch and rear the young by themselves, while others will sooner let the young starve than go without food themselves; in such cases the cock bird is left to assist.

Birds, like human beings, have their fads and fancies, which can only be found out by observation. Some hens are very restless when sitting, and you can hardly get near them without their leaving the nest. But with others you can do almost what you like, and they will take no particular notice. When the hen is restless a piece of cardboard on the front of the cage where the nest hangs usually proves useful, making the place more private; the bird cannot then see you very much.

Practical experience is the best teacher in bird management, as in other things. When the birds have been paired up a week, if all is well, you may look out for the first egg; sometimes, however, the birds take longer, especially if paired up early, when the weather is unsuitable, or when the birds are not quite ready. If on the morning you expect a hen to lay, you find her all doubled up and breathing hard, you may conclude that she is egg-bound, and must be taken in hand at once. Catch the bird gently and hold her over a jug of boiling water, so that the steam penetrates all over the abdomen: hold her thus for five minutes or so, then replace in the nest. She will then, in all probability, lay the egg. A drop of castor oil in the beak will greatly assist, and a pinch of inga seed once a week during the winter is a good preventative.

Tending the Young Birds.

When the birds are paired, supply a piece of cuttle fish bone for the formation of the egg shell, and thus prevent the laying of soft-shelled eggs. Egg food must be supplied to the parent birds as from the day before the young are due to hatch; it is best to use the yolk only for the first three days, after which the white may be used. The egg must be chopped very fine or passed through a piece of perforated zinc, then mixed with half its weight in powdered biscuit.

The young birds leave the nest when about three weeks old, can usually feed themselves with egg food when about four weeks old, and can crack Canary seed when about six weeks old. When they are able to eat egg food they should be removed to another cage, and supplied with egg food fresh three times each day. A pot of crushed hemp and Canary seed should also be placed inside the cage, as an inducement for them to eat seed, after which they may be gradually changed on to Canary and rape seed. Egg should be supplied only occasionally until the moulting season commences, at about the end of July.

Selection of Birds for the Show Bench.

Presuming you have bred a good few youngsters, the next thing is to go over them and see which are most likely to make good show birds. This brings us to the standard or points which a bird must possess to enable it to compete successfully on the show bench

There must be no angles on a good Border, the head and chest must be nicely rounded, but not so prominent as those of the Norwich. It should have a jaunty and stylish appearance, be good in feather and carriage, ever on the alert, and full of life and vivacity. When in health and condition they are truly a charming picture, and invariably capture the heart of the bird-lover.

Having selected a few of the youngsters, place them one or two in a cage and take special care of them during the moult. They are not so likely to get damaged in this way, so much as they would be if caged in lots together. A bath on warm days will greatly assist the moult; it may be given at any other time when the weather is suitable. A little crushed linseed mixed with the egg food during the moult will help to put gloss on the feathers.

BEGINNERS READ THE ANNUAL.

The Cage Bird Traffic in the United States.

By HENRY OLDYS (Assistant, Biological Survey, U.S.A.)

What's in a Name?

Most of the cage-birds from Africa, which are brought to London, Liverpool, Marseilles, Bordeaux, and other European ports in immense numbers, are secured for beauty of plumage, not song. The African Weavers, 994 of which were imported during the year, in addition to attractive colouring, offer an interesting exhibition of their skill in the art that has given them their name. At nesting time, if furnished with worsted or other suitable material, they will weave this in and out of the wires of their cages, making neat and compact examples of their handiwork. Bishops and Madagascar Weavers are brilliant red and black in their colouring, Cut-throats have a band of red across the throat, from which is derived the name and Whydah birds (incorrectly called "widow" birds) have extremely long tails. The group furnishes an instance in which one family contains both Bishops and Cut-throats. A Napoleon also figures among its members, and all are frequently associated with Japanese Nuns and Brazilian Cardinals.

Waxbills numbered 555 in the year's importations. These include the dainty little Cordon Bleu, or Crimson-eared Waxbill, various species of Silverbills, and several other kinds. The Violet-eared Waxbill, a bird of radiant, prismatic beauty, is brought to England but has apparently not yet come to the United States. The tiny Zebra Finches, easy to keep and breeding readily in captivity, are favourites with the bird-keeping public, 591 coming in during the year. African Siskins are also somewhat popular, and a small but increasing number of Edel-singers, or African Gray-singers (the Grey Singing Finch.—Ed.), one of the few African species that have a pleasing song, are imported annually.

African birds generally bring 1 dol. 50 cents a pair at wholesale. Most of them have light, unmusical, but not disagreeable, notes, and being bright and active, give life to room or aviary where they are confined. While the breeding time of most of them is during our winter (the seasons being reversed south of the equator), many of the little immigrants adapt themselves readily to the changed conditions and breed in the summer of the North Temperate Zone.

A Charmer from Australia.

Ordinary Australian birds also sell well for 1 dol. 50 cents a pair wholesale. Of these, apart from Shell Parrakeets, Diamond Sparrows are imported in the largest numbers, the year's supply being 332. Australia is notable, however, for its charming Lady Gould Finches, which, perhaps, reach the highest point of beauty and elegance attained by any of the smaller cage-birds of the world. (The bird illustrated under this name is that known to us as the Black-headed Gouldian.—Ed., "C.B.") Few are sold in this country, possibly because of their high price—9 dols. to 10 dols. a pair at wholesale—and because they are difficult to keep (an English fancier says of them that they suffer all the ills that beset other cage-birds, and several special ones of their own). They are highly prized in England where they have been bred a number of times. The main reason for their unusual mortality seems to be improper treatment. Because they come from the warm climate of Australia, they are usually kept where they have plenty of sunlight. As a matter of fact, however, as recently pointed out by a writer in "Bird Notes," they inhabit dense scrub, and in their natural habitat avoid the direct rays of the sun. To place them in a small cage in the sunlight is a very effective method of destroying them. Lady Gould Finches are attractive in their ways as well as in appearance. They tame readily, are not pugnacious with cage mates, and exhibit many individualities of disposition. They have a very interesting little dance, that sometimes forms part of their courtship.

Omitting Parrots, Gray Cardinals are the principal cage-birds imported from South America. In England these vie in favour with our own Cardinal, from which they differ, being gray in colour, with no red exeepting about the head. During the last fiscal year we imported 455, which were retailed at 3 dols. 50 cents each. A number of different species of small birds are annually brought from Mexico and Cuba, but none in important numbers except Tomeguinos, known also as Grasquits or Melodious Cuban Finches and Olive Cuban Finches, according to species. These sell for 1 dol. 50 cents a pair wholesale, and 665 entered during the year.

Birds Bred in Captivity.

In Europe, as has been stated, great interest is manifested in breeding cage-birds. This interest attaches to the propagation, not only of rare birds, but of many species that are commonly found in aviaries. There is a great difference in the ease with which birds may be bred in captivity. Some, such as Shell Parrakeets, Zebra Finches, Java Sparrows, Strawberry Finches, and our own Bluebirds and Indigo-birds, breed readily and their young can be raised without much difficulty. But some of the Parrots and small cage-birds refuse to mate, others will not sit on their eggs, and others yet neglect their young. To breed such species requires much patience and ingenuity, and success is valued accordingly.

In the United States where bird fanciers are few and lack association, there is not the same general interest in the breeding of captive birds. Few Oriental birds other than Java Sparrows, and but few of the small cage-birds from Africa and Australia, have been successfully bred in the United States. Among the more important birds that have been reared in this country are the Canary, Shell Parrakeet, Black-crested Mina, All-green Parrakeet, Gray Parrakeet, Cockateel, Graceful Ground-Dove, Barred-shoulder Dove, Zebra Finch, white Java Sparrow, gray Java Sparrow, Cut-throat Finch, and Saffron Finch Some Hybrids have been produced by breeding Canaries with Goldfinches, Linnets, and other birds, thus securing well-known and greatly valued Mules.

Exhortation to American Enterprise.

The large and rapidly growing demand for Canaries and other cage-birds that has sprung up in the United States, and that is now satisfied by importations from abroad, suggests the possibility of establishing the industry of raising birds for market on this side of the Atlantic. It is more than likely that interest in the keeping of cage-birds will continue to spread, and that its growth will result in the development of societies, periodicals, annual shows, and other features that mark its advance in Europe. Breeding Canaries for market brings, as has been shown, several hundred thousand dollars annually to the peasants of the Hartz Mountains of Germany; Canaries of fancy shapes that command high prices are regularly bred in England, Scotland, Belgium, and other countries; and it is important to note that in nearly every instance the pursuit is carried on as an adjunct to some other occupation. There is no reason why the American market should not be supplied by American breeders. The need already exists; imported birds are not so well adapted to our climate as those raised here, and home production would obviate the large losses incident to the ocean voyage.

Difficulties to be Met.

Many difficulties must be met. Captive birds are subject to numerous diseases and, under the most favourable circumstances, require careful treatment. Attention to diet is important, particularly in the case of soft-billed birds, whose food is chiefly insects. Questions of suitable temperature for aviaries, of securing sufficient open-air exercise without undue exposure, of preventing destruction of birds or their eggs by cage mates, of inducing birds to breed, and many other problems constantly tax the patience and skill of the aviculturist; and owing to climatic differences between Europe and America many of these questions would doubtless have to be settled anew.

But American ingenuity and energy should be able to meet and overcome all obstacles and establish the business on a paying basis. Due weight should be given the fact that the experiment requires little capital. It can easily be started at small expense and extended only as profits justify extension. The field is a promising one. The success attending cage-bird breeding in Europe, the great demand for birds as pets in this country revealed by our large importations, the superior value of those bred in America, and the facility with which the business can be established and maintained offer strong inducements to American enterprise.

Foreign Cage-Birds at Home.

The most familiar to home bird-lovers of all Indian "Softbills" is, however, the Liothrix or Pekin Robin, and when I first visited his haunts in the Himalayas—it was at Darjeeling—it was not long before I heard the pretty five-noted call which betrayed his presence. Judging by the frequency of the sound, the birds were very common, but they are much more likely to be heard than seen, being of a retiring nature, much like our Hedge Sparrow; while their colour, gay as it looks in a cage, is well adapted for concealment. Every now and then, however, one of the pretty birds would show itself in a tree, or flit to a roadside fence, so that the beauty of its coral bill and orange-streaked wings could be well observed; but, on the whole, the species cannot be called a conspicuous one, even where it is numerous.

Finches, with the exception of the common House Sparrow, are not very noticeable members of bird society in India. Once only did I see the Avadavat in the wild state, when I saw two cock birds in some long grass, far away from any habitation. Yet, in the Tiretta Bazaar, the bird market of Calcutta, may constantly be seen scores of the little red, white-dotted fellows and their brown mates, for numbers are captured for sale. So with the other little Finches. I once observed a few of the little drab Indian Silver-bills coming down to drink at a singularly filthy little pond, and I seem to recollect once coming across the black-headed Mannikin. With the spangle-breasted Nutmeg-bird, or Spice-bird, I met more frequently. Some nested in the grounds of the Forest School at Dehra Dun, in which district I met with the other Finches I have mentioned.—FRANK FINN, F.Z.S., etc., in "Ornithological Oddities."

Mannikin Brevities.

Some Observations on a Well-known Group of Foreign Birds.

By "MUNIA."

Although generally common and well known to all keepers of foreign birds, it is not so commonly known how many or what birds belong to the Mannikin class, over and above the few species bearing that familiar term as a portion of their common name. Probably very few bird keepers would, if asked to make a list of Mannikins, include such apparently dissimilar birds as the Java Sparrow and the Nutmeg Finch. Yet both species properly belong to that class.

The Pert and Lively Java Sparrow.

Of course, it goes without saying this does not necessarily mean that all these species should be classified together from an exhibition point of view, and, in fact, there are not wanting authorities who consider that the Java Sparrow would be better associated with the Weaver birds. That he differs from the typical Mannikin in being a more pert and lively creature, and in having slightly more pretension to a song, must be admitted, but, even so, a Java can be a dull and listless bird at times. That is, I have known individual specimens to be habitually dull and morose, quite apart from any question of health or condition.

Such specimens as I have in mind appear to be more deeply imbued with the true Mannikin characteristics than the general run of Javas—characteristics which may be summed up briefly in the observation that their sole interests in life are divided between a well-filled seed box and a favourite perch whereon to digest, meditate, and grow fat. Fortunately these are exceptions.

Both the Grey and the White Java are too well known to need any description at all. The uncultured Grey is in all respects preferable to the White variety—at least, such is my humble opinion—being more distinctive and attractive in appearance, and of rather more lively habit. But when one desires to attempt breeding with the birds, a proportion of white birds is almost essential to success.

The Bengalee is also a purely domestic variety, and is generally believed to be a fertile Hybrid between a member of this family and a Grassfinch—the Striated Finch and the Indian Silverbill.

A Lengthy Family Tree.

The Mannikins which are distinguished by the term are the Two-coloured, Three-coloured, White-headed, Black-headed, Bronze, and the Magpie. Of these, the Bronze and the Black-headed are probably the most common, the White-headed is far less freely imported, whilst the two-coloured species is somewhat of a rarity.

The Bib Finch, known also as the Dwarf Finch and African Parson Finch is a Mannikin, and has been bred in this country in an outdoor aviary. Its "bib" is a patch of black of bib-like shape on the throat. It is a more pleasing bird than the majority of the true Mannikins.

Another of the family is the Nutmeg Finch, now frequently known as the Spice Bird, so-called from a fancied general resemblance of its plumage to the spice of that name. Its pretensions to beauty are not of a high order, and its habits as a cage bird in my experience, are of the dullest kind. Its song is little more than a low vibrating hum, and is quite inaudible to some ears, though easily caught by others.

The Striated Finch is a Mannikin, and one too which has little interest beyond the fact that it is supposed to be one of the progenitors of the Bengalee. In colour it is of a smoky-brown of varying depths. It is, however, not a very common species in the market.

The Sharp-tailed Finch has many points of resemblance to the last-named, but is more of a ruddy tone of brown generally. It is always ready to attempt breeding, but its efforts very often end in failure. The greatest success seems to be found when it is bred with the Bengalee, which it also greatly resembles in its vocal inabilities, if I may coin a term which aptly applies to all the members of the Mannikin tribe.

The Chestnut-breasted Finch may form a fitting conclusion to the list of Mannikins. It inhabits Australia, and thus differs in habits from the majority of Mannikins, which are mostly natives of India, Africa, and adjacent islands. It is also rather more brightly coloured, and its song more powerful than is that of the typical Mannikins. In captivity it is very free with making attempts to breed, which are by no means always successful. But they doubtless add to its interest in captivity as being the chief cause of its pretty and curious dances and love-songs to its mate.

VARIATIONS IN BIRDS.

By FRANK FINN, B.A., F.Z.S.

Cause of Variation.

It naturally occurs to everyone to ask what is the cause of the appearance of variations, and so far the only answer to this is simply that we do not know. What causes variations is, in fact, now the chief problem of biological science. Fanciers had proved, long before the evolution theory was worked out by Darwin, that once you have got your variations, and these happen to be hereditary, you can modify form and colour to an enormous extent, but how they are produced in the first place is a real mystery of nature. There would, however, seem to be a close connection between some forms of variation and local constitutional disturbance. The fact that pale colours appear if a bird, through advancing age or indisposition is in low condition during the moult, is an indication of this, and in this connection it may be observed that light colour-varieties are often found to be weaker in constitution and softer in feather than the normal types. It may here be asked, how, in this case (supposing white forms to come, as appears to have always been the case, from coloured ancestors), white species of birds have arisen at all? But in answer to this, I must point out that it is quite possible for an individual or species to be weak in one respect and strong in another. There is a case on record of a pied cock Blackbird which was observed in the wild state to get continually whiter, and he ultimately died from natural causes, so that his constitution could not have been good. At the same time he was the champion fighter of the neighbourhood, so that if a hen Blackbird wanted a mate it had to be this bird or none at all. Thus if his colour had been hereditary, he would have been the founder of a pied strain. It is rather significant that the very colours indicative of constitutional disturbance, such as white and black in brown birds, and yellow in green birds, should also be those so often constituting an ornamental appearance in the males. It looks as if masculine beauty were acquired at some cost constitutionally, just as among ourselves the golden hair and rosy cheeks of the typical beauty do not necessarily mean a good constitution.

There is evidence that in some cases the white colouration is becoming common in nature. In some wild species of Herons which frequent the sea-shore, white varieties are quite common, and I may here recall to you the fact that there are more species among the Herons constantly white than in any other family of birds. Here, then, the white varieties, whether by the force of heredity or by being more courageous or more cunning than their neighbours, have evidently managed to establish themselves permanently. I may mention that some of the above variable Herons are white when young and grey when adult.

Of course there is also the possibility of white or pied birds being more attractive to the hens than those of the ordinary colour, but there is at present so little evidence that the preferences of hen birds have anything to do with the male's appearance that we cannot invoke the aid of sexual selection in explanation of colour peculiarities with the same confidence as we can natural selection or the force of prepotent heredity.

ILLUSTRATED IDEAS

Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

A CUTTLEFISH HOLDER.

Sent by J. Pepper, 23, Mill Street, Coventry.

The above sketches show a cuttlefish-bone holder which I use and find very useful. It is simple to make, only requiring a hole to be drilled through the perch, and the wire bent through it as seen in illustration. The advantage of this holder is that, being connected with the perch, it is always easy of access to the birds. It can also be used for apple or anything of like nature. Again, when one side of the cuttle bone is eaten away, it can be turned round.—J. PEPPER.

No. 160.

A SAFETY SAND TRAY.

Sent by Charles T. Draper, 22, Printing Office Street, Doncaster, Yorks.

This is an idea suitable for a small aviary or flight or other cage. By its means you are enabled to have a deep sand-tray without danger of losing your birds through the opening whilst cleaning out. Fig. 1 is a sketch of a cage-bottom fitted with this idea A, B, and C are three bars of wood, ¼in. thick, nailed on to the bottom of the cage. and D and E are two other pieces of the same thickness fixed between the outside ends of these. The back of the tray C. Fig 2, is first cut one inch broader than is really required. It is then marked out as in Safety Sand Drawer.

Fig. III., the pieces F, G, H being slightly broader and deeper than the bars in Fig. I. The drawer may now be fitted together (as in Fig. 2), the remaining extra ½in. in the back projecting over the sides. The piece in the side marked A, B, should not be permanently fixed in, but should be fixed on swivels, which allow it to turn upwards, leaving an opening through which the sand may be scraped when cleaning. By this method the drawer will not come right out, but the projections on the back will catch on D, E, underneath, and on the wire frame above.—C. T. DRAPER.

OUR FRONTISPIECE.

A Well-known West Country King Parrakeet.

The King Parrakeet depicted on our front page this week is the property of that well-known West-country foreign-bird enthusiast, Mr. William Young, of Taw Vale, Barnstaple. The owner informs us that he has had the bird six years, and that in five seasons he has shown it at Barnstaple Show, winning 1902 first and special, 1904 second, 1905 second, 1906 first and two specials, 1907 first and two specials—the second special being for the best exhibit in all the foreign-bird classes. Mr. Young adds: "He is a grand large bird, 15 inches in length, and has a good broad tail. His plumage is most beautiful, the delicate pale green bar on the wings being strongly marked (this is rarely shown in coloured plates of "His Majesty"). He is in tip-top condition. The 'King' is well described by Mr. H. S. Davies in your recent well-got-up supplement."

WILD BIRD LIFE.

Birds and Lighthouses.

It is supposed that the change of means of lighting our many lighthouses has caused more damage to migratory birds than formerly. The old system of a steady light might have attracted a great number of birds, but, at the same time, it acted as a beacon to direct them to the shore, whereas the quick flash so much in use now has attracted fewer birds. But more of them have been killed by dashing themselves against the lantern, in consequence of the blinding nature of the powerful electric light.

The Bearded Tit.

The beautiful Bearded Tit is still a breeding species with us, and long may he remain so. But, as an instance of the risk these rarer birds run, I was recently informed of an expedition by two so-called sportsmen in search of these little beauties, and also of their return quite unsuccessful. They loudly regretted that the birds had disappeared before they had had a chance of adding them to their collection. No doubt collectors of skins and eggs are more to blame for the extermination of many of our rarer birds than ordinary bird-nesters and genuine sportsmen.

Beautiful "Bobbie."

The Robin is beautiful anywhere, but I like to see him best in the woods, where his ruddy breast is in harmony with the brown and yellow tints of the autumn leaves. Such pictures will be plentiful presently, for in a few weeks the foliage will change, and the bird one can find in the woods at any time between autumn and spring, for all the Robins do not seek the homestead during winter's reign. Many Robins no doubt emigrate across the seas, for where some half dozen of them are round the building now, it will not be long before they have diminished to one, or possibly two.

Wild Birds' Habits.

As winter advances wild birds draw near to human habitations, for although wild creatures live principally in the woods and fields, and feed from Nature's store, yet when hard times come they fly to man for food and protection; not only the small Buntings and Finches, but even the larger Jackdaws, Jays, and the cunning Magpies; the last mentioned forages through the orchard or round the outlying buildings, and will not refuse offal of any kind, generally plentiful enough in such places. At times like this they often pounce upon some unlucky mouse or Sparrow, thus doing the farmer and gamekeeper a good turn, running the risk of a charge of shot from the ever too ready gun.

The Diminishing Magpie.

A friend once told me that he knew of a wood where nearly a hundred Magpies roosted nightly; such a sight must be well worth a visit. At one time these beautiful birds were extremely common in Ireland, and big flocks could be seen retiring to their roosting sites. No doubt persecution has somewhat reduced their numbers: it is only in favoured localities in England that one is able to occasionally catch sight of one.

A Note on the Gull.

It is remarkable the difference there is in the behaviour of birds under different conditions. The Herring Gull, for instance, when out at sea, will fly round and round a boat within almost arm's length of the occupants, and will occasionally settle upon the water quite near. On the other hand, when roaming along the beach, and low-lying mud flats, they are wary and difficult to approach, and when flying inland or up some tidal river they are very careful to keep well out of gunshot; perhaps the birds feel that their range of vision is somewhat limited, and that objects of the riverside and inland are hardly so familiar to them as the small boat upon the open waters.

Birds of One Egg.

In reply to an enquirer, in the article you mention the naturalist may have been writing of the sea birds of a certain district, when he names the Gannet, Guillemout, and Razorbill, as being three of our British birds laying a single egg. We can add to these the Puffin, Manx Shearwater, Fork-tailed Stormy and Fulmar Petrels. There may be others, but these are all that occur to us just now. These are all British breeding species, although somewhat local. The Fork-tailed Petrel is one of our rarer birds. Its breeding places are on the western coast of Scotland, the Island of St. Kilda being its chief stronghold. It is here that this bird was first discovered as a breeding species.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

MEDICINES.

ESSENCE OF COAL TAR.

for colds and wheezing in cage birds. To obtain the genuine Essence, send 4d. in stamps for sample bottle, sent post free.—Address, Errington's, XL Red Feed Stores, Bradford.

BRONCHORINE, REG. 287,755.

IDEAL lung tonic, for cago birds, especially during the coming season of fogs and winter. Bronchorine at Palace Show. "A lady director was at my stall and spoke well of Bronchorine. She says the advertisement you print of her was correct, and endorsed it by buying a bottle, of which there was a great sale." R. A. Newley, Stockwell Green. 9d., 1/6, 3/-.—Original testimonials, etc., apply Crawley, 112, Radford Boulevard, Nottingham.

BURROW'S LUNG TONIC.

Every man to his trade: Having worked with chemicals all my life, and being a well-known breeder and exhibitor myself, I have found this tonic successful in saving the life of many of our feather pets. It has had public test, and is used and recommended by all our leading fanciers for curing cold, wheezing, loss of voice, and asthma. It has been successful where others have failed. No bird room is complete without this wonderful tonic. Sent post free to any address, 7½d. and 1/- bottle; awarded two gold medals and five diplomns Crystal Palace.—Note address, Geo. Burrows, 105, Judd-st., Euston-rd., London, W.C.

AVISINE.

The only safe and sure remedy for pulmonary diseases of birds. Avisine will not hurt the most delicate bird constitution, and contains no parcegorie, ipecacuanha, squills, camphor, ammonia, tar, tolu, eucalyptus, nor opium; drugs that are almost non-effective, and more or less injurious. Avisine allays inflammation, removes phlegm, and heals the bronchial tubes and lungs, while at the same time it tones up the system of the bird. We are prepared to prove that there is no bird medicine on the market, whose ingredients are so calculated to restore ailing birds to health. In bottles, 6d., 1/-, 2/6, and 5/-, with special directions as to administration and dietary, postage extra.—Avisine Co., 8, St. George's Terrace, William.

MR. ENOCH POWERS.

Has a fresh arrival this season of the second consignment of 200 of the Giant Siberian cock Goldfinches, these birds arrived on the 30th November, and are all in grand health and the pink of condition, they are the largest that have ever been imported into this country, price 4/6 each, or £1 8s. per stick of seven. Please note, "These are genuine Siberians, not common Russians." I only send out Siberian cock Goldfinches, not Russian, in the place of Siberian. Why pay 6/6 and 7/6 when you can get them straight from the importer at 4/6? If birds do not turn out satisfactory, they can be returned at once. I have also just received 100 of the finest singing Bohemian Rollers, these birds have various magnificent changes of song, with the true waterbubble note. I offer them at 6/0 each, or buying a stick of seven, 6/- each. With the above consignment I have received a few Siberian cock Linnets, price 1/6 each, also a few Siberian cock Greenfinches, price 1/6 each, also a few Siberian cock Greenfinches, price 1/6 each, and 10 pet German hen Bullfinches for muling, and warrauted to breed, only 4/- each. St. Andreasberg Rollers, 5/0 each or £1 16s. 9d. per stick of seven. Hartz Mountain Roller cocks, in full song, 5/- each, or 4/6 by taking a stick of seven. The real Bohemian hens, a limited number, 2/6 each, or 24/- a dozen. St. Andreasberg hens, 1/6 each, or 14/- a dozen; Hartz hens, 11/- dozen. Wanted at once for export, the largest possible quantity of Norwich and Yorkshire Canaries, first-class only, best price given. My motto is "Ready cash, no credit."

The One and Only Address:

ESTABLISHED A CENTURY.

have an idea that they cannot obtain good value from a dealer, but to convince them that this is not so, I ask them to send to me for anything advertised below on approval at my risk, and if it fails to prove entirely satisfactory, all they have to do is to return it, and I at once refund money in full. This is a plain, straightforward offer that is always strictly adhered to by me. Grand large Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, in perfect health and condition, and properly on hard seed, 2/- each, three 5/-. Few grand specimens for show or muling, and guaranteed now in full song, 3/-, 4/-, and 5/- each. Splendid large cock Brown Linnets, every one guaranteed red-breasted, 9d. each, three 2/-, six 3/6, or 5/- dozen. Special exhibition specimens, warranted in song, 1/6 each, three 4/-. Large cock Bullfinches, 1/6 and 2/- each; exhibition specimens, 3/- each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- each; few extra large rich-coloured hens, 1/6 each. Cock Larks, three 1/6, six 2/6, or 4/- dozen; specially selected cocks, guaranteed in song, 1/6 each. Cock Greenfinches, three 1/-, six 1/6. Cock Chaffinches, three 1/6, six 2/6, or 4/- dozen. Few Yellow cock Greenfinches, for exhibition, 1/- each. Grand lot Snow Buntings, all in full plumage, steady, and well on seed, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 3/6, or 6/- dozen; few extra special large cocks, almost white, well marked and ready for immediate exhibition, 2/6 each. Arrived on 11th inst., second consignment of the genuine Siberian cock Goldfinches, in superb condition, price 4/6 each; 28/- stick of seven. Few exhibition cocks, 7/6 and 10/- each. These Siberian Goldfinches are imported direct by me in single wicker cages, and must not be confused with the ordinary Russian birds now being sold as Siberians. I am the only direct importer in the provinces, and customers may rest assured that no dealer or advertiser is allowed to sort them over before being offered to the public. Handsome two-year-old white-legged English cock Goldfinch, guaranteed has bred Mules and in full song, 7/6. Twice cage-moulted clear-cut cheveral cock Goldfinch muler, in full song, and feeds from finger, 12/6. Extra large Pea-throated cock, grandly built with extra good show points, 6/-. BIRD CATCHERS.

Buy from Maker, and get best value obtainable; it would never pay me to send out cheap and blown together goods. I have been in the trade for years, and still sell more nets than all other so-called makers combined. Every article is sent out on approval; cash or deposit system; if not thoroughly satisfied return them and your money will be refunded; not a single article has been returned this season, but testimonials come in, by every post, although I seldom publish them. Here is one selected from scores, guaranteed unsolicited:—"Great Baddow, Chelmsford, Essex. Dear Sir,—Please send me a pair Clapnets, as per CAGE BIRDS, 18ft. by 4½ft.; amount enclosed. I had a pair of a Birmingham man which were practically useless.—Yours truly, S. G. Crisp." You can't afford to keep buying, but take my advice and buy a genuine article. MATTHEWS, LINNET KING.

Gentlemen, if you want a first-class winner or a winning team give my special birds a trial. I guarantee them the best strain in England, and have been selected by a practical man that understands exactly what you want. I am supplying winners every week from my valuable large stock, and my special birds are called by my customers real deck-sweepers. You can win when you wish with them. If you want to win at your show, send to me at once. Don't keep middle-raters, which is only expense without results, when you can get winners from me at once at working men's prices. Let me fit you up with the finest winning team ever advertised at such prices as I supply all the leading exhibitors in England. They all send to me when they want a winner, as they know my special birds are selected from hundreds of dozens which I sell every week. All my selected birds have been caged months, and are in perfect show condition. I keep every variety of British. Inspection invited to the largest aviaries in England. I keep nothing but the best. Big, fine, healthy Linnets, with nutbrown backs, beautifully pencilled, Norwich type, 1/6 and 2/-. A few giant massive Linnets, beautifully pencilled, ready to win in the keenest competition, 3/- each; also the finest lot of fierce singing Linnets in England, specially trained under my old noted Cheshire Champions, in full song; sacrifice, 2/-; with beautiful singing cage, packet of special seed, instructions, 3/- lot; best value ever offered: worth double; over 500 in stock. Goldfinches. Real Peartree Goldfinches, the largest and best you can possibly get, with good deep square scarlet blazes, extra well buttoned and mooned, beautifully tanned, 2/6 and 3/-. Also a few giants, massive in size, with enormous deep square scarlet blaze; extra special birds, sure winners, 4/6 and 5/- each; bargains. These special birds are the best you can possibly get. Bullfinches. Bullfinches with blood-red breast, broad black cap, good wing bars, win anywhere, as they are in perfect show condition, 3/- each. Large massive hen Bullfinches for muling, 1/- each. Large Yellow Giant Greenfinches, as large as Thrushes, ready for showing, steady: cocks, 1/6; hen, 6d. Large mealy Redpolls, good deep bibs, well laced, 1/6 each; splendid full-coloured Chaffinches, 1/-. All birds sent out exactly as described on seven full days' approval. Others are following me, so beware of worthless imitations, as you get the first preference from me. Read what others say:—

"76, Sherwood-street, Annesley, Woodhouse, Nottingham.—Sir,—The bird arrived safe. I am really surprised to see he is so steady. I could not have believed it with a Linnet. I am highly satisfied. From Mr. Revell, to the Real Linnet King." "17, Bellfield-terrace, Coalbourne.—Sir,—The Peartree Goldfinch arrived quite safe; it is a grand bird. Well pleased with it. I shall send for more, as it is the best Goldfinch I have ever got for the money. I must thank you for your fair, honest dealings. From John Stewart to Matthews, Bird Catcher." Gentlemen, could fairer terms be offered? See your back numbers of CAGE BIRDS for results, so send direct to the old-established firm. Plenty in stock; all on seven days' approval; cash or CAGE BIRDS deposit system.—Matthews, Bird Catcher, 44, George-st., Hyde, Cheshire.

HARRY ALLEN,
THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING.

Champion of all champions, 1st and 2nd again this week. Patronised by all the leading exhibitors, mule breeders, and contest singers. I have the finest British in England, bar none; come and see them for yourselves; I have hundreds of testimonials to look through, from all the leading fanciers, also the Champion Singing Linnet in the World, worth coming hundreds of miles to hear. I have supplied more winners than any three dealers; please beware of spurious imitations, they will not give you satisfaction; mine never fail to please. I have, without doubt, the finest cock Linnets in England, no little rubbish; big, fine cock Linnets, well pencilled, Norwich type, 1/6 each, extra picked birds, very tame, 2/- and 2/6 each. I have a few extraordinary fine show specimens, stands well, shows white on wing, good, nutty brown, and impossible to get larger, 3/- and 3/6 each, guaranteed in the best of health. Cock Linnets, singing beautifully in singing cage, a packet of my special mixture and instructions how to feed, 3/6 the lot. These birds are being taught by my Champion, which I refused £15 for; none genuine but mine; look out for imitations. House-moulted cock Linnets ready for contest, will sing anywhere, all with contest cage, 7/6, 10/6, 12/6 and upwards, to £5, plenty in stock, all equal to German Rollers. Cock Bullfinches, real beauties, lovely crest colour, all in capital feather, 3/- each; hens, sure mulers, 1/6 each; Cock Larks, nicely on song, 1/- each, 3 for 2/6; Giant Greenfinches, can win in good class, 1/6; beautiful Redpolls, 1/- each. I have one with pink crest, white head, white on wing, as large as a Linnet, admired by everyone, a rare specimen, 15/6, satisfaction guaranteed. Goldfinches! Goldfinches! I have the finest cock Goldfinches in England, not little rubbish; big, fine cock Goldfinches, with square-cut blaze, well-buttoned and mooned, good wing bars, all in excellent feather, 3/- and 3/6 each. I have a few extra gems cannot be beaten, ready for show, 4/6 and 5/- each. Having supplied numerous winners to show fanciers, I can highly recommend my gems as the finest cock Goldfinches ever seen, feathers like silk; guaranteed Yorkshire Peartree birds, not little dusty things. 4 packets of my special mixture, 1/-; my book of secrets, post free for 1/6; all novices should have one of these. Gentlemen read these, if you have never had one of my birds. "Primrose Hill, Gildersome.—Sir,—I received the Goldfinch, and am highly delighted, he is a fine, big bird, I am pleased to tell you I bred 16 Mules with the other one I had from you; your birds are a credit to anyone; I have now been a customer of yours for over 10 years, and you have never once disappointed me; all your birds have been exactly as described; use this as you like, the birds are open for inspection."—G. Tomlinson, Mule breeder and exhibitor, to Harry Allen, The Original Linnet King of the World. "35, Cambrian Place, Ulverston, —Sir,—Pleased with the Goldfinch, good size and shape, well developed, a gem."—R. Cruthwaite to H. Allen. "High Street, West Luton,—Sir,—Linnet arrived safe and very well pleased with it; it is well worth the money."—A. Bryden to H. Allen. "7, Sophia Street, Seaham Harbour, Durham,—Sir, —I showed that good Linnet you sent me and I am pleased to say he stood first in an open class of 13."—J. Nicholson, hon. sec., to H. Allen. I could fill a paper with testimonials like the above. All my birds are on 7 days' approval, cash or CAGE BIRDS' deposit system. All birds sent out safely packed and exactly as described. The latest in Leeds is "I will meet you at Harry Allen's bird stall in the market on Saturday night, wet or fine." Notice to visitors: Cars stop at the door of my City Aviaries every few minutes. Send your orders to the largest bird shop in Leeds, and you will never regret it. Harry Allen, Bird Specialist, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett Street, Leeds.

Imported and Home-Bred HARTZ MOUNTAIN ROLLERS.

ALL ARE MORE THAN VALUE FOR MONEY.

Read a few recent opinions out of Thousands received.

31, Sea View, Grangetown, Dec. 2, 1907.—I received the Hartz Mountain Roller safe. I like him very much. He is singing every day. The pair of Norwich we got are doing well.—R. Barrett to W. Rudd.

H.M.S. "Blake," Chatham. Dec. 5, 1907.—The Hartz Roller I received I must say is a very nice bird, and has given greatest satisfaction. You gave me a week's approval, which was plenty of time in which to find out the bird. It started to sing as soon as cover was taken off the cage.—T. Hole to W. Rudd.

169, Derby Road, Seaton Sands, Nottingham. Dec. 2, 1907.—I have again great pleasure in asking you to forward another Roller. The last four I sent for have given every satisfaction.—H. Garton to W. Rudd.

101, John Street, Priestfield. Dec. 4, 1907.—Will you please send a tin of Eggertine as soon as possible. The bird you sent sings most beautifully, and keeps its tune wonderfully well.—Wm. Penn to W. Rudd.

Song beautiful.

28, Mairo Street, Old Shildon. Dec. 4, 1907.—Hartz Roller arrived safely, and gives every satisfaction. His song is beautiful.—F. Brunskill to W. Rudd.

36, Lansdowne Street, Darlington. Dec. 2, 1907.—The Hartz Roller arrived safe. He is singing well, and I am perfectly satisfied with him.—B. Foster to W. Rudd.

Middleton House, Longparish, Hants. Dec. 4, 1907.—The Norwich hen you sent me for a friend is a very pretty and neat bird. The H.M. Roller you sent me is a beauty, with a lovely soft note.—H. E. Williamson to W. Rudd.

LARGE COLLECTION

As follows: SEIFERT and other noted strains, not fictitious absurdities, in stock, to be seen and heard, a really fine and superior collection, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/- and up. Hens, same strain, 3/6 and 5/-. Hartz Cocks, singing, 5/-, 5/9, 6/6. Hens, 1/6, 2/-. CASCADE ROLLERS are fulfilling all promises. I don't supply you with columns of testimonials, but I supply you with a £2 2s. Roller for 10/-. The following testimonial is deposited with Editor:—Dec. 1st, 1907.—Dear Sir,—Some time ago I had a Cascade Roller from you, which turned out an excellent singer. I put him in our show with a number of my birds, some bred from £2 2s. parents, but your Cascade Roller attracted all attention. I was so pestered with people wanting to buy him that I offered my others much cheaper, but they would have the Cascade Roller. Can you let me have another cock with as sweet notes, also some Cascade hens, as I want to introduce their variety of song into my birds? For obvious reasons I don't want my name and address published—Cascade Rollers are guaranteed to be equal to anything imported. For sweetness and variety of song they are unrivalled. By request, I am importing a few Cascade Schoolmasters; the most fastidious judges pronounce them perfect; price 15/-. With either bird I give my beautifully-fitted British Roller singing cage; terms cash or deposit.—Pearson, Cascade Roller Importer, Greenwich.

CONTEST ROLLERS.

Real St. Andreasbergs. The price of these birds is only 15/-, and we send them on 14 days' trial at our risk, and we don't want your money until you are fully satisfied with the bird. Deposit the 15/- now with the Editor of CAGE BIRDS and don't you buy a Roller or any other article on any other terms, no matter if the advertiser is a large advertiser or a small one. Always deposit your cash, and then you can't be imposed upon. Every one of these Rollers is sent out in prime condition, and a receipt is given, with full instructions how to keep them in condition and contest form, this alone is worth pounds to every fancier, and every bird we sell gets us a testimonial. We could publish hundreds, only we prefer to give value in the birds themselves rather than spend the money in advertisements, and out of the hundreds we sold last year, the Editor of CAGE BIRDS can prove that we had only one deposit to return. Send for one of these masterpieces, and send also to some other advertiser for a 20/- or £2 Roller and compare the two, and I guarantee you will prefer the one we send. A word to the wise is sufficient. German Hartz Mountain Canaries in full song, same as sold by others as Rollers, price, 5/-, 6/-, 7/-, and 8/6 each. Roller hens, 1/6, 2/-, 2/6 and 3/- each. Singing cage cabinets, with closing shutters, complete, 2/6 each. Anything, alive, bought, sold, and exchanged. We have won thousands of prizes. —Northern Aviaries, Ormskirk-rd., Preston.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

Mr. Aron Aden, Willenhall, in sending his third order, writes:—30th November, 1907.—Again the birds give every satisfaction. I can assure you I shall put your name forward in every case as a straightforward person to deal with, etc. Mr. Hodson, Bird Dealer, 33, Crooke, near Wigan, writes: 30th November, 1907 (fourth order).—I am quite satisfied; all the birds started singing soon after arrival, etc. Scores of testimonials I receive weekly. —John Smith, 13, Threnzweg, 112, Hamburg, 5, Germany. Lists free; letters 2½d.; cards 1d.

HARTZ MOUNTAIN

Roller cock Canaries, direct from Hartz, beautiful birds, only 3/9 each; 21/- a stick. Try one.—Varney, Stratford.—"The Elms, 18, Whitehouse Loan, Edinburgh, 1st, 1907.—Hummell arrived safely, and sings lovely; it is a pretty bird, and gives satisfaction.—N. Turnbull."—"2nd, 1907. Birds arrived, are singing well.—R. M. Lee, 79, Mill Street, Crewe."—"Broom, Newton Mears, Glasgow.—The birds arrived in good condition; I am well pleased with such value.—J. Broom."—"2nd, 1907, 32, Easson Road, Darlington.—Bird to hand. I like the song wonderfully well, and thank you for your prompt delivery and attention to my instructions.—H. Hutchison."—Send all orders to Varney, Straford, London.

Hummel Rollers.

Finest Rollers imported. To speak well of the Hummel is to gild refined gold. Testimonials from customers who say the Hummel is still singing as sweetly as when purchased four, five, six, and seven years ago. All Hummels have delightful deep, delicate bow roll, hollow roll, hollow bow roll, du pipe, hollow bell roll, grand round bass roll, vibrating hollow roll, and charming water bubble roll; one price only, 12s. 6d.; no fancy prices; Hummel hens, 3s. each; a beautiful pair of Hummels for 15s. St. Andreasberg Rollers, 5s. and 7s. 6d. each. Hummel Schoolmasters, 20s. each, better than can be obtained elsewhere at treble the price. Thousands of testimonials have been published by me in CAGE BIRDS from satisfied customers. I guarantee strictly honourable trading and satisfaction to all.—Varney, sole proprietor and importer of this remarkable Roller Canary. Twenty years advertiser.—Varney, Stratford, London.—St. Mary Abbey, Mill Hill, December 1st, 1901. Received the Hummel; it sings beautifully indeed. It sings sweetly, and oh so softly, all day, and I cannot imagine any bird with a more lovely voice; he begins, even these dark mornings, at 7.30, under his serge cover, and sings till 6 o'clock. Although his song is so lovely, it is beautifully sweet, he has no shrill notes, and I am able to read through it. Miss F. Blockett. December 1st., Southfelt, Poynton, Cheshire. Received the Hummel, and am more than delighted with such superior song. W. Glover, to Varney, the largest importer of Rollers in London.

THERE'S NO QUESTION

about it, if you want the best possible value for your money, you must buy your Rollers from me. I am the sole importer of the genuine Leipzig Roller, and by importing direct am able to save all middlemen's profits, and can retail these grand birds at prices far below those charged by ordinary dealers. I have a grand collection of pure St. Andreasberg hollow Rollers, all direct from Leipzig, and stamped on wing "Hans Weber, Leipzig," all are in full song, day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, waterbubble runs, soft roulades, piccolo trills, bell, harp, du-du and Nightingale pipes, etc., etc., and are guaranteed to be entirely from from Titlark or any objectionable notes whatever, price, 7/- and 8/6 each. Special Schoolmasters, which excel in the deep hasps rolls, 10/- each. Few extra special contest Masters, guaranteed pure Seifert blood, 15/- each. These contest birds are gems of the very first water, and have a grand flow of the rich, round, deep rolls, not the thin, metallic, ear-piercing shrieks, and are perfect masters of their art. Pure Roller hens, guaranteed same strain as above cocks, 2/- each, two 3/6. Grand lot of exceptionally loud, free singing Hartz cocks, extra free songsters, and just the thing for public bar, etc., 5/6 each, or 31/6 stick of seven. Hartz hens, 1/6 each, two 2/6 or 12/- dozen. Roller song cabinets made specially for my Rollers, 2/6 each. Ordinary singing box cages, 1/- and 1/3 each. Elegant solid brass drawing-room hanging cages, with ruby cut-glass round and opal feeders, etc., 5/6, 7/6, 10/6, and 13/- each. As a special Christmas offer, I will supply up till December 31st only, a free singing Hartz cock in full song in a 10/6 solid brass drawing-room cage for 10/6 complete, or a Leipzig Roller cock in full song, value 7/, in 10/6 cage for 12/6 the lot. This special offer of bird and cage is made instead of giving away almanacks, which are, in most cases, useless, and will only remain open until December 31st, 1907. As usual, all birds and cages are sent safely and warmly packed, upon full week's approval, either on receipt of cash, or CAGE BIRDS deposit system, and money fully returned if every satisfaction not given. Hundreds upon hundreds of unsolicited testimonials have been published in previous issues of CAGE BIRDS, and few more given below, please notice dates and full addresses. "Upper Grove, Sellack, Ross, Dec. 9th. Sir,—I am delighted with the contest Roller, he sings from morning till night, day and gaslight. Please send another as follows. Yours, G. Preece." "215, Ferndale-rd., Swindon, Dec. 9th. Sir,—The two Rollers arrived safe, and give every satisfaction. Please send the following for some friends, as I have recommended you to them. Yours, T. Poole." "2, Graham Buildings, Hillhouse-lane, Huddersfield, Dec. 9th. Sir,—The Roller I got from you is giving every satisfaction. Please send another at 10/- Yours, E. Schofield." "26, New-st., Leominster, Dec. 8th. Sir,—The two Rollers arrived safe, and am very pleased with them. They started to sing the minute they were unpacked. You will hear from me again. Yours, G. Vaughan." "99, James-st., Llanelly, Dec. 8, Sir,—Birds all arrived safe and am well pleased, Schoolmaster doing well. Yours, J. Davies." "13, George-st., Oswaldtwistle, Dec. 5th. Sir,—Having had birds from you for past two or three years, I can do no more than give you another order; all the others being satisfactory. Please send me another contest Master at 15/-. Yours, G. Rushton." "12, Hammersmith-rd., St. George, Bristol, Dec. 5th. Sir,—Schoolmaster is singing lovely, and am very pleased with it. He is the best I have heard. Yours, M. Hill." "Grimsby, Dec. 5th. Sir,—I am very pleased with Schoolmaster you sent me, I have had several, but none to come up to yours. Yours, G. Jacklin." "720, Swansea-ter., Brownhill, Blackburn, Dec. 2nd. Sir,—Glad to say I am very well satisfied with Roller received Nov. 16th. Please quote price for contest singer. Yours, L. Croasdale." "Leicester, Dec. 4th. Sir,—Seifert Roller arrived to-day. He is singing beautifully now as I write by gaslight, so I need not wait the week's approval out, as I am well pleased with it. Yours, A. Smith." "I, Moss-lane, Platt Bridge, Dec. 2nd. Sir,— Please send me a Hartz cock. The Roller I had from you last year was a perfect little musical box. Yours, J. Meek." "Burleigh, near Stroud, Nov. 28th. Sir,—I am most pleased with Roller, it is a real beauty, and sings lovely. I am more than satisfied with it, and the straightforward way you do your business. Yours, A. Doel." "Cross-st., Bowst., N. Aberystwyth, Nov. 28th. Sir,—Received Roller safe, and am well satisfied he is a champion for the price. I have always done my best to advertise you, as you have a genuine way of dealing with your customers. Please send following. Yours, T. Meredith." "Beech-st., Blackheath, Nov. 28th. Sir, I am highly pleased with Roller, he began to sing as soon as uncovered him, and is an excellent songster. Yours, S. Detheridge." "Hill-st., Elworth, Nov. 25th.—Sir,—Please send following. I am pleased to say the Roller cock I bought from you two years ago is still singing splendidly. Yours, W. Lee." "1, Church-st., Aber Bargoed, Nov. 24th. Sir,—Received Roller safe, and am very pleased with him. Please send contest Master at 15/- Yours, C. Seralis, Morton-rd., Pilsley. Nov. 28th." "Sir.—Received Roller safely, and am well pleased with him, as soon as put in new cage he started to sing, before even going for food.. I had one from —— that I was ready to turn out, as he never gave us a note until yours started. Thanking you for honesty. Yours, T. Berringer." "687, Garscube-rd., Glasgow, Nov. 12th. Sir,—Roller arrived safe, was singing within an hour, and gives every satisfaction. Yours, A. Jardine." "34, Castle-st., Stranraer, Nov. 18th. Sir,—Please send Hartz cock, last I had from you was a topper. Yours, J. Raeside." I am confident that the Rollers imported by me are far superior to any others on the market, and I ask all sceptical persons to have one from me and one at any higher price from elsewhere, test them side by side, and keep the one which suits best. I shall be quite satisfied with result. I claim to be the only direct importer in Midland Counties, and by far the largest retailer in United Kingdom. Inspection cordially invited any time.

Real St. Andreasberg Rollers

Pure Hartz Rollers.

Direct importer. The finest Seiferts strain from Germany, with pure Nightingale, Woodlark, Titlarks, Waterbubble, and bell notes; marvellous songsters; 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/- each; on approval. Now, hurry your orders up for first choice. Hens, same strain, 2/- and 2/6. Wholesalers, write for terms. Just a few testimonials picked from hundreds. These have come from birds I have sent hundreds of miles from Preston. Mrs. Downs, Chelmsford Road, Dublin, writes, Oct. 30th, 1907—"Thanks for the beautiful Roller. He arrived safely about 11 today, none the worse for the journey. He is a beautiful colour, and has a lovely voice. I like him well; he is singing over my head this moment. I want a nice cage for him; send on price of one." Mr. Glenny, Bachelors' Walk, Dublin, Oct., 1907—"Sir, am pleased with Roller, which arrived safe. He is singing continually night and day since he arrived. Scores of testimonials like this. If above not proof enough, send for catalogue and scores more testimonials. Mr. J. Patterson, Cork, Ireland—"Sir, I think it only right you should know that the Roller you sent me won the All Ireland Roller Singing Contest, held here November 8th and 9th." Mr. McConquodall, Greenock, Scotland—"Sir, received Roller and box cage safe; he was singing half an hour after I got him. He is the best songster I ever had. The cage is most suitable." Mr. H. Brooks, Wakefield, Yorks.—Sir, the Hartz Roller to hand. He is a splendid bird and sang under three minutes after caged. He sings in the gaslight; first thing in the morning. I have given twice as much for German Rollers not half as good as this from you." A few real Hartz Rollers—not Belgians, price 5/- and 6/- each; hens, 1/6, two 2/6. Proper singing Roller box cages, 1/6; enamelled inside and out, inlaid fronts, sand drawers; beauties, 1/10 each; approval with any; established 1879.

SATISFACTORY AND SOLID BUSINESS!

E. TAYLOR,

Bird Specialist,
BRADFORD.

It is an accepted fact among all classes of civilised trading men, that, in order that business be carried through on satisfactory and solid lines there must be perfect confidence on both sides. That is to say that the buyer must be sure of the seller's honesty of purpose and the seller must have confidence in the buyer's financial rectitude. This is exactly the position of matters which obtains between E. TAYLOR'S business friends and E. TAYLOR himself. There is never any doubt in the mind of the customers as to E. TAYLOR being well able to serve his clients BEST, in Birds, Cages, or Appliances, and the pleasing result is a most harmonious helpfulness on both sides of the counter.

E. TAYLOR'S

will fully explain how this result is arrived at. It will, besides afford you much valuable information regarding matters in Bird transactions generally and will be cheerfully sent on receipt of two penny stamps, to cover postage.

Read the following few Ungarnished Facts, and note dates please:—

Wonderful value.

Viewforth Buildings, Stirling. Dec. 3, 1907.—Cage and bird arrived safe. They are wonderful value. The bird is a beauty.—A. Stewart to W. Rudd.

You don't advertise one thing and supply quite a different, as some do.

406, Huddersfield Road, Millbrook, Dec. 3, 1907.—Just a few lines to tell you Amazon Parrot is doing well, which I had of you seven weeks ago. It can say various things, call's names, laughs, cries, coughs, whistles, and tries to imitate any noise it hears. It has exceeded my expectations from the first day it came. I must say you are an honest man, and you don't advertise one thing and supply quite a different, as some do.—J. Ingham to W. Rudd.

Muling hen excellent.

Liverpool, Dec. 6, 1907.—Muling hen arrived quite safe. I am very pleased indeed with it, and think I have got excellent value for my money.—J. Hughes to W. Rudd.

Sunny Bank, Beaufort, Dec. 7, 1907.—Bird arrived quite safe. I am well pleased with him. Thanking you for sending such a good one, and the way you treated me.—J. Masters to W. Rudd.

Grand for the money.

9, Wallis Street, Newton Heath. Dec. 5, 1907.—The birds got here alright. They are a grand pair for the money.—A. Fildes to W. Rudd.

Brook Street, Lye. Dec. 7, 1907.—Received bird safe, must thank you on behalf of my friend, who is quite satisfied with same, and delighted with your straightforward way of business.—J. Hadley to W. Rudd.

Very cheap, and splendid.

9, Fawcett Street, Gainsboro'. Dec. 3, 1907.—Received Bullfinch. He is a splendid bird, and very cheap. I shall want some Canaries later.—M. L. Knott to W. Rudd.

Worth much more.

2, Moss Bank Place, Greenrig Street, Uddingston. Dec. 5, 1907.—The birds arrived safe, and I thank you very mueb for sending me such a nice pair for the money. They are worth much more money than you charged me. You may depend upon me recommending you to my friends.—T. McGrorie to W. Rudd.

76, Abbeyfield Road, Rotherhithe, London, S.E.—Dec. 4, 1907.—I received the bird yesterday, and I must say that it is satisfactory; soon after it was put in new cage, it began to sing.—G. Tate to W. Rudd.

5, High Street, Ludlow. Dec. 5, 1907.—Budgerigars to hand safely. Fine pair.—J. Bessell to W. Rudd.

7, Romer Place, High Street, Lewisham, S.E. Nov. 30, 1907.—I received bird safe and sound. It gives every satisfaction. Am very pleased with it, and hope shortly to send for a Linnet Mule.—A. W. Anderton to W. Rudd.

Would not believe it re Goldfinch.

Bo'ness. Dec. 2, 1907.—I received Goldfinch alright on Thursday and on Friday it was whistling, and as lively as a Lark. I may say I am highly pleased with it. I got one from you last year at the same price, and I have it now. It has been in excellent health since I have had it. My friends would not believe me when I told them the price I paid for it. I am trying to get a club up, but some of the people here have been done by getting birds sent from England, and they are afraid to make the attempt.—J. Hamilton to W. Rudd.

Would not take double.

46, Coleridge Buildings, Archway Road, Highgate, London. Dec. 6, 1907.—I received the crested cock safely. Many thanks for sending me such a good one, it is just what I wanted, but did not think I should get one like it for the money. I would not take double the price I paid for it.—W. Shorter to W. Rudd.

I ask the sceptical to kindly read this.

105, Ditchling Road, Brighton. Dec. 2, 1907.—Thank you for so promptly sending the Asthmarine. I gave the Bullfinch some in his water, and the first sip seemed to do it good, and the second time the wheezing stopped, and it had been very bad all the week. To-day he seems quite himself again, and has been piping.—M. M. Winters to W. Rudd.

23, Willingham Street, Grimsby. Dec. 4, 1907.—I received the Goldfinch mule this morning alright. He is a splendid bird. I am well satisfied with him. He has been singing this afternoon.—C. Rhodes to W. Rudd.

Lewisham, Dec. 4, 1907.—Received bird quite safe, and am very pleased with it. It sings beautifully, and is quite tame. My friends are delighted with it, and think of sending for one.—C. Greenhill to W. Rudd.

Nothing to beat Asthmarine.

4, Phillip Street, Hulme. Dec. 5, 1907.—Please send a bottle of Asthmarine. There is no remedy to beat it for asthma.—A. Downs to W. Rudd.

Could not get such for double, etc.

Post Office, Newry, Dec. 3, 1907.—I received bird. Thanks very much. I may tell you I am very much pleased with him. He is a splendid bird, and just the kind I wanted. I could not have picked a better bird had I been in Norwich myself, nor could I have got a bird for double the money. I can only say you are all you claim to be. I will tell anyone wanting birds to give you the first trial. Wishing you every success.—T. H. Malion to W. Rudd.

"ASTHMARINE"

IT SAVES WHERE OTHERS FAIL.

The greatest remedy ever brought before the Fancy, and has the largest Sale of any similar article by far. Beware of imitations! For all lung affections it is marvellously efficacious — not a liver harmer, but both soothing and healing. Thousands of testimonials received for this article alone. 9d. and 2s. 6d. per bottle, post free. Once used always kept ready for any sudden attack.

"EGGERTINE"

It is the best, purest and greatest bone and muscle forming food ever known, as the analytical reports of most eminent authorities prove. It is a genuine egg food made with fresh laid English eggs, with white, of course, included (and NOT foreign preserved yolk of egg), with other valuable properties combined. Tins, post free 1s. 3d.; large size 2s. 6d. There is a saving in the larger size.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

WASHING EXHIBITION BEFORE THE WIBSEY & DIST. C.B.S.

Members were treated on Nov. 30 to a very interesting and instructive washing exhibition, given by Mr. S. Dean (Secretary of the Great Horton Society). His method was altogether new to our members, and several decided to try it when washing for our members' show on Dec. 7. Mr. Dean put two birds through the tubbing process, and then asked if a novice would try his hand. Mr. F. Pickles then put a bird through, and adapted himself very well to the new style. Mr. Dean afterwards put two more through and the remaining two were tubbed by Mr. D. Sutcliffe, an old fancier well known in the Yorks. fancy. Mr. Dean afterwards gave his reasons for dispensing with the old style of drying in the cloth before the fire. By the questions asked it was evident that some of the members were very interested in the new method, as practised by Mr. Dean. A very enjoyable evening was brought to a close by a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Dean for his interesting exhibition.—E. W. Johnson, hon. sec.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Annual smoking concert and presentation of special prizes won at annual show took place November 28th at the Herne Tavern, Peckham Rye, S.E. The President, Mr. J. Peacock, was unfortunately not able to be present owing to a prior engagement. His place in the chair was very ably filled by Mr. F. J. Gain ("News of the World"), who also presented the special prizes to the fortunate winners. The arrangements for the concert were in the hands of Messrs. A. E. Rogers and W. R. Wall, who had arranged a capital programme, the principal items of which were heartily applauded. Mr. Grif Williams sang "The Sailor's Grave"; this gentleman has a fine baritone voice, and knows how to use it, and he received a great ovation. Mr. Jenner (tenor) sang "My Queen," "Promise of Life," etc., with fine effect. Mr. Elliott gave a cornet solo, "Songs of Araby," and, as an encore, 'The Lost Chord." Mr. Cunningham recited "The Cruise of the Nancy Bell," with fine dramatic effect, and was heartily applauded. Mr. Mazzoni sang (in character), "I am one of the Upper Ten" in fine style; everyone hoped to have the pleasure of hearing him again on some future occasion. Mr. Syd Winhurst, an old friend, was very funny in "Potted Poetry," and "All for the Sake of Finningan." When this gentleman sat down there were smiles on the faces of the company that remained there for the rest of the evening. A novelty was provided in the form of an exhibition of sleight-of-hand by Mr. Pickthorn, who was particularly clever with the manipulation of playing cards. Mr. Alf. Baker ably presided at the piano. The principal prize winners were Messrs. R. L. Crisp, Mabey, Maxwell, Brownlie, Hollands, Wall, Waterman, Morris, Johnson, Cranfield, Keefes, Rees, and others. A vote of thanks to the chair, artistes, and the gentlemen who had arranged the concert, brought the meeting to a close. The annual general meeting has been fixed for January 2nd, 1908.—W. Hodson, hon. secretary.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Usual monthly meeting was held at headquarters November 28th, Mr. Handley in the chair. Owing to a misprint in the special cards, members will be allowed to use at patronage shows drinkers that do not measure across front more than 2½ inches, or less than 2¼ inches; the other measurements as per cards. A long discussion took place on the advisability of sending a representative to last show to see that the rules of the society were carried out, and it was decided to put a motion to this effect on the voting papers, and take a vote on it, Mr. Deacon making the motion. Mr. Hales gave notice of motion, that we do not give patronage to any society that does not give at least four money prizes, and Mr. Chivers gave notice to move that we have a standard Yorkshire show cage.—S. Hadwin, secretary.

LEWISHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting November 26th, Mr. E. S. Lugg in the chair. Letters were read from A. W. Hiscox, Esq., late Mayor of Lewisham, and from Mr. J. Sandiford, of Preston, expressing their pleasure in accepting the posts of vice-presidents. Mr. E. E. Colley and Mr. W. T. Kinnear expressed their pleasure in accepting similar positions. A vote of thanks to these gentlemen was passed. Nine new members were elected, viz., Messrs. Pilcher and Faux (Bickley) Young and Wraith (Bromley, Kent), Bennett (Streatham), Blow and Dowling (Catford), Mrs. Steed (Lee), and Mrs. Jordan (Lewisham). This brought the total membership to 31—a result most pleasing to the executive; the wish was freely expressed that this should be increased, if possible, to 50 by the 31st December. Only by the assistance of all fanciers resident in the district can this result be obtained. A short discussion ensued on the "management of stock during the show season," and a vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the meeting.—H. Thos. Lucas, Hon. Sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting at headquarters on Nov. 25th. After the election of Mr. Farrington, the following were submitted for membership:—Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon, P. Tavener, W. Coles, H. R. Jacobsen. A vote of condolence was passed to Mr. A. S. Wheller, on the sudden death of his wife, and a wreath was subscribed for by those present. The payment of prize money and presentation of special prizes took place; a pleasant feature being the return of prize money to the funds. A vote of thanks was accorded to Messrs. Hart, Shepherd, Curtis, Wyse, Hawes, Goodall, Burton, Easterling, and Miss Shepherd and Mrs. Wyse for services rendered at the recent annual show. Mr. B. J. Cooper expressed his pleasure at finding that smoking was prohibited at that show, and trusted that at all future shows this rule would be enforced, for it was obvious that the birds would greatly benefit by this needed change. The long looked for "Cage Making" Demonstration by Mr. A. W. Curtis, took place and was witnessed by 43 members and friends, including five ladies. In less than an hour, a complete single breeding cage was made (with the exception of the wire front, which was purchased), and a detailed description of each part and particular design given as he proceeded. All the tools employed were fully described, and a hint given as to the most economical way of procuring them. The members followed operations with absorbing interest; they were performed with the consummate skill and dexterity of a master hand. Hearty applause greeted Mr. Curtis at the conclusion, and upon him presenting the cage to the member who had made the most entries and taken the least prize money at the recent show. The chairman expressed the members' thanks and appreciation for the instructive lesson given them, and Mr. Curtis replied, remarking that his sole idea was to do his best to help the Novices. V. Wynn, hon. sec.

BRADFORD (EAST) C.S.

Lecture on the Yorkshire Canary.

Mr. W. Cruise gave his lecture on "My experiences in breeding Yorkshires," before a good assembly of members and friends at Park Chapel Schools, on Dec. 3. He took the greatest care in detailing all the hundred and one things that tend towards the making of a true fancier. Mr. Cruise said that he started in the Fancy abut 20 years ago, and although his methods had not perhaps been as direct towards the goal of success, as some whose names he could mention, still he had always tried to keep in his eye the ideal he was striving for, and this had eventually led him on to the satisfaction of knowing that the birds he had won with, both in the novice classes and since in the open, had all been bred in his own room. He urged those present to take great pains in pairing up their stock for breeding. Never pair two together, he said, that have a similar fault, attention to these things means all the difference between a successful and a non-successful breeder. He always let his birds fly about the room for a month or five weeks before pairing them up for breeding, as this, he said, gets them into champion condition. He did not know whether having eggbound hens was the result of following this course. This was a point that was taken up by many of those present who gave strong testimony to the beneficial results they had obtained by following such a course as this. That size and colour are essential in a Yorkshire all would agree, but he did not believe in sacrificing other good points for these, for with regard to size, his best results had been obtained from what he might term medium sized pairs. In feeding his stock during the breeding season, he used tea-biscuits and egg, given dry for preference, as it seemed to be more palatable, and kept the birds in better condition during the time they were feeding young. Mr. Cruise was asked many questions after his lecture. One was, did he believe in in-breeding; he replied that anyone who attempted this ought to thoroughly understand his stock before he ventured, as he thought that if carried to excess it would ultimately lead to a poor constitution of birds. Another asked if he believed in running a young cock with two hens the first year, and Mr. Cruise replied that he never made a practice of running a young bird with more than one hen the first year, as he had seen good and promising young birds practically ruined by running too much. Another asked if he could give any reasons for young birds slipping the perch, and in reply, he said that he thought it was through weakness in the bird's legs. Asked if he believed in using artificial heat, he said that he was no believer in it. Several more questions were asked, and were all answered in a satisfactory manner. Mr. Lightowler proposed a vote of thanks, which was seconded by Mr. E. Johnson, secretary of the Wibsey Society, in a very appropriate manner, and supported by Mr. Hill. This was put to the meeting by the chairman, Mr. G. R. Rushworth, and carried with enthusiasm. Mr. Cruise afterwards responded to same. Five new members were elected during the evening and the Society, has now a membership of 50.—H. Hill, Secretary.

THE SHOWS.

ILKESTON.

The 7th annual show was held in the Victoria Hall, Bath Street, on Dec. 7th and 9th. About 400 entries turned up in 38 open and 6 members' classes. The Norwich averaged in open about 10 per class. Crests and Crestbreds came up somewhat poorly, averaging 7 per class. The Yorks. averaged 9 per class. The Hybrids and Britishers came up very well and averaged 13 per class. The committee were gratified at the hearty support given to their liberal classification. Only 30 birds all to'd were in the 6 members' classes. The quality in the Nor. was very good, and in most cases well known winners once again came to the front. The Crests were fair, though none of the real cracks were here; why? They ought to support such good classification as this. One or two crack teams of Yorks, turned up, and these, of course, found their way well into the spoil, with birds of high-class merit. The two Hybrid classes were good; the several crosses on view were above the usual average. The Britishers made the show to-day, and throughout these classes some very excellent birds put in an appearance. Competition ruled very keen and close, and very fine points indeed had to be looked for to divide them. A little condition here and there made all the difference. The Foreigners were pretty, and some very perfect birds were staged. The Victoria Hall is a well-lighted room, opposite the Midland Town Station, and only two minutes' walk from the G.W.R. The committee worked with a will like one man to put all in order, and the stewards did their work manfully and quickly, and kept the judges busy. Mr. Marriott, the treasurer, and the secretary, Mr. Thos. Smith, both worked well together, and the secretary is quite unassuming, and carries out his work in a cool painstaking manner. The judging was started in good time and the classes were labelled with prize cards as fast as they were judged, and visitors could at once see how the birds had scored. About 120 patrons gave donations of from 6d. upwards towards the funds, for the success of the show. Great credit is due to those who laboured so well to get all these persons to subscribe. Mr. Rhodes judged Crests. Mr. Roe other Canaries, and Mr. Houlton, Hybrids, British and Foreign birds. Taken on the whole, it was a good show, and we hope the gate was a good one.

DARTFORD.

The Dartford and Dis. Association held their annual show in the Conservative Hall on Dec. 10th and 11th. The few classes provided did not fill up as expected, therefore the committee cutalled the prizes in most of the classes; but the judge awarded the full quota in some classes, where there were 8 entries. Mr. Lambert, the secretary, had the birds nicely staged, and their wants well looked after. The attendance was fairly good, and the quality of the birds in most classes was well up to the average of Kentish shows. The special for best bird in the show was awarded to Mr. Stewart, for his yellow, a typical Norwich. Mr. A. E. Enfield judged.

INNERLEITHEN.

The twenty-sixth annual exhibition of cage birds under the auspices of the Innerleithen O.S., was held in the Volunteer Hall, Innerleithen, on Dec. 7th. The hall was an admirable one for a show, being of a nice size, free from draughts, and in close proximity to the railway station. Cage birds were staged in a part of the hall by themselves, and what was lacking in numbers was accounted for by quality, some tip-top specimens facing the judges. Norwich Plainheads and Borders' classes contained some stormers, some of them being staged in a manner giving credit to their owners; while the British and Foreign winners could all win at any large open show. The greatest falling-off was in the Border and British sections. Of the secretary and assistant one can only speak in the highest praise. They were very courteous and obliging, and they are the right men in the right place, with three real fanciers as president, vice-president, and treasurer, in Messrs. L. Cockburn, J. S. Keddie, and J. Hope. While giving them all praise, one must not forget to remark that they had every encouragement to work, being backed up by one of the largest and most hard-working committees we have seen connected with a show for some time. Among the committee we found Mr. Watt, last year's secretary, who resigned the secretarial duties owing (we understand) to family bereavement. Under the circumstances he got through a great amount of work in his usual kind and painstaking manner. The show was confined to the counties of Peebles, Selkirk, Galashiels, and Melrose, and taking this into consideration the management ought to congratulate themselves on the entry received. A climatic change met us when a few miles from Innerleithen; we came in contact with a lot of snow, all the hills and dales in this part of the country being clothed in white garments. This told greatly against some of the birds while being judged. The show was well patronised during the day. Mr. James Alexander (Lilliesleaf) judged the Borders, while Mr. Anthony Hay (Berwick) took the remainder. Their awards appeared to meet with approval all round. BORD. YELL (10): 1, Rodger, grand quality, nice head, close-fitting wings, hard pressed by 2, Linton, another good one; 3, Blackie; vhc, Brown; hc, Tait; c, Cowan. MIDDLETON.

The Middleton O.S. held their eighth annual show of cage birds, under C.B.U. rules, in the Assembly Room, Old Boar's Head, on December 7th. Judge, Mr. A. Hirst, Accrington. The Lancashire and Lizards Club had guaranteed their classes, but entries came up badly in that section owing to their clashing with Bristol and L.C.B.A. Shows. Yorks and Nor. were a fair lot. The winner in the Buff Yorkshires was a grand tick. bird, the property of a South African visitor, Mr. Papayanni, who is taking out a good lot of Yorkshires with him this month. We wish him good luck with them. The competition in the members' classes was keen for the possession of the society cup, which was won by Mr. Bescoby. His tick. yellow and clear buff Yorkshires would have been easy winners in the open classes. Mr. Thomas made a good fight, being only one point behind. LANC. COPPY YELL.: 1, 2 Butterworth, winner well drawn out, stands nicely 2nd good head and body; 3, Rowbottom, nice head BUFF: 1, 3, Buttorworth, winner clear nice coppy, good size; 3rd nice head, wants substance; 2, Rowbottom, tick., big bird, slip perch a little. HAVERFORDWEST.

Held on December 5, in connection with the local show. Cage Birds were staged in an upstairs room all to themselves; it was a very comfortable room, free from draught and well-lighted. Entries came up well, considering the many shows being held, and the poor railway service. The officials worked well, and the arrangements were excellent. Messrs. Phillips and Williams, the joint hon. sec's did well ,and deserve great praise, whilst the stewards of the Cage Bird Section deserve a word of encouragement for the earnest way in which they carried out their duties. Mr. W. H. Love, acted as representative of the C.B.U. An excellent arrangement in the general interest of exhibitors, but one which on this occasion was not needed, as everything was so splendidly carried out. Mr. T. J. Ambrose judged.

WATFORD.

The West Herts F.A. held their show, which was limited to the county of Herts, and a ten miles' radius, in the Clarendon Hall, December 10th. The exhibits were nicely arranged at one end of the gallery in a good light, and formed a very pleasing sight. A large classification had been issued, but the entries not coming in over well, the committee resorted to amalgamation. Norwich made a rattling good class, many excellent birds being staged. Yorkshires were rather uneven in quality, some real gems heading the list, but the quality fell away towards the end of the classes. Some very choice exhibits were to be seen in the A.O.V., and in the Hen classes. The strength of the show, however, laid amongst the Britishers, which were simply superb, all the leaders being birds of wonderful colour and quality, and a better lot for condition of feather we have never seen. Foreigners were a small, but very choice lot, the section was well managed by a splendid set of stewards, under the leadership of that good fancier and sportsman, Mr. J. Goodall, amongst them being Messrs. Withers, Pearse, Buckingham and Quantrell, who worked like Trojans, whilst the secretarial work was in the hands of the experienced enthusiast, Mr. C. A. Edwards, who received able assistance from his father, and Mr. J. Wrench; with such a grand staff of workers, it goes without saying that everything was in good order, and went smoothly. Mr. C. A. House judged.

NOR. (18): 1, spl, Goodall, very neat buff, capital head, neck and chest, neat wings and tail, nice even colour and good quality of feather; 2, c, Eaton, beautiful shape, grand feather, sound colour; 2, Battison, good chubby shape, nice head and neck, capital style and quality; 3, Brandon, nice quality, eye ticked yellow, very hot colour, good shape and carriage; 4, Shirley, neck ticked yell, grand colour and quality, over fat; res., vhc, Spall; hc, Pigg. HEN A.V. (10): 1, Pearse, very nicely balanced crest, neat centre, capital droop; 2, Pigg, short, cobby, close-feathered buff Norwich, splendid wings and tail, and nicely shown; 3, Goodall, very shapely, nice feathered yellow Norwich, bonny hen; 4, Shirley, rare bodied buff, of lovely quality, only needs a bit more substance of head to be a topper; res, Brandon; vhc, c, Battison; hc, Eaton. YORKS., CLEAR (11): 1, spl, 2, Mabey, long raking yellow, of lovely quality, tapers well away, and stands splendidly; 2nd, charming buff, tight as wax, given a bit more leg, would be a top sawyer; 3, Eaton, nice, long, stylish, good coloured yellow, handles well; 4, hc, Sears, very smart yellow, nice shape, but would not show, wants handling; res, Buckingham; vhc, Young; c, Pigg. TICKED, ETC. LEICESTER C.B.S.

The Leicester C.B.S. held their members' annual show on Dec. 7, at headquarters—the Hare and Pheasant Hotel, High-street. The room in which the show was held is a splendid place for the birds, being well lighted and quite free from draughts. The management was very smart indeed; the Secretary, Mr. Heighton, and committee, are to be complimented when we take into account that there was a dinner in the room the night previous, and that they had to fix the staging the morning of the show. This done, the birds were soon in their classes. Judging commenced soon after 10 o'clock, and by the advertised time for opening, 1 o'clock, the judging was over and all the birds had their prize cards up. Mr. T. Gilbert, of Coventry, judged, and his awards were favourably rece[illegible]

BELFAST.

Held in the Avenue Hall, Garfield-street, on Dec. 6th and 7th. The hall is well lighted and free from draught. The birds were staged in the Scotch style and on glancing round the room one had a full view of all the exhibits. The entries numbered about 400. The Norwich were not much in advance of previous years, but the Yorkshires, Mules, and British have made rapid strides. The advance in the Yorkshires is owing to the Y.C.C. of Ireland. The Scots did not turn up very well, the majority of the fanciers having had a bad season, but still some grand birds were staged. Some of them are very useful birds, and could win in either Belgian or Scotch classes; some had, in fact, won in the two classes. The committee are well worthy of confidence, as every care is taken in respect of the exhibits. Mr. Robert Trimble, the hon. sec., is very obliging, and knows and performs his duties well, every assistance being rendered to him by the committee. The British and Mule classes were a grand lot. Mr. W. M. Thornton judged the Scots, and Mr. A. Wellings the remainder. STOCKPORT F.S.

What is admitted to be the finest collection of Canaries ever got together in this district was the Stockport Fanciers' Show, held at the Boar's Head, Market Place, on Dec. 5 and 6. The entries numbered between 300 and 400, including many that have won premier honours at the leading shows in the kingdom. Some valuable trophies were offered for competition, including Mr. Gaskarth's challenge cup, of the value of £10 10s., which was won by Mr. T. E. Davies, a silver cup for amateur, novice, and British bird sections, and silver tea urn, runner-up to challenge cup in champion section. The judge was Mr. W. Bowyer, of Leek.

SANQUHAR.

Held in the Public Hall, Sanquhar, December 7th. The number of entries was not so large as at last year's show, which was the record one, but the quality of the stock made up for the deficiency. The hall is nicely lighted, centrally situated, and is in every way an ideal hall for a show. Although the entries were a bit short, it was through no fault of the joint-secretaries, who performed their duties in a very business-like manner. Sanquhar always got a lot of entries from Muirkirk, but their show was on the same date. Kilmarnock Cage Bird Show also affected the entries in a great extent. Mr. John Calderwood judged the Canaries, and the following are his awards:—

SIDMOUTH.

The twelfth annual show of this Society was held on Dec. 5th, in the Drill Hall, in an upstair room, which was set apart for the cage birds only. The exhibits were nicely staged and received the best of care and attention from a few good and enthusiastic fanciers. Entries came up very well, and the quality in most of the classes was very good. The Goldfinch class had an entry of 20 and was voted the best ever seen at this fixture. Yorks. were good in quality, the winning birds of Messrs. Parnell and Son and Messrs. Brayshaw and Jowett being much admired. All the Rev. Joyce's entries were absent in the Crest and Crestbred classes. The special for best bird in show fell to Mr. R. Browning's grand four-pointed yellow Goldfinch-Mule, a lovely exhibit. Mr. Fred Farrant again had the handling of the secretarial ribbons, and it would be superfluous on our part to say that he carried out his duties in a thoroughly workmanlike and conscientious manner. As usual he was most obliging and courteous, truly the right man in the right place. He was ably assisted by Messrs. Lashbrook, Sanders, Cartes, and Barton as stewards. Mr. J. H. Payne placed the awards.

TWITTERINGS.

I had over 20 replies to my "Crest" advertisement, writes Mr. W. J. Banks (Honor Oak Park).

Mr. E. Alston (Darvel), we learn, won the Jamieson silver cup and gold medal for most points at Kilmarnock Show.

Kindly note change of address, writes Mr. J. T. Burnett, from 21, Branch Street, Nelson, to 93, Oxford Road, Burnley.

We took £23 "gate" money at the recent Cockermouth Show, writes Mr. W. M. Walker, so that our show was a grand success.

Messrs. Miles and Spencer's birds (of Trowbridge) were, we regret to learn, absent from Bristol Show, through the illness of Mr. Miles.

My last advert. in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. Charles R. Phillips (Wood Green), has kept me busy for three weeks with excellent results.

Entries close for Bradford West on December 17th (Tuesday). Splendid prize list. Host of good specials. T. Clegg, 55 Lupton Street.—(ADVT.)

The "Variety Class" in the schedule of Bradford West Show, writes Mr. T. Clegg, the sec., should read "Any variety of Canary or Mule."

Mr. Bald, of Bathgate, is giving a special of 10s. 6d. for the most points in the British Section of the Broxburn Show, writes Mr. T. Sharp, President.

At Jarrow Show the Crest-bred hen that got first prize belonged to me, and not Hendley as reported, writes Mr. John Atess, Toronto, Bishop Auckland.

Eccles Show report gives specials in open classes, writes Mr. A. Wheatley, secretary, whereas there were really no specials given in any of these classes.

Kindly thank all those who replied to my advertisement last week, writes Mr. P. H. Harris (Bedford Square), as they are too numerous to reply to individually.

Messrs. Sheffield and Gilbert, secretaries of the Coventry and Dis. F. and F.S. Show, inform us that their schedules are now ready, and may be had on application.

Weybridge Show report gives my name as 2nd with Crest-bred, writes Mr. G. Fellows (Southampton). It should have been 1st and spl. My Bullfinch also took spl.

We have to acknowledge a seasonable gift from Mr. J. Francis (Lowestoft), which takes the shape of a box of exceptionally fine specimens of the tasty "Lowestoft b'oater."

Eastbourne Show states 1st Hayles Bott vhc Bott, writes Mr. W. Eagle-Bott, Hayward's Heath. This should read 1st. sp. vhc Eagle-Bott, as my Borders gained these awards.

We had a grand show at Weybridge, writes the sec., Mr. H. E. Parrott, and hope next year to greatly increase the cage-bird classification. Thanks for the excellent report.

I will receive entries up to Saturday, 2nd post, writes Mr. W. Howe, sec., Wellingborough Show. We are very short of entries again, and we must go through this time.

I am credited with judging at Cowdenbeath Show on 30th November, writes Mr. W. D. Hogg (Oakley), but this should have been Mr. J. Hogg, so "Honour to whom it is due."

I look for my CAGE BIRDS every Friday morning, writes Mr. F. R. E. Handscombe (Walthamstow); it is a treat to read, especially when you give us such good plates as the recent "A Blend of Canary Blood."

I had plenty of replies to my advertisement re Bunting. V. WYNN (London, W.)

Macclesfield Show report yellow hen class, writes Mr. F. Broadhurst, sec., should read 1st Broadhurst, not Broadhead; and Class 24, Green, Gold, etc., 1st Broadhurst, not Broadhead.

In the recent Middleton Show, writes Mr. R. Cowherd, secretary, Mr. W. Bescoby won the members' silver challenge cup again as last year, winning by the narrow margin of one point.

I won 2nd prize in the Brit. Goldfinch class and also 3rd prize in the Mule class, in the recent Oakengates Show, writes Mr. G. H. Finney (Oswestry). In catalogue no name was given.

The judge of cage birds at the forthcoming Falkland Show, writes Mr. Geo. Steedman, secretary, is Mr. Geo. Marlin (Hamilton), and not Mr. Geo. Martin as printed in the schedule.

Bournemouth Show report, Dark Mule Class, writes Mr. W. White (Cowes), should read 3rd, White, yellow Greenfinch and Canary Mule; Miss Reeve's Bramblefinch-Chaffinch standing next.

A pretty and effective picture postcard reaches us from Mr. H. Denham (Exeter), depicting sixteen of his birds and the prize-cards and trophies they secured at the 1907 First Feather Shows.

Writing in reference to the recent Reading Show, Mr. G. A. Charles, the secretary, says: We owe the success of entries to your splendid paper, CAGE BIRDS, and hope to give you more support later on.

Members of the Morriston and District C.B.S., please note, writes Mr. D. Jeremy, secretary, that general meetings of the Society will be held henceforward on the last Saturday in each month, and not on the first as heretofore.

I had hard luck for your Coupon first prize at Weybridge, writes Mr. H. E. Parrott, as I nominated in the "Clear Yellow or Buff Yorkshire Cock" class, two out of three, and my best one I accidently put in un-entered cage, therefore he could not compete, and he won the cup for best Canary, and Gold-centred Medal for best Yorkshire in the show.

I have taken CAGE BIRDS from the first number, and have certainly found it the best there is about.—MRS. BAYLY (Margate).

Kindly record my wins at Colchester Show in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. Hasler, junr. (Colchester), as it was my first exhibit of cage birds. I won 1st and spl and spl for best Nor. Canary in show, and also 1st spl in Goldfinches. I take in CAGE BIRDS regularly; and could not do without it as it has led me to this success.

My winning Waxwing has just died, writes Mr. W. H. Manley (Bristol). Only recently he took 1st and spl at Sidmouth. From the show (which closed on Tuesday night) he arrived home on the Friday evening at 8.30. Thanks to the railway company this delay caused a chill, inflammation set in, and from this he died.

A really beautiful and appropriate calendar for the coming year reaches us from Mr. E. Taylor, the well-known fanciers' specialist, of Bradford. It takes the form of a bird-cage, which contains a collection of birds, the whole fitting together in a very ingenious manner. It should be in great demand among Mr. Taylor's customers.

Will members of the Cinnamon Canary Club, writes Mr. R. J. Pretty, note that there is no alteration in or reduction of the points specials allotted for the season. In the Gateshead schedule there is a mistake; it should read £3 3s. for most points, £2 2s. for second, £1 1s. for third, and 10s. 6d. for fourth most points.

My recent advertisement of Mules brought so many applicants that it would be impossible for me to reply to each one, and I would like to thank them through CAGE BIRDS. Your recent plate of Mules I consider magnificent; it makes one's eyes sparkle. I received post cards of Hybrids, and consider them grand value.—C. MACHIN (Bridgtown).

We feel it our duty to say that although "Avisine" has only been advertised two weeks in CAGE BIRDS, we have been deluged with applications for it, P.O.'s rolling in from every conceivable corner of the British Isles, and even from Germany. This, we consider speaks volumes for the popularity and circulation of CAGE BIRDS. It has been a very pleasant surprise for us we can assure you.—AVISINE CO. (Millom).

Xmas Holidays.

SPECIAL OFFER to senders of undisplayed SMALL PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS.

Two Insertions for Price and a half.

Owing to the Xmas Holidays, advertisements for the issue dated DEC. 28th must close on MONDAY, DEC. 23rd, and despite the huge increase in our circulation, we have decided to again offer to advertisers the same advantages as last year. We are therefore prepared to accept Advertisements for our next two issues, for the price of one and a half insertions, provided the wording remains exactly the same. Orders must definitely state that the announcement is for the two weeks (special offer) and must be accompanied by the fee for the two insertions.

AS AN EXAMPLE.—An advt. costing a shilling for one insertion will appear in our issues dated Dec. 21 & 28, at a cost of eighteen-pence, provided the order is sent now. We make this offer to induce advertisers to send in their orders this week for the Xmas Holiday week, and so spare themselves trouble, and us a heap of detail work when the time at our disposal will be necessarily short.

I have been fortunate enough to win the challenge bowl for best local bird at Diss Show three years in succession, writes Mr. H. J. Gooderham, so that it is now my own property. I also secured the cup for most points in local classes.

Report of Altrincham Show gives Norwich Self Buff (Green) 1 Harrison, 2 Drinkwater; also York Cinn. Tkd., etc., 1 Harrison, which should read 1 Drinkwater and 2 Harrison, and 1 Drinkwater, respectively.—P. DRINKWATER (Altrincham).

I have had the misfortune to lose my best Buff Norwich hen, 1st at Sunderland, Blaydon, and Wallsend, writes Mr. A. Grey (Morpeth), and have sold my clear Buff, 1st and spl best Nor., Berwick, and 1st Sunderland, Wallsend and Blaydon.

I have just heard from the Cage Bird Union, writes Mr. A. Sheffield, hon. sec. of Coventry and District F.S. Show, that we cannot have a licence as our date clashes with West Bromwich Show, although our date has been the same for a number of years.

Special attention is drawn to Mr. W. Gore's advertisement in Roller Canary column of present issue. His offer of Canary and cage at reduced price will probably meet with favour of many persons desirous of purchasing suitable Christmas presents.—(ADVT.)

Sheffield C.B.S. has fixed November 6th and 7th, 1908, for their next annual open show, and has again secured the spacious Temperance Hall, writes Mr. T. Bishop, the hon. sec. The judges engaged are Messrs. Robson, J. Bexson, H. W. Battye, and E. E. Smith.

Your printer made the price of my Belgian hen, advertised in last week's CAGE BIRDS, 10s. instead of 70s., writes Mr. R. J. Baker (Chichester), and I have been flooded with telegrams and letters for her. Kindly explain this, which will account for my not answering all wires and letters (an impossible task).

Having received a number of letters in respect of the ruling of the Woolwich and Woolwich C.B.S., writes Mr. W. Pawley, the sec., permit me to state that the meeting is open to the United Kingdom. I should like also to state that no prizes whatever will be withheld at our annual show on January 2nd and 3rd.

A meeting of the Jarrow and Dist. C.B.F.S. has been held, writes Mr. J. T. Carrick, the sec., for the purpose of forming a combined members' show between their own Society and the South Shields' Society, to be held either in Christmas week or New Year's week, and it is hoped the members of both societies will rally round and make it a great success.

Mr. W. H. Tottle (Plymouth) writes acknowledging receipt of prize money won in the CAGE BIRDS' Competition in connection with a recent show. He adds: CAGE BIRDS is greatly appreciated in this district. As a novice I have found it of the greatest service, and my children are always waiting for it, as they like to read the stories by Uncle Peter.

We hear that strenuous efforts are being made to beat all Southern records in the Border Fancy section at the forthcoming Crystal Palace Show, Messrs. Brownlie and Ramsden having put their shoulders to the wheel for this purpose. Already over 30 very valuable specials have been collected for the section, and when the list is complete it promises, we understand, to somewhat stagger lovers of the tiny Border.

Every class at the recent Bristol F.S. Show, which brought 5 entries, was kept in, and full prize money will be paid, writes the hon. sec., Mr. G. T. H. Maggs, though the result must be a considerable loss on the section. The 10-guinea Lancashire bowl was won outright by Mr. W. Hardy (Oldham). This is the third bowl of 10-guinea value won outright from the Bristol F.A. There are, however, still more to follow. Visitors and exhibitors were warm in their approval of all that was done, so there is little doubt that the arrangements will be repeated next year, when it is hoped that exhibitors will give the B.F.A. the support their enterprise and sacrifice merits.

Good Entry at Gateshead.

We hear from Mr. Taylor, the sec. of Gateshead Show, that they have a fine entry, with most of the "cracks" competing—which promises a treat to the visitors. Here are details of the entry:—Norwich, 205; Cinnamon, 40; Crests and C.-B's., 143; Scotch Fancy, 44; Yorkshires, 120; Borders, 224; Mules, 50; British, 189; Foreign, 52; Any other Variety, 28; Selling, 105; total, 1,200.

SUPPLEMENT TO
"CAGE BIRDS" CHRISTMAS NUMBER.

With Beautiful Colored and Art Plates and other Illustrations.

The Dipper (Cinclus Aquaticus).

By S. A. SANDY.

A British bird rarely seen in captivity, and one which has proved a puzzle to aviculturists to keep alive for any length of time, even under conditions apparently particularly suited to it, is the subject of this interesting paper.

This species is one that is rarely met with in captivity, and, I fear, little is known of its habits even when at liberty except by a very limited number of fanciers. Its chief haunts are in the vicinity of fast-running streams, and, so far as my information goes, there are few suitable localities in the midland and south-eastern counties. I have never heard of any specimens being taken near London. On the streams in Yorkshire it is fairly common and breeds freely; it also breeds in suitable spots in Derbyshire and most parts of Wales, whilst I am told it is frequently met with on the Scottish burns, where it may be seen perching on the large stones that rise a few inches above the water.

Nesting Operations.

The nest is a somewhat cumbersome affair, composed of grass, moss, and leaves, and usually has an inner lining of dead leaves.

The Dippers commence their nesting operations as early as February if the weather is at all favourable, and rear two, and sometimes three, broods during the season. The family usually numbers four or five, so that the old birds may be said to be kept busy while the nesting operations last.

There is practically nothing in the plumage to guide one in distinguishing the sexes, although in my opinion the hens are a trifle smaller and duller. In the adult male the head and nape of the neck are brownish, with the flights and tail a rusty black, throat and upper part of breast pure white, the lower part of the breast being a rich chestnut shading to black on the flanks and underparts, back black with greyish mottlings, bill black. The flight feathers are rounded like those of the brown Wren, which this bird much resembles in general appearance, and particularly in the carriage of the tail, which is short and points upwards.

When perching on a low post or stone the wings are dropped slightly, and the tail spread like a fan. When moving on the ground the Dipper is awkward in appearance. It walks similarly to the Starling, except that it curtseys almost to the ground every few feet it goes. It does not hop like a Thrush or Blackbird, but when going short distances it takes a flying jump from place to place. It is about the size of a small Thrush when full grown, but scarcely appears so large owing to the short tail.

Young Adventurers.

I was fortunate enough last spring, through the medium of the advertisement columns of CAGE BIRDS, to obtain some young hand-reared specimens about a month old. They were fully fledged and picking up well. In their nest-feathers they were very different in plumage from the adult bird I have described. They might very well be described by saying the head and upper parts were black, with whitish margins to the feathers, and the throat and breast creamy white, with fine black streaks, the flanks and belly almost black. I parted with two of my stock to a well-known fancier, but, like myself, he was unable to keep them alive long, one dying the following day.

Cage Accommodation.

I kept my bird in a cage 2 feet 6 inches long, 1 foot deep, and 18 inches high, covering the cage bottom with sand about an inch deep, and moss. I need two perches, one near the bottom and one rather high up. I also turned a small flower-pot bottom upwards, and stood it in the centre of the cage. I kept a bath 9 inches square and 1 inch deep always hung on the cage-front for the bird to walk about in. Immediately I put a fresh supply of water in the bath the Dipper was into it, putting its head under the water, and going round the bath pecking at the sides under water. It then used to settle down to a fine splash, which, although good for the bird, was anything but desirable for the cage, which soon contained more water than the bath.

Feeding Methods.

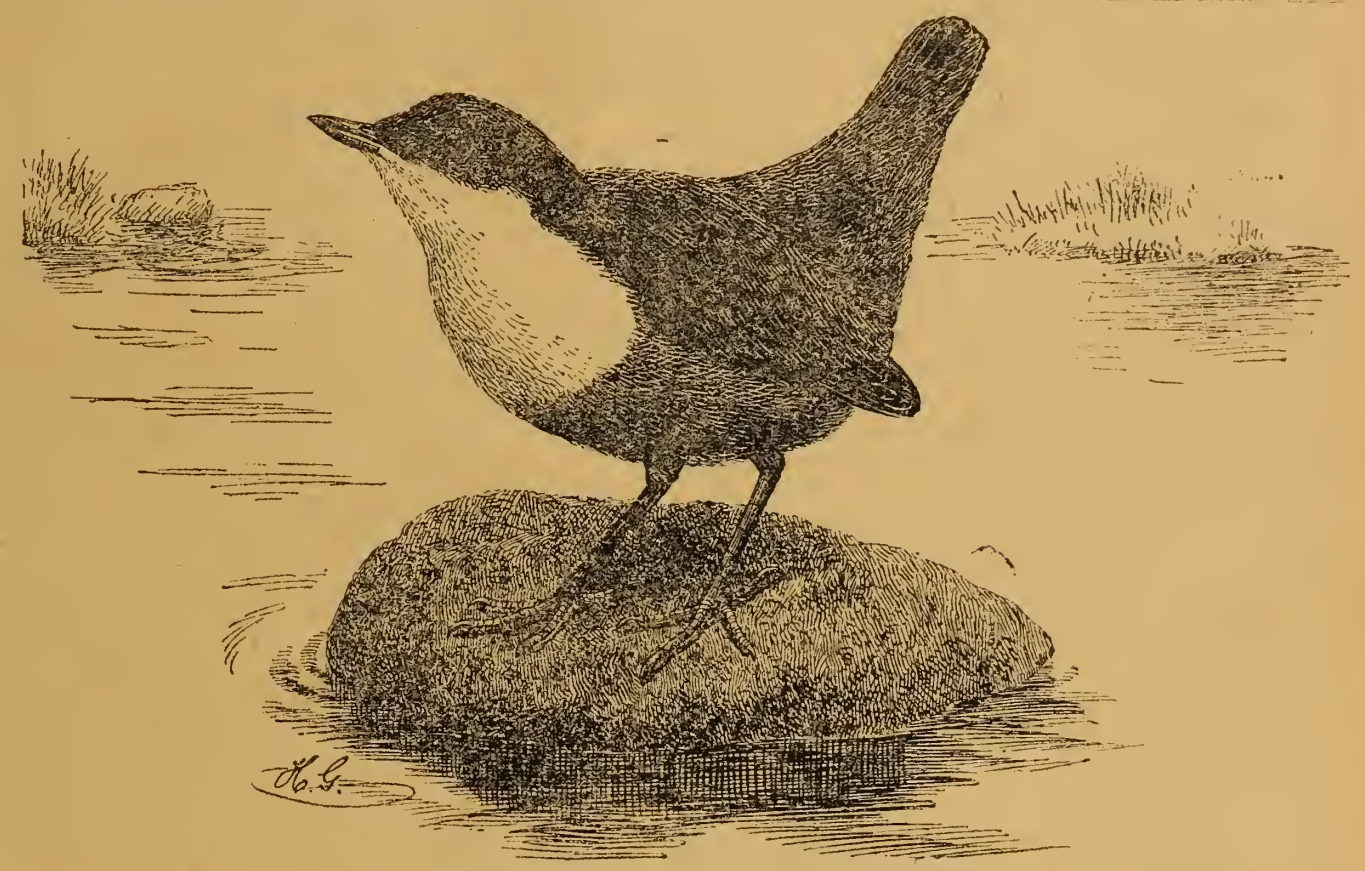
When I first had the bird I was very much concerned as to the best food for it, but decided to start with a mixture of soaked puppy biscuit, dried flies (a liberal supply of these), ants' eggs, and a little hard-boiled egg, together with a good supply of gentles and chrysalides, and a few mealworms. I used to put the gentles etc., into the water, and the bird would pick them up from the bottom. It appeared particularly fond of the chrysalides. I also tried a few small earthworms, but although it would occasionally eat one it was not at all keen about it.

The fancier through whom I obtained the birds went to some trouble to ascertain definitely what the young were fed upon. He placed a very fine net at the entrance of an arch containing a nest with young, and when the old birds struck the net, when returning with food, they were captured, and both had a small worm known amongst anglers as "Strawbait"—possibly so called by reason of its floating on top of the water in a piece of dry grass or small curled leaf.

The "Strawbait" is the larva of the Caddis Fly. A second nest was tested in the same manner, and the old birds were found to be using similar food. This insect would therefore appear to be the natural food of the Dipper. The Caddis-worm is very similar in size and colour to the mealworm, which is too well known to all bird-keepers to need description.

The Outdoor Treatment.

On the food I have described my Dipper thrived, and after keeping him about a month in the cage I cleared an outdoor aviary of its occupants and placed the bird in it. The floor-space was 6 feet by 2 feet, and the height about 7 feet, so that it could take plenty of exercise. In addition to the ordinary perches, I put in several flower-pots the reverse way up, and some bricks on end, and these were more often used than the perches, except for roosting. I used a large zinc pan for water, 18 inches across by 4 deep in the centre, and when any insects were thrown in the bird would take a flying jump from the nearest flower-pot into the centre, and quickly get them out. It appeared to revel in water, and during the day was more often in the bath than out of it.



Towards evening on June 24th, when about two months old, it commenced to record its song, which was similar to that of a young Thrush, although perhaps rather more of a warble. In a week from starting the notes became quite loud. About this time I had another specimen of the species, which I placed in the same aviary, and although they fought a little at first, they soon became on good terms and did well for a bit. One, however, would persist in roosting close to the wire, and for safety I cleared another aviary with glass round it, and removed the two to it.

The floor of this one was wood covered with cocoanut fibre, which I kept well damped. I put in the flower-pots, etc., but after a few days the two birds began to show signs of what appeared to be cramp in the legs, and gradually got from bad to worse, refusing food, even gentles and mealworms, and to a great extent forsaking the bath. After being in the second aviary about ten days one died, and a week later the other also. Both were very thin.

A Question of Flooring.

The floor of the first aviary was covered with tarred felt, into which had been pressed a good quantity of grit and sand, making it very much like an asphalte path, and it was suggested to me that this species—in fact, all species of water birds—will not live long upon a wooden floor. Cement or earth would have been far better, and less likely to cause them to go crampy. I am inclined to think the wooden floor was to a great extent, if not wholly, responsible for my birds' death.

I am fairly satisfied that my feeding was not much at fault, or they would not have thriven upon it so long as they did. I heard of one or two other fanciers trying their luck with Dippers, but I believe my specimens survived the longest. Several attempts have been made to keep them in the aviaries at the Zoo, but I am told the percentage of deaths has been very high; and the old birds are very shy, and it is not often visitors can get a good look at them.

THE DIPPER, OR WATER OUZEL.

This dainty, shy little frequenter of our moorland streams, will be found the subject of the article on this page.

Adaptability to Captivity.

From my experience I am quite convinced that Dippers are adaptable to captivity if hand-reared, and would make very interesting occupants for an outdoor aviary, which I think is their proper place. Some experienced fanciers insist that they cannot be kept, but from my recent trial I disagree with them, and should be very interested to hear from any fanciers who have tried what their experiences have been. I do not think they could be kept in an ordinary cage, although it would of course be quite possible to show a Dipper the same as a Thrush.

I do not recollect ever seeing a Dipper on the show bench, where I am sure it would be attractive, and no doubt stand very high up in the awards. All being well, I shall try again next year under altered conditions, when I shall hope for better results.

The General Management of Canaries.

By MRS. A. WATTS.

One of our foremost lady fanciers explains the methods that have brought her success in the production of exhibition canaries.

In my estimation there is no hobby so interesting as the breeding of Canaries for exhibition. They are full of interest from the time they are hatched, they cost no more to keep than do common ones, and they are far more profitable. I like the Yorkshire Canary best. To my mind it is one of the most graceful of our Canaries, and in addition is quite hardy.

On Pairing Up.

I generally breed with about fourteen hens and half as many cocks. Some people do not believe in pairing one cock with two hens. I have tried both ways. I had a buff cock last year for which I had only one hen, and I left him to help bring up the young. The day the young ones were due to hatch I looked to see if there were any, and found them all dead in the bottom of the cage with their legs broken and fearfully mutilated.

On the other hand, I had a very good hen that would not feed the first year. The next year I tried her again, but she left her eggs before they were due to hatch, and let them get cold. Then I thought I would leave the cock with her; the result was she fed well, as he would not let her sit too long on the nest, but sent her off to feed the young ones. They brought up not only their own young ones, but some from other nests that had too many.

Before pairing the birds I have the cages thoroughly cleaned and painted. I then paint every crack and crevice with paraffin as I find it keeps down the red mite better than anything I have tried.

When I have got the cages and the room all clean, I pair up the birds. They very seldom quarrel, but settle down to "housekeeping" at once, being in the best of health and ready for the breeding season weeks before the time. I think there is nothing like attending well to your birds during the winter months, giving plenty of good canary seed with a little German summer rape twice a week, clean water every day, and a bath every sunny day. A slice of apple now and again is greatly appreciated.

I use rather course sea sand, which I like better than any other. I select the hens for breeding as soon as I can, and turn them into the biggest flight I have. I never give egg food till they are paired up, as they do not seem to need any.

In and Out of the Egg.

I use terra-cotta nest pans on wire brackets, and I give the hens for building purposes, moss which has been previously dried in the oven, also some cow-hair to line the nests with. Before putting the nests in the breeding cages, I line them with soft woollen material, and paint the outside with paraffin. I remove the eggs every morning until the third evening, substituting a china egg. When I put the three eggs back, I sprinkle them well with Keating's Powder.

Every morning while the hen is laying I give her a teaspoonful of egg and bread crumbs made sweet with castor sugar. When she has finished laying I do not give her anything but plain canary seed and clean water every day. After the seventh day I give a bath, which is greatly appreciated and very refreshing to the hen. On the evening of the thirteenth day I give a supply of egg food and also some hemp.

When the young are three days old I give a small piece of watercress, lettuce, or groundsell, whichever I can get. I feed them with egg food four times a day, at about 9 o'clock in the morning, at dinner-time, at about 5 o'clock, and last thing at night, when I go in with a candle and fill up the egg tins again ready for the hens to feed from when they wake up in the morning.

I often go into my bird-room at this time, and never do so without looking at the bottom of all the cages which contain young birds, to see if any have fallen out of the nest. I have saved many a bird's life, even when they have been quite cold and to all appearance dead. I put them between my hands and breathe on them, and then hold them in front of the fire; if there is any trace of life left they soon recover and open their mouths to be fed.

On Preparing the Young Ones.

When the young are about three weeks old and leave the nest, I put them in a Yorkshire show cage (not having a nursery cage) which I hang in front of the breeding cage, so that the mother can feed them through the wires, but cannot pluck them. Then I put the cock back with the hen, and give the latter a clean nest and some more building material. I give the young ones some egg food, and as soon as I see them feeding themselves I put them into a breeding cage and gradually get them on to hard seed, which they can crack for themselves when six weeks old.

During the warm weather I give them a bath every day, which to my mind keeps them in better health than anything. There is nothing I dislike to see so much in a bird-room as birds with feet clogged and wings and tail bedraggled and dirty. Birds cannot be vigorous and healthy unless properly attended to. Sometimes when birds begin to feed themselves they seem to droop. When they do so I stop the egg-food and substitute bread soaked in hot sweetened milk, together with some crushed hemp seed, which seldom fails to bring them round.

When they are about eleven weeks old I put them on colour-feed, very weak at first, gradually getting them on to the right strength. I cannot understand some people thinking it cruel to colour-feed; all mine will eat it even if their tins are full of seed. The most difficult thing for me is to get them off colour-feed—not to get them on to it.

Towards the end of the moult I mix some crushed linseed with the colour-feed, in order to give the birds a gloss on their feathers. Twice a week I put a small piece of sulphate of iron in the drinking water for the purpose of fixing the colour.

I never cover them up, but I take care that the direct rays of the sun do not fall on them. Before they begin the moult I pick out all the best and moult them in twos; but I have often found them moult quite as well in flight cages.

Training for the Show Bench.

I think the most difficult thing in the showing of Yorkshire Canaries is training them to be steady in show cages. I hang a show cage on to their moulting or flight cages, and they soon learn to hop in and out. When they are quite used to the show cage I take it off and place it (with the bird in) on a table. Before I begin to feed the birds in the morning, I take about half-a-dozen birds in show cages and place them close to where I keep the seed. It takes less than five minutes getting them out and putting them back, and is the only way to get them steady. Some birds take a lot more training than others. Some I have got steady by taking out only once or twice; others I cannot get nearly so steady, though I have taken them out five or six times a day.

It is much better to have all birds trained to come into show cages, as they can be seen much better. If they are in flight cages, and you want any particular bird out, it is much easier to have them trained to come out than to have to catch them, as they become very terrified and will not show to advantage.

Then comes the show season, and everyone knows how essential it is to have everything as clean as possible. Washing a Canary is rather a difficult process at first, but with a little practice one can soon manage it.

In conclusion, I would strongly recommend anyone who has the spare time and is a lover of the "feathered tribe," to try this fancy. I am certain that if they have patience and perseverance enough they are sure to succeed.

The Story of "Tommy" the Blackbird.

By MRS. F. E. RICHARDSON GRIFFITHS.

In this chatty article is related an interesting chapter of the life of a pet Blackbird, which, though christened Tommy, laid eggs and reared a family in captivity.

It was at a garden party in June, 1904, that I first encountered "Tommy." Just before leaving, my hostess invited me with some of her other guests to take a stroll round her pleasant shady grounds. In a secluded spot loud shrieks of terror fell upon our ears, and we soon beheld a tragedy. The family cat had pounced upon a plump young bird, which was uttering most agonising cries. To rescue the poor victim was the work of a moment, and the cat was borne away to the house looking back over its mistress's shoulder with an expression of baffled longing at the plump and appetising morsel of which it had been deprived.

Having rescued the bird, I now considered it to be the captive of my bow and spear, and bore it home in triumph in a paper bag. It proved to be a young Blackbird just out of the nest, and quite unhurt except for a very slight injury to the wing by which the cat had seized it.

It was quite unable to feed itself, but took worms from our fingers. I was most anxious that little "Tommy," as I named it, should live, and next morning rose from my bed at 4 o'clock to have a look at the bird. He was alive. Quickly I dressed myself and went out to the garden carrying the little cage, in which he had spent the night. I soon procured some worms, and to my joy Tommy evidently thought I was his mother and 'gaped' in the most satisfactory manner. From that day I became a slave.

A Domesticated Pet.

I had just begun to take in CAGE BIRDS. Having bought a pair of Canaries I thought I would take in the paper for a few weeks, just to put me in the way of their management. Three years have passed, and I am still taking it and would not miss a number on any consideration. I found a most interesting article therein on the rearing of young Thrushes and Blackbirds and studied their treatment eagerly.

Tommy throve well on the prescribed diet, but would not feed himself for many days. I am sure he could have done so, but preferred to make his willing slave wait upon him. Soon I purchased a proper cage. Tommy would come out to take a bath in a pie dish on the floor, and would take a bit of bread from my mouth; in short, the bird became a great pet. While still young poor Tommy had a terrible illness, through being hung outside just after the bath. A chilly wind was blowing, and I found the poor bird lying on his side unable to move. He was taken indoors and placed in a basket in which was also a hot water bottle. Everything was done that we could think of; but the bird seemed to be in terrible pain and we despaired of saving his life. All that day he remained in the basket, and was fed on bread and milk. By next day, however, he had quite recovered, but all his beautiful tail feathers had come out, and for some time the bird presented quite a "Manx-cat-like" appearance.

Just a Slight Error!

It was gradually borne in upon us that we had made a slight mistake as to the sex of Tommy, but we decided to submit "him" to the milkman for an opinion. The verdict of that worthy, delivered with some evident contempt for our ignorance, was "That's an 'en Blackbird, Mum!"

And so he was!

I know more about birds now, and could not make such a mistake again. What was to be done? To part with our pet was not to be thought of; so, though deprived of the music we had hoped for, Tommy still remained an honoured inmate of our home.

The following Spring it occurred to me that Tommy wished for a mate. I had a small aviary made for her outside, where she could take plenty of exercise and, a boy having procured for me a nest of five young Blackbirds whose tail feathers were just sprouting, I set to work to hand-rear Tommy's future husband. One of the birds seemed weakly and died, and the four others were all hens!

I kept them till the autumn, and then opened the aviary door and let them go. One, which I had named "Chickey," was very loath to depart, and next morning my husband met her in the garden, a sad object indeed, having evidently not at all benefited by her freedom. She thankfully accepted a beetle from his hands, and from that day has been an out-door pensioner and is generally to be found somewhere near the aviary which is Tommy's home.

Tommy has a Mate.

The following spring I was lucky enough to find a young cock Blackbird which had had its wing hurt and was unable to fly. It never became as tame as it might have been had it been hand-reared, but last year Tommy built a beautiful nest, laid five eggs, and was the proud mother of four young ones. Three of them soon died—the fourth, a cock, had been out of the nest some days when I saw the parents 'hustle' it and refuse to feed it any more. I took the little creature away from them, but it was too old to hand-rear and next day it was dead.

After this, Tommy laid four more eggs, but the nest slipped down and the eggs were broken. It seemed as if she were to have no luck. This spring she again showed signs of wishing to nest and I provided her with plenty of dried grass and moist clay. The cock bird was in splendid condition, singing beautifully, and one morning out he flew right over my head when I opened the aviary door! Poor Tommy! Her nest was still unfinished, but she continued to work away at it with feverish energy.

I did not know what to do, but at last I decided to let my pet go as I feared she would be very miserable without her mate. She declined to go, however, but came into the house, sat on my head, and gave the liveliest demonstrations of her affection for me. Twice I let her go, and twice she followed me into the house twittering joyfully to me with outstretched neck.

A Family of Three.

On being put back in the aviary Tommy completed her nest, but I had little hope of her eggs being fertile. The faithless husband was seen two or three times close to his old home, and then he came no more, having evidently taken to himself another wife. It was not till he had been gone a little more than a week that Tommy laid four eggs and sat on them for fourteen days when, rather to my surprise, she hatched three fine young Blackbirds. The fourth egg was not fertile.

These have done well, and have been attended to with the greatest devotion by their mother. They are now (at time of writing this) thirteen days old and are fully feathered and should be out of the nest very soon. At first Tommy fed them upon nothing but worms, grubs, and other live food, and the task of procuring these for her in sufficient quantity was no light one. I was therefore very glad to see her feeding them with the food she always has in the aviary—ground oats, ants' eggs and dried flies mixed with grated carrot, or chickweed. At the time I noticed her giving them this there were worms in the box, and she has had quantities of live food all the time she has been attending to her children, but it has been a comfort to know that when the supply of live food ran short she would fill up the gaps with this.

I have had much pleasure and not a little hard work in connection with "Tommy," but never have I regretted the day when I rescued her plump little body from the cruel jaws of the cat.

Birds of the Marshes.

At this time of the year there is no place like the mud flats and marshes by the sea coast in which to study the habits of many birds. Some of them which breed far away upon the mountain slopes and high moors, collect in large flocks and make their way to the coast upon the approach of winter. One of the most interesting of these is the beautiful Golden Plover. The flocks of these are exceedingly shy and wary, and most difficult to approach, they rise into the air before one can get near them, protesting loudly against the intrusion, soaring to a great height, and performing most graceful revolutions. During migration, when thousands of these pretty birds pass from north to south, they feed frequently by night, and when the moon glistens upon the wet mud-flats they may be seen running here and there in search of their favourite foods. It is probable that our British birds go far south, and it is birds from farther north that we occasionally see upon the marshes round the south coast.

Chapter I.—The Pleasures and Pains of Aviculture.

I sometimes think that the pleasures of aviculture resemble those problem plays of which we hear so much, and acquire beauty according to the square of the district. It is related of Solon that when someone asked him why he had never married, he gave no answer at the time; but within a few hours procured a servant to run into a room to tell the man who had asked him the question that his only son was drowned, and when he saw the agonies into which the poor father was thrown, observed that he had given the reason why he had never married. I sometimes think that Solon was right. I have felt as melancholy over some of my losses as though I had been editing a comic paper. Readers who, like supercilious Mr. Peter Magnus, are not fond of anything original, had better skip these articles. If, with young Marlow in "She Stoops to Conquer," they can say more good-naturedly, "He's a character, and I'll humour him," let them proceed.

In the following pages I am going to relate actual personal experiences, sometimes very sad and bitter, but all literally true. I have kept and studied birds for more years than I sometimes care to remember, but that is no reason why my statements should be doubted, unless you are of the opinion of the late Montague Williams, that the longer a policeman had been in the force, the less you should believe him.

The longer I live the more it is borne in upon me how very little we know about birds, compared with what is to be known, and the phrase so often on Newman's lips, "We know so little!" is just superseding the formula of cocksureness in the language of avicultural speculation. What I am going to relate hereafter is not intuitive wisdom on my part, but all has been gathered slowly and painfully among the thorns of experience. I shall never venture to say of anything, "This is sub-intellectum," as the theologians do when they take a great deal for granted.

In the past I have generally resolved on a similar plan to that adopted by "Koko" in Mr. Gilbert's "Mikado," who, with a view to becoming perfect as an executioner, was going to begin with a guinea-pig and work his way through to the second trombone. It's expensive, but it's eminently satisfactory; but then, as Adam said when he found Eve in the garden, "We're born to trouble!" You know how the ghost told Hamlet he could a tale unfold whose lightest word would harrow up his soul? Why, I could tell five-score and still not have exhausted my stock-in-trade.

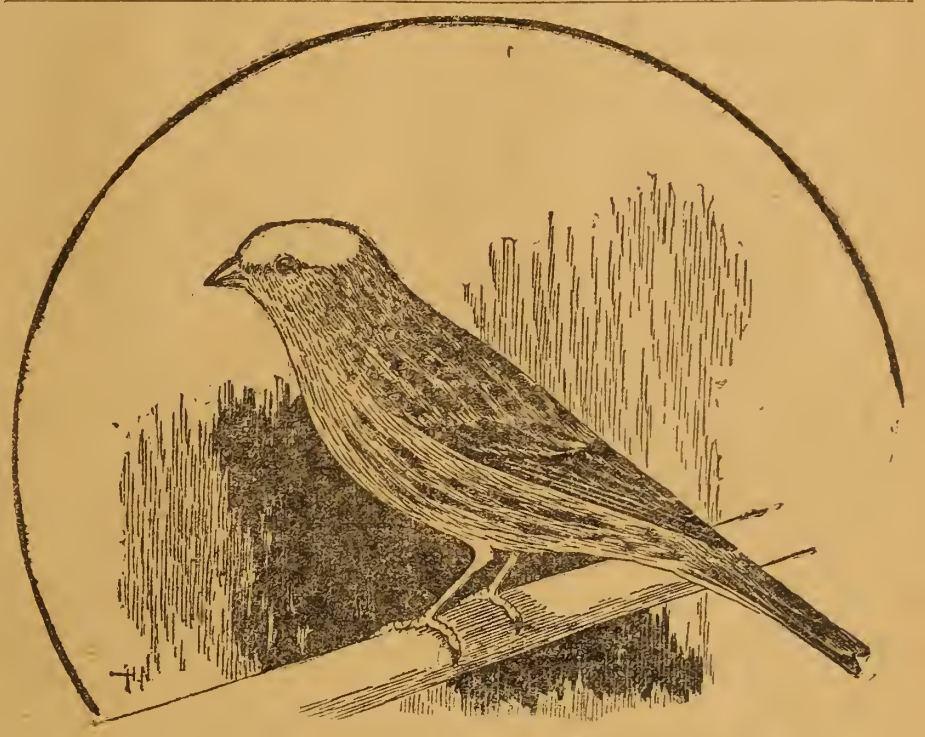
I make no claim to omniscience. I am not much more ignorant than other men of my age, but I never pretend to know what I do not, and if I don't know anything I am not beyond asking for information, like poor Rose Dartle. I am always open to correction, but if I have doubt as to my informant, I am very much like the Scotchman, "a dour devil to convince." Many of the statements that I have read in the bird papers are so strange and weird that they remind one of the Oxford undergraduate who wrote in his examination in reply to a question on the Life of our Lord "these facts are not related in the gospels, and there is no allusion to them in the Fathers, but they are fully detailed by Dr. Farrar." But it is only a doctor who can make people swallow anything either in drugs or in statements.

We have all, I suppose, some small jealousy. I think, at least I trust, I am not quite abnormal in this, as I do like to see a swallow, hear a cuckoo, eat a strawberry, before anyone else.

Above all things I like to be able to do in bird-life what nobody else has done before. Are we not told of Achilles that he loved to be first in the battle? Do you remember how gardeners sometimes place flower pots on sticks above dahlias and put a hat peg in the bottom and all the earwigs and nasty creepy things climb up them and then the men come round in the morning, take off the pot and kill all the "beasties?" What has bird-keeping done for me? It seems to draw all the dark and gloomy thoughts away from my mind and heart. I know that if ever I develop criminal qualities it will be because I have no birds.

I have sometimes seen advice given to beginners which fairly "settled" me, as the Americans say. I felt inclined to ask the writer whether he had ever kept birds. It put me in mind of the sly words of Mr. Helliwell Sutcliffe, in one of his books. "Yo put me i' mind of Parson, that ye do. Parson wer up here yester'een, an he axed me how things wer going. N'er so well, says I, and the Parson says, Don't be downcast, says he, God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb. Parson, says I, looking slantways at him, did ye ever go in for sheep rearing? 'Nay, says he. I thowt not, says I, sches, master it fair raffles me whiles I hear folk talking o' what they do'ant understand."

In aviculture it is the difficulties that add a zest to life. There would not be any fun in a thing if we all could do it. There is a kind of zest in walking on the edge of a beautiful precipice that would be lost if we had wings. A man must overcome opposition, face ridicule, turn the other cheek, have patience and wait ten years and then if not broken down by contumely and drudgery, perhaps something else, he will get his reward. It is the old, old story of the Port of Bethesda that we so often find strongly expressed in bird-life, "while we are coming another steppeth down before us." I have found this again and again. After years of endeavour, after buying some rare and expensive pairs of birds, after getting them breed, I have opened the Avicultural Magazine to find that some mere tyro, by a strange bit of luck, has managed to forestall me, and at the imminent risk of something inside giving way under the strain, I have managed to restrain myself. But I feel certain that I looked as dejected as the ruined gambler in a very celebrated picture. I felt as dull as Sterndale and Hopkins. Many a deed is done in birddom recorded only in that book, which holds the names of those men or animals, souls or no souls, who tried. If you succeed be thankful. If you fail, remember fallen Wolsey's words to Cromwell, "I charge thee, fling away ambition," recall also Luther's message to Milanethen, "Tell Philip to leave off thinking that he's going to rule the world." Of aviculture it is true as of everything else. Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might. Even in our recreation we should aim at perfection rather than remain on a dead level or become an all-round duffer. We should take as our motto, "Quod facio, vali facio." Some men, I know, attain to such stupendous heights of bird knowledge that I feel before them like the insignificant worm. They produce in me that feeling of "dropping down deadness of manner" which Sydney Smith once said that Bishops loved to see in their clergy.



And now I will end, or perhaps someone will be saying of me what a plain-spoken old woman said to her Scotch Minister. "Well, Janet, and how did you like my sermon yesterday?" "A weel, Minister, since ye hae speared, I maun just tell ye that I had three objections to it. In the first place ye read every word of it; in the second place ye did na read it weel, and in the third place it was n'a worth readin."

STRAY NOTES ON WILD BIRDS.

How Birds are Destroyed.

The big punt gun has been responsible for some heavy wild fowl bags. It is something between an ordinary gun and a small cannon, and is worked upon a swivel in the bow of the boat; it carries a much larger load than an ordinary gun, and will kill much farther. As a proof of its destructiveness, Booth records that he once shot seventy Knots and twenty four Goodwits with one discharge. These were actually picked up, and half as many more were swept away by the flowing tide. Fortunately the Wild Birds Protection Act has prevented much of this work, or some species by now would be almost extinct.

A SOUTH-COUNTRY LIZARD CANARY.

A Nest of Starlings.

The number of eggs laid by a Starling is generally from four to six. For some unaccountable reason they seldom all hatch out, but three nests I knew of last season contained, one of them three and the other two four young ones each. Where bird life is concerned there is no hard and fast rule, as the health and state of condition are important factors in the reproduction of the species. As an instance of how easily one may be mistaken, some time ago a well-known naturalist and keen observer stated that the Missel-Thrush laid four eggs, never more, and rarely less. I have a full clutch of three in my possession, and one of two, and have seen a clutch of five eggs all hard set. But the rule is undoubtedly four eggs to the clutch. A week ago I saw it stated in print that the Starling was single brooded, and another writer distinctly says it is double brooded.

The Roosting Sparrow.

Although the House Sparrow is almost a domesticated bird, he has not yet quite deserted wild nature's ways. He still loves to roost in the trees and shrubs, although many snug corners may be found around the chimney stacks and under the eaves of the dwellings in town. About an hour before sundown small flocks begin to make their way to the parks and open spaces in London. These flocks are of all sizes, and number anything from a dozen to a hundred birds. No doubt the first few starters collect others as they proceed, a few being added here and a few there. It is quite interesting to watch them coming in; the stream is continuous right up to the setting of the sun, and the chatter from the trees continues for some time afterwards. There can be no question concerning the hardiness of the Sparrow, he will always roost in some favourite tree, no matter what the weather is like.

The Selection of Norwich and Yorkshire Canaries for Stock.

By J. C. BARNES.

The two varieties with which I wish to deal are the two most popular breeds, viz., Norwich Plainheads and Yorkshires, and my remarks will, I hope, help the beginners in our ranks who aspire to "exhibition form." Having been a breeder of these two classes of Canaries for many years, and having gained a fair amount of success on the show bench, what I am about to write and advise will be exactly what I have found, by careful study and by practical experience, to be the quickest and surest way to success. Every true fancier's ambition is to produce something worth looking at, and from which he will derive pleasure. Let your watchword be progression; do not be satisfied with sticking in one position—"Get on," and don't be left behind in the race. Perseverance is the secret of success.

Some 15 years ago, in my novice days, the advice one saw published was very meagre. There was no CAGE BIRDS then. To-day it is far different. New beginners can gain much genuine information by scanning every week the columns of CAGE BIRDS. The Fancy has much to thank this most popular (and pioneer) journal for.

Correct Norwich Points.

Taking the Norwich Plainhead first, one must bear in mind that the correct bird should be short and cobby, with feather of a silky texture. The colour of a specimen is also a great consideration; substance must also be in evidence, and the head should be round with a nice rise from the beak. The neck must be short and thick, the chest deep and of good breadth across, the back broad and straight (not a "roach" back), and the wings should be short, and should meet at the tips, and not overlap. The tail also should be short, closely folded, and carried straight (not droopy). The eye should be round and bold (not half-moon shape, brought about by browing), and the cheeks should be somewhat prominent. Endeavour to procure a bird of jaunty carriage, quick in movement, and not of a languid description. Phlegmatic specimens I do not care for—the "happy-go-lucky" fellows are those that capture the firsts and specials.

The Stock Cocks.

In selecting my stock, I like substance on the male side. I am not against having a cock bird which has a little more feather than pleases the eye, providing it is of silky texture; indeed, the majority of large birds carry superfluous feather. A bird with a good broad head suits me best; if it should "brow" a little I do not discard it. In most cases birds breed youngsters narrower in head than themselves, and birds very often come with the entrance far too narrow to make them good ones. My contention is, therefore, that by breeding with stock cocks that are extra broad (which makes them appear sulky), you often get youngsters correct in head character.

I must have thick necks if possible. I detest thin ones, as they are a bugbear. You cannot get a neck too thick. Heads and necks are the hardest parts of a Norwich bird to get perfect, or anything approaching to perfect, so keep a strict eye on these two very necessary items.

As regards the other essentials of the male: have size, with the wings and tail as short as you can get them. Another very important thing in cocks is their colour; it should be bright, and not bricky or dull. In breeding operations it is generally admitted that size and colour come from the male parent; this I quite endorse. Remember to avoid pinched and flat-headed birds, thin necks, overlapping flights, droopy tails, long barrels, and stilty legs.

The Stock Hens.

Good hens are an essential to success in high-class breeding; without such you will not climb very high. Type and quality, two of the greatest qualifications, come from the female. A hen of medium size is my choice. I found out long ago that you procure your best youngsters from such.

Large hens, as a rule, are coarse in feather, languid in movement, have a bad carriage, and are not over good feeders their smaller sisters, on the other hand, are quicker in action, smarter in carriage, and are decidedly better feeders. Bear in mind that young birds well fed for the first few days of their existence have a sound foundation provided, which paves the way to success.

The feather I like to see on a hen is of a soft, silky texture, close and compact, and not at all harsh. The shape of a hen should be short and thick through, cleanly cut away around thighs, short legs just showing the hock, and with as much of its body in front of the perch, and as little behind as possible.

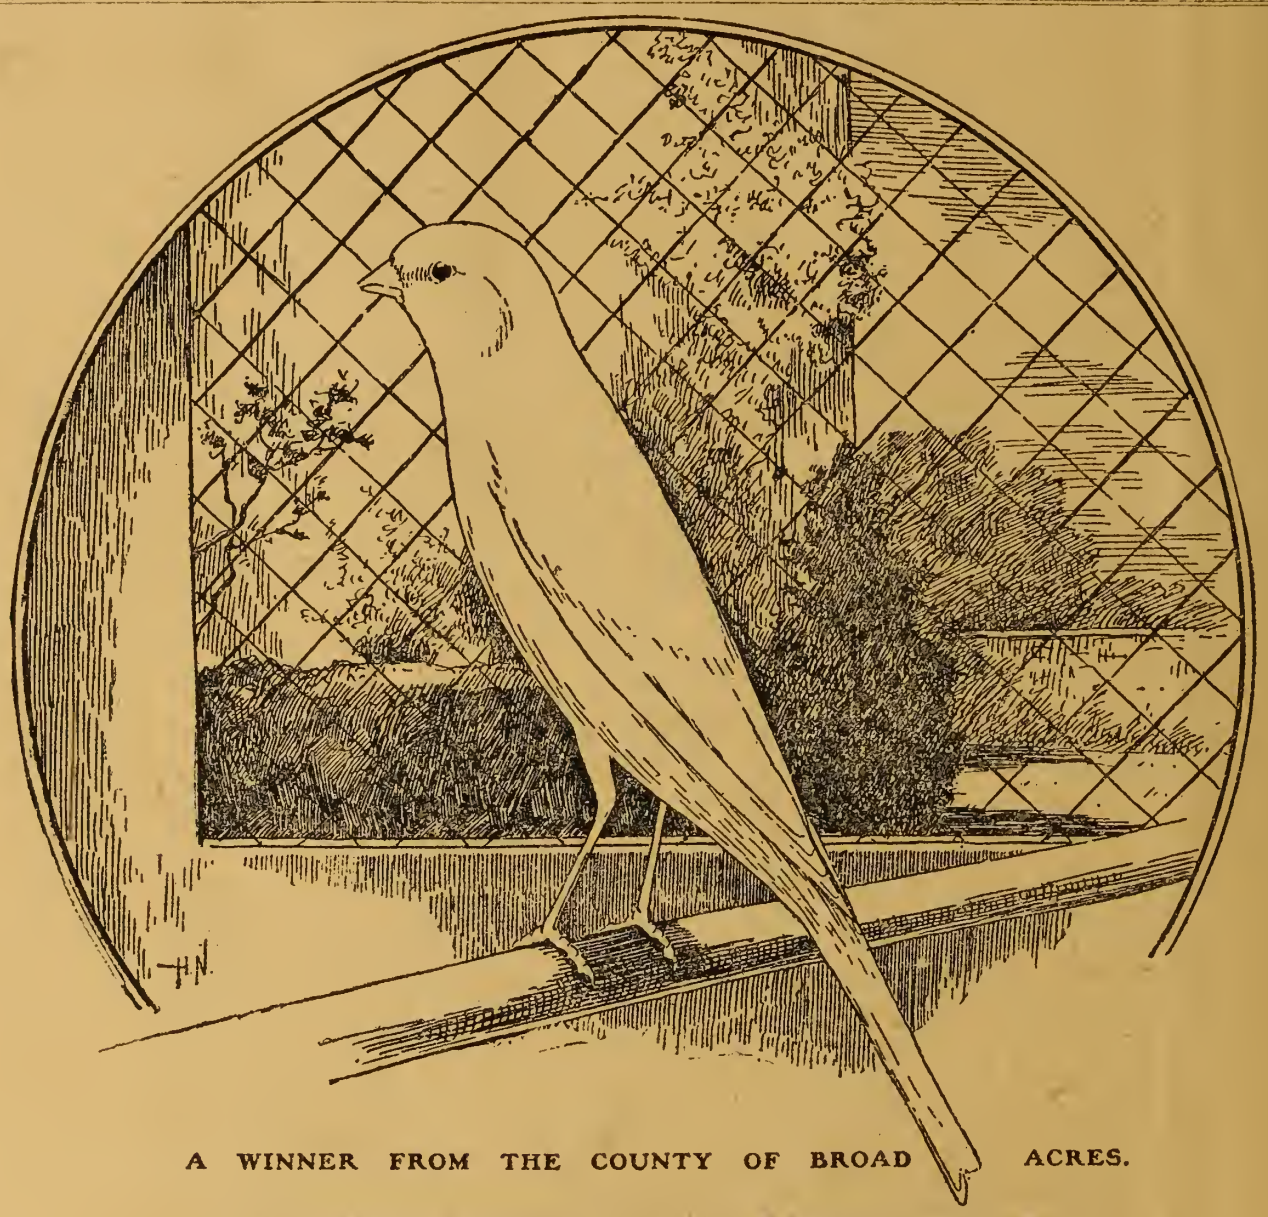
As far as possible have nothing to do with birds with clear bodies, but with marked heads ("cap marked," as it is termed in the Fancy). Such a marking as this tends to spoil the outline of the bird. It also often appears to make a bird look narrow in head. Both these appearances are blemishes which tell very much against a specimen. Again, birds marked on the saddle are not to be encouraged, nor birds marked on breast with otherwise clear bodies; these I shun. Grizzled tails also are not favoured very much by me.

Neat and suitable markings that find favour with almost everyone are such as both wings and one eye marked, or one wing and both eyes marked; or, again, one wing marked. Any of these are attractive, and they do not tend to spoil a bird's finish or outline.

When Mating Up.

Always endeavour to mate one clear bird and one marked bird. It does not signify much which is the marked one. By so pairing you will breed youngsters both clear and ticked, suitable for the present-day classification. I might here say that by using a marked cock you are apt to breed more marked youngsters than you would if you utilised a marked hen with clear cock. The hen breeds the markings out quicker than does the cock.

Always try and rectify a failing in one or other of your birds by pairing up to one which is strong in that particular point. If the cock is rather long-sided, pair him to a very short-sided hen; or, if the hen is rather weak in head, pair her to a cock with an extra good head, and so on. The usual method, as is generally known, is that one of the birds must be yellow and the other buff. For my own purposes I prefer a buff cock paired to a yellow hen; I find you get the best results in this way.



Never pair up stock that is not sound in health. If you do you will repent it. Unhealthy birds are not worth harbouring. To become a successful fancier you must consider robustness of constitution. No matter how good a hen may have been, if it has gone amiss shun the bird, and don't persuade yourself to use it. It is not what a thing has been, it is what it is that's most important.

I have often been asked my opinion as regards results obtained by running one cock with one or two hens. My firm belief is that if you are breeding for the show bench one cock to one hen is by far the best method. The youngsters you get by this procedure are larger and stronger by far than those you would get if you ran your cock bird with more than one hen. Of course, should you require birds for singing purposes only, you can with advantage utilise one cock with two or even more hens.

The Yorkshire Considered.

We will now turn to the Yorkshires—birds of "Grace and Beauty," as they are often termed. The three great essentials an up-to-date specimen must possess are length, position, and quality.

In an exhibition bird you must have soft, silky texture of feather fitting tightly to the body; no loose feather should be seen. The bird should appear as though chiselled out of marble, and should carry a polish.

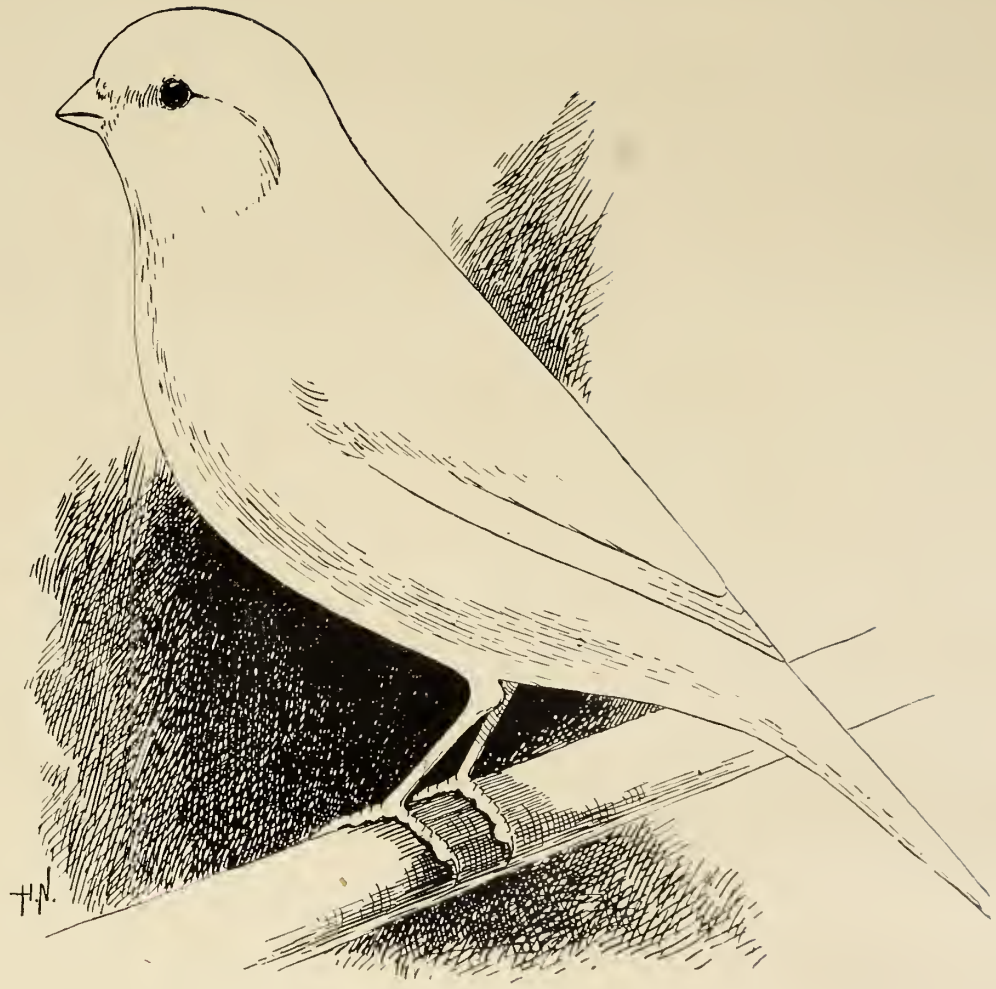
On Colour and Markings.



Variegation (or green blood) is the fountain-head of colour; this I have proved over and over again. I am never without a fair amount of dark blooded birds in my room, as I know their value. Depth of colour, so necessary on the show bench nowadays, I am fully convinced, cannot be got without the assistance of dark blood. At times you may have read of someone speaking against variegation, but let me advise you not to be misled by any such assertions. As sure as there is yolk in eggs so is there colour in variegation. Observe for yourself; should you have the opportunity of visiting a good show, inspect the various specimens, and you will invariably find that the ticked and marked birds are much better in colour than the clears. I do not say that you will not come across one or two clears that compare very favourably with the marks for colour, but in many cases, in fact, I venture to say in nearly all cases, those clears have been bred from marked or variegated parents.

Again the bird must stand erect—as straight as a rush, in a manner of speaking. The length must be at least 6¾ inches; if a little more all the better, say 6⅞ inches. I have seen many birds looking well over seven inches long do a lot of winning at one period or another.

The head of a Yorkie should be nice and round, with a good eye placed not too near the beak. The neck should be fairly long, with just a shadow of thinness showing, and the back should be well filled in. The wings should be long, and built up of nice broad feather (not pin feather), fitting closely to the body. The breast must be solid and not frilly, while the body should be wedge-shaped, with neat, long waist. The tail should be long and neatly folded, and the legs of good length, well showing the thighs, the latter covered over with nice short silky feather. The bird should be sound on feet, and should possess nerve and swagger.

The Rise and Progress of my Foreign Bird Contingent.

By W. R. SMELLIE, M.A.

"I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood,
Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres,
Thy knotted and combined locks to part,
And each particular hair to stand on end
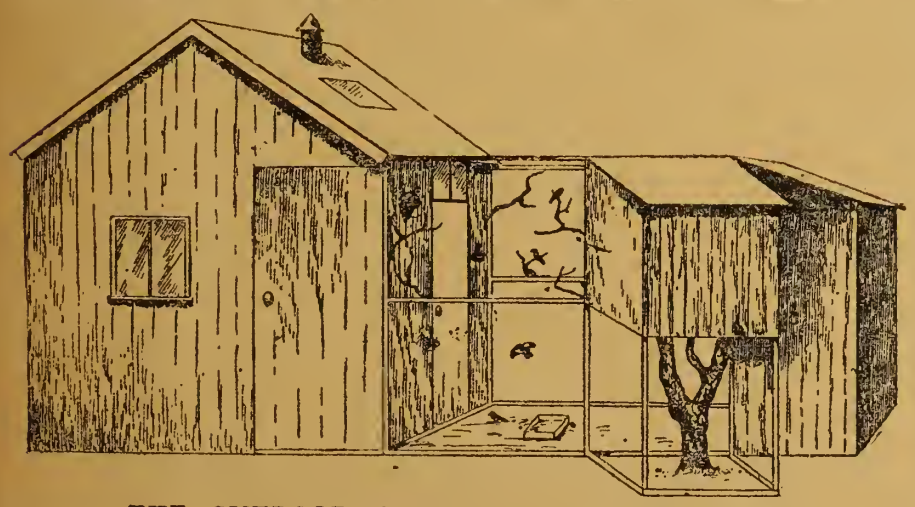
HAMLET.



Occasionally we find the novice armed only with blind luck and ignorance achieving results that the man of experience would scarcely dare even to hope for. However, the people thus favoured by the gods are few and far between, and most of us have got to acquire both our goods and our knowledge by the ordinary rough road. The royal road is barred to us. Indeed my first experiences of foreign birds form, when related, a harrowing tale much akin to that which the ghost in "Hamlet" could unfold.

The Natural Result of Ignorance.

Possessing a fair-sized out-door aviary (8 foot by 6 foot by 6 foot) connected with an inside portion, I resolved to try my hand at keeping foreign birds, seeing I had been fairly successful with British birds. In carrying out this good resolution, my initial ignorance, spiced with ill-luck, helped me to build up an experience which, if communicated to brother novices, may save them many a coin, many a sigh and perchance a swear.

In the hardest frost I could pick I sent off a postal order to an advertiser in CAGE BIRDS for a pair of Bengalese and a pair of Avadavats. These little beauties arrived, coming all the way from London to the heart of Scotland, being little the worse for their long journey. I may say here that they came neatly packed in a travelling cage with plenty of seed. They were sent away at night, I got them the following morning and their fare was sixpence. After a long, cold journey they should have had some warmth and some water with a little brandy or chemical food in it, and should have been kept indoors till the mild weather came. But I did not possess this knowledge then and the result was disastrous.

Up to this time I had only perused the foreign bird section of CAGE BIRDS in a kind of half-interested casual manner, with the result that I had only half-knowledge and disconnected facts to go on. One disconnected fact was responsible for killing the birds. I knew that foreigners lived in out-door aviaries even in winter, but I did not know that they had to be acclimatised.

THE OUTDOOR AVIARY OF MR. SMELLIE.

Relying on this I put these delicate little birds out in the aviary, in the inside part, of course, but next morning alas! four corpses, stiff and stark, greeted my astonished gaze. The little cock Avadavat with his splendid plumage, red beak and extreme tinyness, made my unwitting cruelty appear a heinous crime. The lesson to be drawn from this is, "Never buy in winter unless you get acclimatised birds or supply artificial heat."

Undaunted by this calamity, I immediately bought a pair of Spice Birds and a pair of Mannikins. Profiting by past experience, I kept these in the house, but one had some disease of the throat. This I failed to isolate—result, four more corpses within a fortnight. Moral:—Separate the healthy and the unhealthy. At this point, my bad luck ran itself out, and now my foreigners live their allotted span, giving me time to enjoy them and observe their habits.

Fickle Dame Fortune Smiles.

The severe lesson I had had, kept me from worrying the Post Office officials, buying postal orders till the spring came. Then again I took the field and purchased a pair of White-headed Love Birds. These were cheap and hardy, but of a lazy, morose and melancholy disposition, which, combined with their cold-blooded villainy, has kept me from ever having any fondness for them. They, like the rest of my foreigners, live mainly on white millet and Canary seed, and they eat at such a rapid rate that at first I could not believe they shelled the seed at all.

They have another peculiarity connected with their feeding; most birds feed a little pick at a time, and are always at it, but these birds believe in having one good gormandise, and then a long fast. This could perhaps be explained if we knew more about them in their wild state. Between the meals they sit like the "Boys of the Old Brigade," shoulder to shoulder, occasionally breaking the monotony by making cowardly grabs at some unoffending bird that happens to come near, and woe betide it if once you hooked beak grips it.

Again they will amuse themselves by soberly performing a few gymnastic tricks, and, as a last resort, they have a sedate fight with each other. Altogether they are a most unsuitable bird for an aviary of small birds. This fact will be more evident when I further expose their villainy later on.

Champion Light-Weights.

I next sent for a pair of White-bellied Mannikins and a pair of Avadavats. They arrived in excellent health, only the Avadavats turned out to be Red-cheek Waxbills. But I didn't mind that in the least, as they have proved themselves to be interesting, bold little fellows. So small are they that I marvel they don't slip through the half-inch mesh wire netting. In fact their magnificent stature earned for them the name of the "microbes" and (to draw the long bow) when they tackled a meal worm I was'nt sure sometimes "which would eat t'other."

However, these little chaps are not to be bullied by any bird, no matter what its fighting weight is. I have watched them repeatedly fighting and beating birds three and four times their weight. Their beak, like Fitz-James' blade, is both sword and shield. They use it both to strike and to guard, which I know of no other bird doing to the same extent. In fact I have seldom seen them getting a peck at all in a fair fight.

They are very fond of a bath in the sunshine and their temerity in the water is appalling. The bath, when a proper depth for other birds, takes them up to the neck, but they plunge fearlessly in and splash and splutter, good oh! Though daring, they are wary, and if a cat comes in sight their warning "chee-hee-up" is the first alarm signal given, followed generally by the "ja-ack" of the Bramble-finch. Many a cat is deeply indebted to them for the slug or dart it gets from my never failing air-pistol.

In summing up concerning these little Waxbills, I would say if you have a pair rejoice and be exceeding glad, if not, buy, borrow or steal a pair, but don't on any account come trying to steal mine.

The Mannikins, although by no means such lively little sprites as the Waxbills, are nevertheless well worth keeping. They are quiet, peaceable, interesting little fellows, always together and looking just like old Indian sagamores—the way they sit crouched up quietly surveying all around.

Luck on Luck.

My lucky star was still in the ascendant, for I got a pair of young aviary-bred Budgerigars given me. These showed their youth and baby plumage by having no yellow tuft of feathers on the front of the head. Soon, however, they acquired their adult plumage, and prepared to nest. The hen, however, probably on account of her youth and plumpness, was egg-bound, sitting moping with ruffled plumage, laboured breath and swollen, heaving abdomen. Two hours steaming and oiling gave the required relief, but it was sometime before she regained her usual health and she neither sat the egg nor laid any more.

This mishap put an end to breeding operations for some time. They are restless, enterprising, amusing birds. The bathing operations of the Waxbills are funny, but the antics of the Budgerigars surpass everything. Their shortness of leg seems to make them very nervous about entering the water, but on the other hand they seem in a frenzy for a bath when they see the other birds spluttering and sending the spray all around. They are thus on the horns of a dilemma, wishing for a bath and yet afraid to venture. They attempt to solve the difficulty in a very off-hand manner. They watch till a small bird is in and then try to leap on to its back and make a stepping stone of it. The stepping stone naturally resents this and makes off.

The next plan of these knowing birds is to hold on to the side of the bath with one powerful foot, while with the other foot and the wings they make quite a creditable splutter.

Feminine Jealousy and its Results.

I now got another hen in a present, and having heard that it was customary to run one cock with two hens just as with Canaries, I determined not to buy another cock. The result was a miserable failure of the worst sort, for the jealousy of the two hens spoiled all. They fought for the same husk, laid and then broke each others eggs and nearly broke my heart. And such a row did they make, that little would have made me break their necks.

I, however, removed the much sought after husk and managed to get one hen to lay and sit four eggs. While she was in the husk the cock was going to put the other hen to nest, and his amorous ongoings so irritated the sitting hen that she had frequently to leave the husk to punish the other hen and scold her faithless mate. Both operations she performed with much skill and more zeal.

Incubation, under such circumstances, could hardly be successful, but she managed to hatch out two. One died immediately, but the other did well for about a week, till the mother in one of her hurried punitive exits dragged the little fellow out and I found him dead below the husk.

"No more 'Mormon' work for me," quoth I, and I at once procured another cock Budgerigar. This more natural arrangement works excellently and breeding operations are progressing favourably. These birds I find to be specially well suited for an aviary and they do not bully the little birds to any serious extent. Perhaps I have got extra good natured ones, but I have found them nice birds for an aviary and no tyrants and I would have no hesitation in recommending them to any aviculturist, even one with a mixed collection.

I have purchased Spice Birds, Green Avadavats, Cutthroats, and several other varieties, all of which are beautiful, interesting and amusing, but I will only relate the history of the Cutthroats, and of one Green Avadavat.

The history of the Avadavat is soon told, for he perished the first day I got them, done to death by a Love-Bird. The foreigners like to sit close together, for warmth I suppose, and the little Green Avadavat, ignorant no doubt of the surly nature of the Love-bird, had tried to sit close to him. The poor little fellow got a nasty compound fracture of the skull for his pains, and had I been able to lay hands on the murderer at the time, he would have got a compound jerked neck with various other complications.

The Cutthroats are great favourites of mine. The cock looks as if he had got a nasty slash across the throat sometime in his youth. During the month of June my bird fairly coloured up, and the red slash stood out like raised plush.

Mule and Hybrid Breeding Experiences.

By MARGARET E. M. HEWITT.

An interesting account of a lady's experiences of the "ups-and-downs" of Mule and Hybrid breeding, from which much practical information is to be gleaned.

I turned my attention first to Linnet Mules as a friend had made me a present of a hand-reared Linnet, and I had already a young variegated hen Canary named "Twitters." The young couple set up housekeeping in one of the side divisions of my Crystal Palace aviary, and while "Twitters" was building the nest, "Taffy," the Linnet, used to amuse himself by pulling little bits of wood out of the nest to the floor of the cage, where, apparently in an ecstasy of delight, he would twist round and round, fluttering his wings all the time.

An Early Decree Nisi.

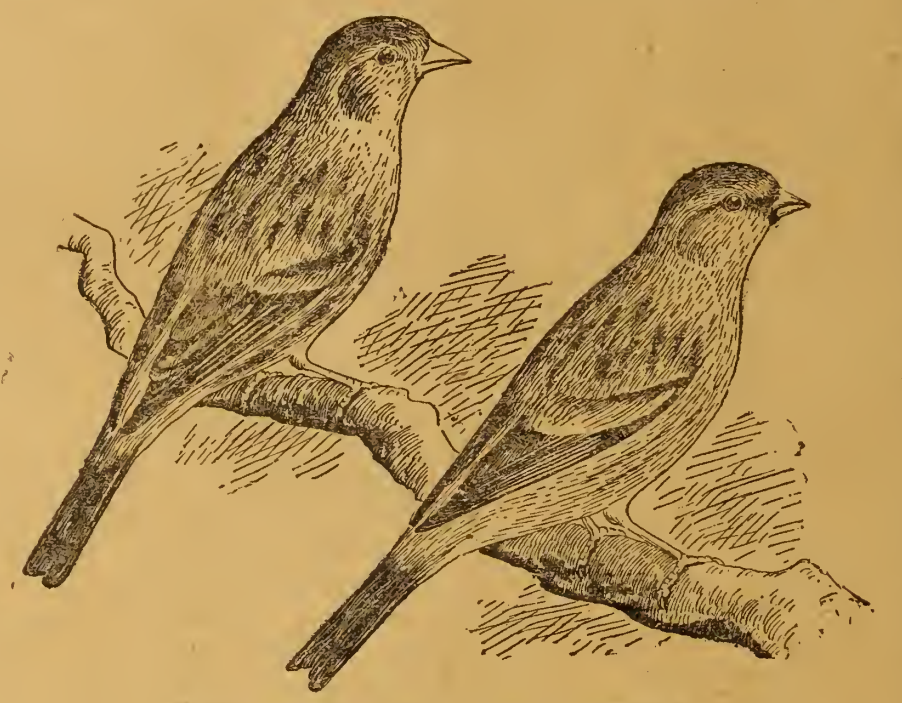
This I then thought very pretty and amusing; but I thought differently when, after the young birds were hatched, I found him playing the same game on the sand at the bottom of the cage, only this time, instead of a piece of wool, he had one of his children in his beak, held by the little tuft of grey down at the top of its head. After this "Taffy" had to be removed for a time.

There was only one cock bird in this first brood of four, and a very fine fellow he was, very much larger than either his father or mother or his three plain sisters, and although he was quite an ordinary dark Linnet-Mule, he was very much admired for his extremely tight, glossy plumage, large size and elegant figure.

Once I was persuaded to give 8s. for a Linnet because he had been the father of some variegated Mules, and the younger birds I bred from him certainly had a few pure white feathers in tail and wings, but such slight variegation is rather a blemish than an improvement.

How a Cinnamon Mule was Bred.

By far the most interesting Linnet-Mule that I ever reared is my Cinnamon Linnet-Mule, which was hatched under the following circumstances: I had long since discarded my Crystal Palace aviary, and I had at the time of which I am writing a bird-room, in which about thirty birds flew about at their own sweet will. Besides Canaries, Goldfinches, Siskins, and Redpolls, I had two Linnets, both of which were sold to me as cock birds. One of them that I had bought on the 15th of July, and had named "Swithun," was particularly tame, and would feed from the hand. I do not know its former history, but I should say it had very likely been hand-reared.



The following spring I found it was building a nest in a square wooden nest-box that was hung up against the wall in the bird-room, and, to my surprise and delight, it laid five eggs, and sat splendidly, only coming off the nest for food. This is, I believe, an unusual thing for a Linnet to do in captivity. I never saw the other Linnet take any notice of "Swithun," but I began to hope that I might succeed in rearing some young Linnets, or, possibly, some Mules. The eventful day arrived when the eggs should hatch, and I hurried up to the bird-room to find, lying on the window-ledge, three young birds with little black bodies and tufts of grey down, and all three quite dead.

Here was a disappointment! "Swithun," or one of the other birds (but I strongly suspect "Swithun" herself), had carried the young birds to the window, and either killed them or left them to perish. I looked into the nest, and there were the other two eggs not yet hatched. Now it happened that I had a hen Canary sitting on eggs in a cage in my boudoir, so, without a moment's delay, I took "Swithun's" two remaining eggs and popped them into the Canary's nest.

A Mystery Solved.

Within an hour I looked to see if they could have hatched, and found—not another little nigger like the three dead ones in the bird-room, but a young bird with as pink a body as a clear Canary, with tufts of white down, and with (what was still greater surprise), pink eyes showing under the skin. The mystery was solved; the father of the young birds was one of my Cinnamon Canaries, of which there were several in the bird-room, and this young one, being a hen, had the light skin and pink eyes of the Cinnamon, whereas the others were doubtless cocks, and had they lived would have been ordinary dark Linnet-Mules.

For the benefit of the uninitiated I must here state that unless both parents are of Cinnamon blood, the young cocks never have the Cinnamon plumage and pink eyes, only the young hens have that distinction. This I have proved over and over again, and it is a fact known to all bird fanciers. The next day another young bird with a black body and grey down was hatched in the Canary's nest, and grew up to be a very pretty dark cock Linnet-Mule, but the hen Mule with the pink eyes was the treasure, as such birds are most uncommon, for I suppose the father would be a Linnet and the mother the Canary in the case of ninety-nine Linnet-Mules out of a hundred, and it would then be impossible to breed Cinnamon Mules.

TWO EASILY-PRODUCED HYBRIDS.

Siskin-Canary. Siskin-Redpoll.

(See notes in Mrs. Hewitt's article.)

"Vanilla," as I called her, became a beautiful bird of that delicate shade of fawn colour that one seldom sees in Cinnamon birds. She is now four years old, very tame, and will feed from my hand. She has been flying about my boudoir this morning, while I have been writing this account of her, and she has now flown back happily to the large cage which she shares with the Greenfinch-Mule, whose story I must tell presently.

Siskin-Redpoll Hybrids.

I had in my bird-room two cock Siskins and three Redpolls, a cock and two hens. I had had the cock many years, but the hens I had bought only the autumn before, and they were so wild that whenever I went into the room they would fly frantically from one end to the other, as long as I was there. I mention this to show what pleasant surprises one often has in the delightful hobby of bird-keeping, for it was one of these hens that built a nest the following July in a square wooden nest-box hanging on the wall of the bird-room, and sat so well that she would allow me to walk about the room without flying off her nest. She laid five eggs, but as I thought it very unlikely that she would hatch them, I placed two of the eggs under a Canary that was sitting on eggs in a cage in my boudoir.

On the twelfth day one egg was hatched in the Redpoll's nest, and two in the Canary's, but one of these died. The next morning another was hatched in the Redpoll's nest, and the fifth egg did not hatch, so I had three young birds, two under the Redpoll and one under the Canary. Directly the last one was hatched, I noticed that it looked rather different from the other two, it was smaller, and the down was of a lighter shade, nearly white, although the body was quite dark.

Model Parents.

The cock and hen Redpoll were indefatigable in feeding the two young birds with groundsel and chickweed, which I gave them three times a day. The other birds did not disturb them at all, although one of the Linnets used to try and help with the feeding sometimes. I never saw either of the Siskins go near the nest. The difference in size between the two young ones in the Redpoll's nest was more apparent after a few days, and I was afraid of the smaller one being smothered by the larger and more vigorous nestling, so I transferred it to the Canary's nest, and she fed the two under her charge with untiring care. But there was a marked difference between these two also, not much in size as in the shape of the beak.

The young bird in the bird-room left the nest on the fourteenth day, and it was pretty to see the pair of Redpolls following it about, and watching over it lest the other birds in the room should molest it. When it was fully fledged it was a very pretty little creature, with plumage of a greyish hue, the breast very light, densely speckled with black. I was surprised that this should be the plumage of a young Redpoll, although I knew that the nest feathers of a bird are generally very unlike the adult plumage; but I was still more astonished when little "Plucky" (as I called him) began to moult, for then the silver grey on the breast was replaced by a very pretty yellow green, and by degrees the plumage became that of the Siskin, except that the green was much less vivid, and the top of the head was dark olive green, instead of black.

"Plucky's" Parentage Solved.

There was no longer any doubt about "Plucky's" father. It must have been one of the Siskins, although neither of them took the slightest notice of the young bird: His song was more like that of the Redpoll than the Siskin, but in his manners and in his greediness he resembled the Siskin. We had a very hot summer the year he was two years old, and the bird-room being at the top of the house was very hot, although the French windows were open all day long. The heat affected "Plucky" in a peculiar way; all the feathers came off his head and neck, and for months he was perfectly bald.

I thought I would try the open-air treatment for him, so I sent him to an outdoor aviary, and he came back to me after four months in splendid plumage. He lived for nearly five years, and when he died I took him to a naturalist to be stuffed. I asked him if he knew what the bird was, and he answered without hesitation, a "Siskin."

I have still the history of the other two young birds, "Tot" and "Pet," to relate. "Tot," the youngest and smallest, was exactly like the old Redpoll, who must have been his father, which accounts for the difference which I noticed from the first between him and his half-brother. He was rather a weakly bird, and did not live much more than a year. As soon as he attained to his adult plumage there was not the slightest doubt about his being a Redpoll and not a hybrid. "Pet" was the only hen, and was a most engaging little bird; her head and back were brown like a Redpoll's, but on the breast, wings, and tail there was a faint tinge of green, and there was no doubt that she (as well as "Plucky") was a Siskin-Redpoll hybrid.

A Hybrid's Attempt at Breeding.

She and a cock Canary, with whom she was brought up, were much attached to each other, and one spring she built a nest and laid two tiny eggs about three-eighths of an inch long, which, of course, did not hatch; but it was very pretty to see the little creature on her nest, with the large yellow Canary feeding her. She, like "Plucky," did not live to complete her fifth year.

I never found any difficulty in rearing these delightful little birds—the cross between the Siskin and Canary. They were always charmingly tame, and had only one fault—greediness, inherited from their Siskin father. They were bred in a large-sized breeding cage, with wired top and sides. I do not like the box-shaped breeding-cages at all; the birds do not get enough air when a cage of that sort is used.

I only once paired a cock Redpoll and hen Canary, and I had no success with them, as the only young bird that was hatched had a deformed beak, and after a little while the mother seemed to be disgusted with its appearance, and refused to feed it; but it lived long enough for me to see that it would have had a yellow breast and brown head and back, so no doubt it would have been an attractive little bird.

The Admired Goldfinch Mules.

These Mules are by far the most generally admired, and are no doubt much more handsome than any of the others. Some people find great difficulty in rearing them, because of the tiresome habit that the Goldfinch has of pecking the eggs as soon as they are laid; but I must have been fortunate in this respect, for out of the five or six Goldfinches that I have had, there was only one that could have been accused of pecking one of the eggs, and even in that case I am not sure it was not the hen Canary that pecked it.

I have always been very desirous of obtaining a good light Goldfinch Mule, and I have spent a good deal of time and money in the endeavour; but I am obliged to admit (as so many others have done) that after all there is a good deal of chance about it, although, of course, you do have a better chance if you get the right sort of parents. Many years ago I gave a guinea for a Goldfinch that was reputed to be the father of Light Mules, and his children certainly were variegated, and one of them was a beauty with a good deal of white about it; but none of them could be called Light Mules, although an ancestor of the Canary's had been the mother of perfectly clear Mules.

Not Fashionably Bred.

Then on another occasion, from a hen Canary with no illustrious ancestors, I bred much handsomer Mules, one with a perfectly clear yellow breast and a little crest on the head, as the mother was a crested Canary. After in-breeding for many years, I produced the year before last a hen Canary that I thought really did look likely to be the mother of Light Mules. She was nearly white, except for cinnamon markings on head and wings, and, of course, with pink eyes. Great was the excitement last summer when, after two nests of empty eggs, one young Goldfinch Mule was hatched, but I must say, notwithstanding all the hopes raised by her mother's lovely appearance and pedigree, "Ena" is a very ordinary little dark Mule, and her only charms are her extreme docility and intelligence. And now I come to the last Mule whose history I have to relate.

My Greenfinch Mule.

A wounded Greenfinch flew into the house of a friend of mine through an open window. He may have been hurt by a cat; anyhow, his wing was bleeding, and he never recovered the use of it, but he soon made himself happy in a cage, and became very tame. After two or three years he was given to me, and as he was then in full song I thought I would provide him with a mate. During that summer and the following one I tried him with five different hen Canaries, but he took a violent dislike to each of them until the fifth.

He seemed to take a fancy to her, and all went well. Two young birds were hatched, but one of them was deformed and blind, and had to be destroyed. The other "Leo," is very like a Greenfinch, but much more slim, and of a much brighter shade of green. The yellow bars on the wings are very clearly defined, and in the spring the top of his head is very lustrous, his under-parts are bright yellowish-green, and he is full of life and vivacity. His mother was a handsome jonque Canary, which accounts for the brilliancy of his plumage.

He has three distinct songs, one that of a Canary, another that of the Greenfinch, and a third is the song of a Goldfinch which was in the same room with him when he first began to sing. He is more of a Greenfinch than a Canary in his ways, and is a very strong bird, never ailing and always bright and cheerful. As pets I much prefer Mules to Canaries; they have much more intelligence, and, being more hardy, they live longer.

Budgerigar Breeding for Pleasure & Profit.

By J. T. WILSON.

The breeding of the pretty and lively Budgerigar is a familiar pastime, and a profitable one, with many lovers of foreign birds. Our author here gives a few hints to beginners.

The first thing to be considered in the breeding of Budgerigars is the aviary, and for the benefit of novices I will describe my first aviary. It faced south-west and consisted of an open wire flight, 6ft. by 4ft. by 6½ft. high. Attached was a shed 4ft. by 4ft. by 6½ft., which had a pane of glass 2ft. square let into the roof and protected by wire meshing. In the shed I fixed eight cocoanut husks, with the entrances towards the centre of the shed, thus letting the light from the glass roof fall on them.

The flight was made with ¾in. mesh wire, and had some dead branches for perches. I made a small fountain with cement bottom, and planted the rest of the ground with grass, a handful of oats, and a little chickweed; with the exception of a little patch running across the centre, which I covered with shell gravel and crushed mortar. I then nailed some pieces of cuttlefish bone in places where the birds could easily reach them, and my aviary was complete.

The School of Experience.

The grass seed sprouted in a little over a week, and when it was an inch high I turned three pairs of Budgerigars into the aviary. From accounts I had read, I got it into my head that I should have about forty birds at least by the end of the season, but I soon awoke to the cold reality of the case. When I bought my birds they seemed to me to be in the pink of condition, and not a feather was out of place; but, alas! when I had had them about a fortnight they began to moult, and I afterwards found out that they were young birds, and that this was their first moult.

It was towards the end of July before my first lot of eggs appeared. At that time I noticed that the birds cropped off every bit of grass seedling directly it appeared. There were five eggs in the clutch, four of which were hatched, all the young being successfully reared without any trouble or fuss whatsoever. I also had a nest from one of the other pairs during the same year—five young ones—and the third pair did not breed at all.

Differences between Young and Old.

Of course I soon noticed points of difference between the unmoulted youngsters and the adult birds, for I was determined not to be had again. At first there is no difference externally between the two sexes, the cere of both being a very pale blue. On the approach of the moult, however, the cere of the hen begins to go white, and that of the cock bird assumes a slightly deeper tint of blue, but nothing like the depth of colour seen in the adult bird in good condition.

Another point I noticed was the difference in depth of colour of the feathers of the wings and breast. If the bird has feathers of a pale bluish green down the breast, instead of the proper verdant hue, the novice can at once put it down as a youngster. In a young bird also the feathers of the wings are of a grey colour, with faint lemon yellow edging, whilst in the adult bird they are darker, being almost black, and with deep Canary yellow edging.

I am giving this information in the hope of preventing novices from being gulled with youngsters when they want adult birds.

Some Breeding Difficulties.

I have not so far encountered the dreaded egg-binding. If I did, I should most certainly try the olive oil and steaming jug remedy, for from what I have heard it would seem to be most efficient. Soft eggs are also a trouble I have never had to deal with, doubtless because my birds have a plentiful supply of grit, cuttlefish bone, and crushed egg-shells. The last-mentioned is an exceptionally good thing, and to novices I say: "Never be without some in your aviary and you will never know what the sight of a soft-shelled egg is like." I have also been told that it is a good preventative of egg-binding.

The number of eggs laid is generally 5 or 6, sometimes reaching 7; and incubation lasts about 10 days. The young birds hatch out in the same order as the eggs were laid, viz., one every day. In the face of these facts, it seems impossible that the last one, being nearly a week younger than the first, should be able to hold its own. Nevertheless, accidents of this kind are rare.

As a rule there are three nests each season, but I warn novices not to look for all three in the first season, or they will doubtless be disappointed, as I was.

If the weather is genial the young birds' stay in the nest is limited to about a month, but if the weather is colder their stay will be proportionately longer. Like other birds, however, when once they leave the nest they never return to it.

A Simple Fare.

When the birds are rearing young, I give them, in addition to their ordinary food, viz., millet, canary, etc., some good white oats in the husk. I once tried my birds with Quaker rolled oats, but they seemed to prefer the ordinary oats, shelling them themselves. I also give crusts of bread (dry) which they eat with avidity.

To my mind no birds are more easily reared than Budgerigars. Dry bread crusts and oats are all the extras needed—no bother making egg-food every day, as in the case of Canaries. I advise the beginner to start away with yellow Budgerigars if they can afford it, as they breed as easily and quickly as Greens, and the young ones are worth twice as much as Greens. In this way the money comes back again. Their treatment is exactly the same as that of the Green Budgerigars here enumerated. My parting advice to novices is to cut out the following and keep it by them "Don't trust to memory; you are bound to be caught napping if you do."

THE STANDARD WORK.

"YORKSHIRE CANARIES"

How to Breed, Manage & Exhibit.

By H. W. Battye, President of the Yorkshire Union.

This work, which deals fully with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties, should be in the hands of every breeder of Yorkshires. It gives instruction upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, Exhibiting, and how to treat both in health and disease.

The Siberian Bullfinch.

Its Treatment When in Captivity.

By "LOXIA SARMATICA."

The management of the giant Bullfinch which comes to us from the far-away steppes of Russia and Siberia is here dealt with, and some entertaining anecdotes of special pets retailed.

Though not a foreign bird as the term is usually applied—one's thoughts turn at once to tiny Avadavats, Zebra Finches, and the like—yet my attention has for some years been attracted towards these beautiful foreigners. For size, and depth of breast colour, I know of no equal to a good, well-shaped, Siberian Cock Bullfinch—the hen, too, being a very noble bird.

The scheme of colouring is the same as that of ordinary English Bullfinches, but the great difference lies in the size, for, in some cases, the Siberians, or Russians, are equal in size to a young Thrush. During the last five years about two dozen Russian Bullfinches, cocks and hens, have been in my possession, and of their tameness and docility, I can speak very highly.

Is it a Short-lived Bird?

Unfortunately many Siberians are very shortlived, owing to the change of climate, and the hardships which they undergo during their journey to England. They often arrive in a very dilapidated condition, through being packed in those tiny wicker cages, which hardly give them room enough to turn round. Yet with care, and roomy cages, and frequent opportunities for bathing, their plumage recovers most wonderfully. I have had some terrible wrecks, and have seen the plumage daily become bright and shiny, and the colours deep, true and pure, all due to fresh air, good food, and roomy cages, and especially to great cleanliness of cages, good perches, seed and water vessels. Yet some birds do live to become very old, and at the present time, I have a cock who is blind in one eye from cataract, and who is five or six years old, and yet is fresh and vigorous, and almost the healthiest bird I have.

Housing and Temperature.

I have spoken of the cages which they should inhabit, and it must be remembered that these Bullfinches are monsters, and therefore that the size of the cage must be correspondingly large, for Bullies are such busy birds, always moving and jumping about, and in order to secure to them the large amount of space necessary for the exercise of their wings, they must have large cages. In my own house, I have devoted a room with a tree in it to my birds, and they have perfect liberty, but this is not possible to all bird lovers. In this condition my Bullies live and flourish, and moult up well.

Many persons imagine that Siberian Bullfinches need warmth; but it is a mistaken kindness to keep them in warm stuffy rooms. My experience is that they are best in a quite cold room, free from damp or draughts, of course. The feathers are tighter, the colour on the breast is more true, and the bird keeps in stronger health to resist disease.

A Severe Test.

Moulting is a hard time for all captive Bullfinches, and abundantly illustrates the doctrine of the survival of the fittest. It is especially hard to these Russians, weakened as they are by the change of climate, the close confinement in transit, and sometimes by the mismanagement or ignorance of purchasers. The bird is thus in a weak, low state of health, and what is normally a healthy physiological process, degenerates into an illness more or less serious, sometimes ending fatally. To my mind, the process of moulting is analogous to the replacing of a child's milk teeth by the permanent ones—the new pushing out the old.

At the time of writing, I have a pair of Russians moulting very badly, and am debating whether they will live or die. This morning the hen seemed likely to pass away, but I think the cock will live and do well. They have outdoor life from 6.45 a.m. to 6.45 p.m. with a cool cover over the tops of the cages. If a Russian survives, and, as many of mine have done, sings throughout the period of moulting, the chances are that he or she will harden and live for some years.

The Most Successful Feeding.

I always think it a wise provision of Nature, that berries and fruit are ripe at about the moulting season, for there is nothing like wild food for Bullfinches during the moult. I always give blackberries ad lib when ripe and privet berries in season, having well prepared the way with strawberries, raspberries, currants, or any fruit in fact that I can get. During the moult, I find about 10 drops of the citrate of iron in solution, added to the drinking water, most beneficial, and I fancy, but it is only an idea, that it helps to fix the colour.

The tendency of Siberian Bullfinches is to lose in depth of breast colour at each successive moult—to become paler. As I looked round my bird-room to-day, I could distinguish between the moulted and unmoulted birds from this one point alone, though I have some which have kept their colour very well, particularly so the old blind boy mentioned earlier in this paper.

I find the most successful food in the bird-room is Canary, German rape, white sunflower, and a very little hemp and linseed. The hemp I use mainly for teaching my Bullfinches to feed from my hand. I find they are very fond of the large white sunflower seed, but I think it wants to be given in moderation. I love to see a Bullfinch turn a sunflower seed round and round in his beak, bringing every part of it under the action of his saliva to soften it, till at last he is able to crack it. I also find that ripe apple pips are much appreciated when cracked.

Attempts at Breeding.

What the breeding prospects of Russian Bullfinches are, I am unable to say. My own experience is that the eggs are unfertile, possibly due to some error of diet. I have had some Russian-English, and Anglo-Russian alliances, also alliances of cock and hen Russians, but in no case have the eggs been fertile, and in some cases no eggs at all have been laid. I should very much like to know whether anyone has ever had young birds with a Russian cock as father.

An Affectionate Example.

Siberian Bullfinches are deeply affectionate birds, as a rule, both towards their owners, and towards their mates. I have experienced some splendid instances of this—one especially is worthy of note. I had a pair of Russians in my bird-room, called Big Bobby and Big Minnie. Though very fond of his Minnie, Big Bobby far preferred me, and used to kiss me, and pull my hair. When I went into the bird-room, Big Bobby would come immediately on my arm, run up my shoulder, and walk round pulling my hair as he went, calling "Here, here" to his Minnie. Often I have stood with my baby on one arm, and Big Bobby on the other. Minnie would often eat out of my hand and mouth but she was distinctly standoffish.

One morning, after my early visit to the bird-room, I heard Big Bobby crying pitifully, calling out loud enough to be heard all over the house. When I went to the bird-room there lay beautiful Big Minnie dead on the floor. She had apparently died suddenly, and painlessly, for not a feather was ruffled. When I picked up the dear body, Bobby flew after me to the door of the bird-room, crying sorrowfully. For some days afterwards when I appeared in the bird-room, he flew to me, hoping that I would bring back his Minnie. His cries were so sad that I caged him, and kept him with me as a pet, hoping to divert his thoughts from his sorrows. I flattered myself that I had succeeded, for he began to sing and I returned him to the bird-room, but he did not long survive his mate, for he had a fall from the tree, hurting his wing, and a slow wasting disease set in. So now Big Bobby and Big Minnie are only a sweet memory.

I have many happy remembrances of the loving ways of my other Siberian Bullies, but Big Bobby and Big Minnie are very often in my thoughts. I trust my few words may inspire others to take an interest in these tame and beautiful creatures.

Canary Breeding for Cottage Fanciers.

By THOMAS E. NICHOLSON.

A North-country Canary-lover outlines the methods by which he manages the stock in the kitchen of his cottage.

During my four years of Canary breeding, I have only had either the small back scullery or the living kitchen as at present for the pursuit of my hobby. In the scullery I had three pairs up for breeding, and bred ten young, and this, despite the fact that there was no sun for them until late in the afternoon during summer, and none at all during winter.

Breeding in a Spare Corner.

I had better results when my birds were kept in the living kitchen, facing south, here at my present address. I put up three pairs and bred twelve one year, and seventeen the next. But I prefer the cooler place, as the young birds were stronger and more robust than those bred in the kitchen. In the latter place, the Yorkshire Canaries seemed to grow too much feather; the heat, I suppose, helps to produce this result. If I had had my present stock of birds in the scullery I should have done better, I feel certain. So I advise beginners first of all to get healthy birds to commence operations with, and not to do as I did in my first two seasons—have birds that were always ailing. When I got healthy birds I had the best of success; I killed off all birds that came off my first purchases—hard lines, but I did so, and am not sorry now.

My present stock was bought from an old breeder of nearly 60 years' experience, and these having been bred in an outbuilding, with no heat whatever, are strong and healthy, and are also good feeders. I have not one bad feeder now as I had before, when I had to rely upon one or two hens to bring up my young birds, which were then only in a moderate condition, and not as new, strong, good birds. So that if one has only a spare corner in a kitchen, he can do a little bird-breeding if he only gets healthy stock to start with, looks well to them, and keeps them clean, as they must be in a living kitchen.

Home-made Cages.

My cages were made by myself, several of them having wire fronts to them. The size of an ordinary single breeder is 17 inches by 15 inches by 9 inches, and will just fit into the corner next to the fireplace and the outside wall and window. I do not believe in putting birds up near the roof of a room. I have persuaded the owners of some I have seen so placed to lower the cages to about 18 inches from the ceiling, and this has brought better results, the birds singing much better than before in several cases.

Our kitchen is not underground, and therefore has the advantage of being very lofty, having more space for the admission of fresh air. I could keep them a good deal higher than is the case in some houses, but prefer them low enough to be able to reach them comfortably, resting them on a platform. In the breeding season I have put them about 2ft. from the floor, with a flight cage underneath, so as not to have them too low. This makes them look very neat, especially where all are clean and freshly put up.

A Lesson on Feeding.

My method of feeding from January to March is to give food not too rich, as the birds come freely into song, when in robust health, without any special feeding. This I find to be the case with my own and my friend's birds, his being in a cold room. I give the following for staple food: good Conary and a little German seed mixed in seed boxes; also once a week a small teaspoonful of mixed seeds and a piece of apple or boiled carrot two or three times a week. I also occasionally grind up a raw carrot in a mill and mix with one Osborne or arrowroot biscuit, giving the birds a half teaspoonful each in place of the apple until the first week in March.

I then give egg proper, but I often give a bit of sponge cake or roll during the winter, about once every fortnight or so. My egg food is made from eggs one or two days old (my own), with four arrowroot or Osborne biscuits. I like either sort of biscuit, and have done well with both. I give this mixture twice a week, together with a little maw seed on top, until the birds are paired up during the last week in March. After this, and until the hen has laid, I give mixed seed, or niga and maw, and this, together with young dandelion leaves, lettuce, or chickweed, is her food until her full clutch are laid. During incubation only seed and fresh water are given, but these every morning.

On the thirteenth night I put a small teaspoonful of egg food in the cage for the hen to commence to feed with first thing in the morning, if any of the eggs are hatched out. I also leave the kitchen window blind up so that the feeding is started as soon as daylight appears. I give them cracked hemp seed the next morning (the 14th day) and green food the following morning. This I find to have the best results. I am, however, always ready to learn of any better way, if another can be proved to be as good.

Looking after the Young Ones.

I give egg and biscuit three times daily when the young are being fed, and also plenty of green food after the second day, so as to keep the egg food sweet for them to feed on in the early morning, at noon, and at about 5 o'clock p.m.—the last feed. This prevents the food turning sour in the hot weather. I give plenty of hemp, cracked, and German rape seed in separate vessels in the cage bottom, together with plenty of good sand on the drawer.

When the young are ready to leave the parents, that is, when they are about four weeks old, I put them into the flight cage underneath the breeders, and give them egg food and crushed hemp, canary, rape, maw and linseed, together with some medium oatmeal, in a separate pot, until they are able to crack canary seed properly. I give them no green food, as one runs the risk of setting up inflammation by so doing. I also give a few Quaker oats on a sand tray, with plenty of good clean sand and a piece of cuttle fish bone in the wires of the cage for them to pick at.

I might add here that I have a good supply for the hens also all the year. I continue to feed the young on egg food and cracked hemp in small quantities until after the moult, together with linseed added to canary and rape. I also give scalded rape and biscuit about twice a week, as I think it beneficial for them. When they are first put into the flight cage, I give about ten drops of tincture of gentian in water, using an ordinary water glass, so that they do not drink too much water. This helps to brace them up if they happen to get down at all when weaned from their parents. If the above directions were always followed, I am certain not many of the young would be lost after weaning.

Lighting and Other Matters.

Breeding over, I clean all the cages, washing and scrubbing them well in soapsuds and rinsing them in clean water. I leave them to dry in the fresh air. Then I put my birds in the flight cage, which I have made to fit into a corner for them to fly about loose in. It is a splendid place for moulting purposes and for the winter. It also does service for the hens in spring until pairing time, keeping them in a nice hard condition. I keep a piece of cuttlefish bone hung up in it for them to pick at.

Of course, if I were thinking of showing I should cage the birds separately on top of the flight. It stands 4½ft. from the floor, so that there is plenty of room above it for several single birdcages. In spring, as at present, I have four cocks on top in cages, and some hens in flight, getting well advanced for the coming season.

Each time the cages or flights are removed I wash and distemper the walls where the cages have been in order to keep the corner thoroughly free from red mite or any infectious dirt that may have got there. In the front of the flight I also hang a good-sized bath for them to bathe in when disposed to, which is almost every day. I add a little Condy's once a week.

My cages are enamelled inside and stained outside, and are very neat-looking when fitted in a recess, either ready for birds or with them in. They have been admired by all who have seen them, and they do not look out-of-place among other things in the kitchen. They are not in anyone's way, and my children play in front of them during the day without in any way disturbing the birds.

THE CORNISH CHOUGH.

The Chough is a striking-looking member of the Crow family, with jet-black plumage and red beak and legs.

Our illustration depicts the well-known winning specimen exhibited by Mr. A. Idris Jones (Mountain Ash).

By J. C. BARNES.

In my stock cocks I like plenty of length and a nice amount of substance. Good bold heads, with well-filled necks and long wings and tails are also essential. Thin-necked birds, no matter how long they are, I do not favour, as, without doubt, one of the greatest evils in the Yorkshire is the thin neck (as though tied round with something). Once you get thin necks in your strain, it is one of the hardest of jobs to breed it out again.

Another very prevalent failing in this variety is the frilly breast. This, to a great extent, has been brought about by trying to get the birds extra slim, and perhaps by the introduction of foreign blood. Avoid frills as far as you possibly can. Let your birds be well up on leg, with plenty of daylight showing between them. Good long legs, showing the thighs well, are a great essential for exhibition purposes. Should your bird show a little square in the shoulders, so much the better; I prefer a little of what is termed "breed."

The female side of the proposition, as in the Norwich, has a great deal to do with the breeding of up-to-date specimens. In the hen I do like quality, and, above all, position. Hens about 6¾ to 6⅞ inches are of a useful length for stock. Let them be as smooth in feather as it is possible to get them, also wedge-shaped. Wings should be long and carried in a V-shaped fashion, and should not overlap at tips. The back should be straight and well filled in, the breast smooth, and not too prominent; it should also be solid on front. The bird's waist should be long and tapering, and the tail of good length and closely folded. The position of the bird should be straight up, and not crouchy (or in a circle, so to speak). Shun the same bad points in a hen as have been mentioned in reference to cocks.

Points about Pairing.

You need not bother to any great extent over the colour of a Yorkshire, although colour, no doubt, adds in many cases to the exhibition value of a bird. If you have, say, a typical bird that is pale in colour competing with a bird equal in character, but of better colour, then, of course, colour points will lose the former premier place.

Cinnamon-marked Yorkshires are very useful to cross into your ordinary Yorkshires occasionally. This will help you considerably in colour producing. By such an introduction you are also on the right road for gaining quality of feather.

When pairing up, follow the lines as advised in the case of Norwich, viz., yellow to buff, clear to ticked; the points one is deficient in should be the strong points of the partner, and so on. Do not have your birds too nearly related—cousins are quite near enough. Bear in mind, though, that in breeding, carefully carried out (and I have found it to be correct by practical experience), is the royal road (if there is such a thing) to success.

The Age of Birds.

Both in Yorkshires and Norwich I always endeavour to have one of my birds two years old, and the opposite one a year old. I find that the best results are gained in this manner. As regards which should be the senior, I must admit I like the male to be the elder of the two. It is my firm belief that by this method you procure larger youngsters than you do otherwise. Understand that I breed from one-year-old cocks and two-year-old hens; still I just state my preference here.

HOUSE'S

CANARY MANUAL

Price ONE SHILLING. Post Free 1.2.

Superbly Illustrated by the Champion Canary Artist Mr. H. NORMAN. EVERY BIRD DEPICTED IS A VERITABLE MODEL, and shows the breeder what to aim for. Some idea of the popularity of this Practical Manual may be gathered from the fact that under the title of "The British Canary," it has passed its Third Edition, entering upon a Fourth Edition of 5,000 copies under the new title of "House's Canary Manual."

MR. HOUSE has thoroughly revised and brought this work up-to-date and incorporated a chapter on the "Roller or Singing Canary."

F. CARL, 154, Fleet St., London, EC.

The Vale of Conway and Dis. F.A. have just issued their new membership card. It is very neatly got up and contains a full list of the officers of the Association and its rules.

A certain Newcastle journal lately wondered how it happens that bird fanciers know what eminent ornithologists do not, viz., that the Linnet has a red breast after shedding his nest feathers, but that this red breast never appears again after the first moult." We wonder, too—but it is where the writer picked up his information.

I am most pleased with the results of sales of Canaries from my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS. Have sent birds to all parts of England and not had one returned. I am always delighted with CAGE BIRDS, and congratulate you on the recent splendid double number. The coloured plate is simply lovely. I wish you all the success possible.—J. Hicks (Holsworthy).

An exceptionally fine sample of ants' cocoons (eggs) reached us from Mr. J. W. Ainley, of 16, Dalton Green, Huddersfield, which he informs us he calls "Alba," and sells at 1s. 3d. the package. It is one of the cleanest lots of ants' egs we have ever seen, and they are very plump, silky to the touch, and fresh. To discriminating bird-keepers, who like the best only, Mr. Ainley's "Alba" cocoons should appeal very forcibly.

Mr W. H. Bamsey writes:—I reported recently about a grand young crested bird being in existence in Derbyshire, on September 21st. I had the pleasure of paying a visit to its owner—Mr. Wm. Brown, of Holbrook Moor. It fully bore out the description given me, and it bids fair, although in moult, to have a great future in front of it. It is the best bird I have seen in this district, and I am indeed very proud of this young recruit. I may add that this plodding young fancier's bird-room is quite a little show in itself, clear bodies, dark crest, or dark crest and even-winged birds, being quite the order, he having had very fair luck this season. Messrs. T. Hayes, B. Woolley, and W. Mellor, I noticed, have also a few good Crest and Crest-birds. This healthy spot in Derbyshire seems to suit crested breeding.

A Lonely Fancier.

I have taken CAGE BIRDS in for about four years, writes Mr. J. F. Derry (Cannock Wood, Staffs.), and have never failed to have it weekly. It was an old fancier who recommended it to me as a great help in the Canary Fancy. The one thing I do regret is that I am the only Canary breeder in the whole neighbourhood for a couple of miles round. When I read your accounts of shows, I wish I lived where I could have a chat with some really good fancier, and also that I could breed show birds myself.

A Good Record.

I was agreeably surprised, writes Mr. E. B. Denton (Windhill), when I got my CAGE BIRDS on Friday last and saw such a good illustration of my Cinnamon-marked Buff Yorkshire upon its front page. Without wishing to be at all boastful I may say he is one of the best Cinnamon Marks which has been bred for some years. His wins, I think, will bear me out in this statement. Being exhibited upon fifteen occasions, he has won twelve firsts and one second prize, the latter win being at the Crystal Palace in 1907, after a very heavy show season. He was out of the cards altogether at Manchester, and only got a he card at the Cinderella Fund Show last year. A rather late hatched young one, he was not out so very soon in the season, but when he did come out he gave a very good account of himself, as the above record proves. I have refused some very tempting offers for him as I was loth to part with a bird of such merit when I had been successful in breeding him. Allow me to thank you for your trouble in producing the illustration of my bird in the paper to which I have been a subscriber since its foundation.

Interesting Speeches at Wallsend.

At the recent Wallsend Show the judges' luncheon was a most successful function. M. McDonald, the worthy chairman, was at the head of the table, and called on the judges to pass their views on their day's labour. Mr. Mundell, in an eloquent and lively speech, expressed his opinion of his variety, and Messrs. Pirnes and Bruce also gave their views on the splendid specimens under them. Speeches were also delivered by Messrs. Crawhall, of the Northern Yorkshire C.C., T. Robson, the Northern Crest Club, and W. Currah, the latter gentleman telling of the great strides he saw being made in the cage bird fancy; also of the brotherly feeling that now existed among fanciers, and of the care that was taken of the exhibits, when at home and at shows. Mr. Hutchison, of Newcastle, that stalwart lover of the feathered tribe, made a striking address, fully explaining his ideas of making a great show that would be second to none in Britain, the Newcastle district being as every one knew, a great commercial centre with money, as a rule, pretty plentiful. Fanciers, he said, were being recruited every day, and the district at present had exhibitions every week end. He thought that by combining together one great show could be successfully held, and that at Newcastle (being an easily got-at centre, with a grand hall), which would put the Palace into the second position. The health and prosperity of the Wallsend Society being pledged, and a hearty vote of thanks passed to the judges, speakers, members and visitors present, and a bumping vote to the worthy chairman, a successful repast and friendly meeting was brought to a close.

TWO CHRISTMAS COMPETITIONS FOR READERS.

OUR NORWICH PLAINHEAD CANARY PLATE.

Where Do They Differ?

In connection with the art supplement accompanying this week's Christmas Number, entitled "Norwich Plainhead Canaries," we offer (under the following conditions), a prize of 10s. 6d. to the reader who correctly names the point in which the two suggested models differ. The opinion of one of our leading judges of the variety will be taken, and the competition will be decided on his reply. POSTCARDS ONLY must be used, and they must reach us not later than FIRST POST, MONDAY, DECEMBER 30th. The post-cards will be placed by an independent person in a suitable receptacle, be well shuffled, and then drawn out, when the first one on which is written the correct solution (that of the afore-mentioned judge) will win a CASH PRIZE OF 10s. 6d.

OUR FRONTISPIECE.

A Chance for Birdie Artists.

Our Frontispiece this week is designed to be coloured. We offer a prize of half-a-guinea (10/6) for the best attempt at colouring the same which reaches us from one of our readers on or before Monday, December 30th next. The medium to be employed is left to the discretion of the competitor. The finished attempt should be packed flat, or rolled in a tube, wherever possible.

In both competitions the Editor's decision shall be final.

OUR GREAT COUPON SCHEME.

We are offering at certain Shows this season Extra Prizes to the value of 10/-, 6/-, 4/-.

A list of these Shows is given below. Intending Competitors must apply to us for a Coupon to fasten on their Entry Forms. Every Coupon bought from us will entitle one bird to compete for our prize. The price of the Coupon is 6d., and only birds entered for our prizes will be eligible. Prizes are offered for the Best First Prize Bird, Best Second Prize and Best Third Prize

The Exhibitor who buys the most Coupons from us will have half the cost of them returned to him.

The Secretary who secures the most Entries for our Competition will be given £1 for his Society's funds.

Exhibitors must note that coupons will not by themselves entitle them to exhibit.

OUR COUPON SHOWS.

ORDER FORM.

The Manager, "CAGE BIRDS,"
154, Fleet Street, London.

Send me by return the following Coupons for the following Shows:—

No. of Coupons Required.	Names of Shows.

*Name*_____

*Address in Full*_____

I am only a novice, but very much enjoy reading your excellent paper CAGE BIRDS.—W. E. GRIFFITHS (Tipton).

I always have good results when I advertise in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. John Martin (Castle Douglas). It must have a large circulation, as I have had orders from all over the country.

A Blackbird with a pure white head has been seen by the Rector of Llandecwyn (Merionethshire). At the time this ornithological oddity was, it is reported, being hotly pursued by a hawk, but it escaped. Residents of the same parish have seen several Jackdaws with their wings tipped with white.

"CAGE BIRDS" GRAND XMAS LITERARY COMPETITION.

EIGHT GUINEAS IN PRIZES.

At the time we held our Foreign Bird Essay Competition, some few months ago, many requests reached us to extend that competition to the other sections of the cage bird hobby. We could not conveniently do so then, but we have now decided to hold a Christmas Competition to meet the wishes of readers, and the Editor offers four One Guinea Cash Prizes under the following conditions:—

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on any topic relating to Canaries. Competitors may deal with any one variety (such as the Norwich), or more than one variety (such as the Norwich and the Crest), and questions relating thereto, or may take the general management, breeding, etc., of Canaries from either the domestic or exhibition side.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on any topic relating to British Birds. The habits, appearance, and management, etc., of any one particular species may be discussed, or they may be dealt with collectively, or in groups, as may suit the knowledge of the essayist.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on Mule or Hybrid Breeding, whether in cage or aviary, and between any species of bird (either British or Foreign).

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay written from the aviarist's point of view, embracing the fitting up, stocking, and general management of an aviary, whether of Canaries, British Birds, or Foreign Birds, or a suitable combination.

An original Painting of birds, value Four Guineas, will be awarded to the best essay, in the opinion of the judges, out of all the sections.

Cash in Exchange for your Experiences.

There must be thousands among the readers of CAGE BIRDS with much knowledge stored away in their heads upon the above subjects. Utilise the Christmas holidays to put that knowledge on paper for the benefit of your fellow bird-keepers, and in exchange for your experiences there may be a cash prize waiting that will help to buy some bird or other acceptable thing you are a-wanting. Turn your spare moments to account.

The Closing Date, remember is January 20th next.

RULES.

Each essay must be clearly written (or typed), on one side of paper only.

The length is left to competitors, but essays should not contain less than 1,000 words wherever possible.

Faults of spelling and grammar will not be counted against any essay, practical utility, interest, and simplicity being the chief essentials.

No name or address must be put on any essay, but each must be signed with a nom-de-plume, the sender's name and address being attached on a separate sheet of paper.

The Editor's decision will be final. Competent assistance will be called in to aid him in arriving at his decision.

All essays sent in (and any accompanying sketches or photographs) become the property of CAGE BIRDS, but all which are published (over and above the winning essay) will be duly paid for according to their worth to us.

All entries must reach CAGE BIRDS office, 154, Fleet-street, London, E.C., on or before Monday, January 20th next. Write "Essay Competition," on top left-hand corner of envelope or package.

Late Entries.

Entries have come in so surprisingly well, writes Mr. J. Francis, sec. Carmarthen Show, that I fear some exhibitors will be under the impression that the urgent appeals sent to them were not genuine. Those fanciers who have responded will understand the position when I explain that on the advertised date of closing I had less than 300 entries. Two days later the number was 450, and we have closed with a total of 1,250, in all sections. It will thus be seen that 800 entries were received between Thursday and Monday morning. A number of classes with only two and three entries have been allowed to stand, as some slight return to fanciers who supported us in such a generous manner.

CLUB NOTICES.

One notice of any forthcoming Society meeting inserted free. It should reach us by Tuesday morning's post. Specially printed Club Notice Postcard may be had free on application to our Manager. Secretaries should always use them.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence to pay postage expenses, &c., otherwise their letters will not receive attention.

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

NOTE.—Readers are requested to carefully study past numbers and current issue before submitting questions. By doing so they may save trouble and unnecessary repetition.

CANARIES.

NORWICH PLAINHEADS.

A Wrong Prescription.

H.L.—The glycerine would not affect the bird in the way you describe. I think he is suffering from a chill or cold. Give in the drinking water for three days six drops of acetate of ammonia, after which give fresh daily in the drinking water for ten days, fifteen drops of syrup of tolu, and six drops of paregoric. Keep it in a cosy corner, your feeding also is quite right. Some birds sing much quicker than others after the moult.

Singing and Showing.

A.E.—The fact of your hen singing after she has finished up the breeding season by rearing nine young ones, will make no difference to her breeding next season. Many hens will sing and breed well, so you need have no fear. (2) I think your bird will sing shortly. I presume he is quite healthy, as you do not say anything to the contrary, and your feeding also is quite right. Some birds sing much quicker than others after the moult.

Wheezing at Night.

(No Name).—Seven days is not long enough to make any appreciable difference in the appearance of a bird which is afflicted as badly as yours. I should advise you to continue with the same treatment for at least another fortnight, when you should see a big improvement in her. If not, then I am afraid she will not be of much use for breeding with next season.

The Rearing of Young.

Novice. — Your method of feeding was quite right, and you cannot do better than follow it up in the future. So many young birds died last season, just at the age of yours. Most fanciers attributed it to the changeable weather we had, just at the time you mention, and I am strongly of opinion that it was the cause in your case. I sincerely hope, for your and every other breeder's sake, that the climatic conditions will now be much more favourable for Canary breeding. I also hope you will succeed in rearing some nice youngsters. Take heart, for I see no reason why you should not.

YORKSHIRES.

Little Birds Agree.

Herbell.—I could not guarantee that your cock Canary and cock Linnet would agree together, but you might try them when you have time to watch them. In any case if you intend to breed with the bird, get him out of the small drawing-room cage and into one big enough for him to get more exercise. Your feeding seems to be all correct, but birds for breeding are best kept in a room to themselves; those kept in a living-room are at all times liable to go amiss.

The Effect of Gas on Birds.

White Rose.—From what you write as to your management and the condition of your birds, I can only come to one conclusion as to the cause: that is, that you burn more gas in your bird-room than is good for your birds; and perhaps, in addition, you may not have your bird-room sufficiently well-ventilated. My advice is, burn as little gas as possible, and after you have finished attending to your birds, turn out the light, cover the birds up, and open the windows a few minutes to allow all the foul air to escape. See that the room is well-ventilated during the day. Your feeding is all right, but I don't think anything else is the cause of your birds being in their present condition, besides the gas. I have personally known of several cases exactly similar where this has been proved to be so.

Building a House.

Big Ben (Cardiff).—Your plan for your house is on right lines, but it will certainly be damp unless you either cover it with some damp-proof material, or have double boarding all round, with a space of at least two inches between the boarding. Then again, it will be far too small when finished; but of this you should be the best judge. I think you will wish you had made it wider when you get birds in. Your idea of having shelves and fronts, and making the back of the hut for cage backs, is all right in theory, but bad in practice. I have tried this against a ceiling in my own room, but soon discarded this plan. In conclusion, I may say, I greatly prefer an inside room to any wooden hut for birds.

A Bird with a Cough.

Martin De Backer.—Give your bird his ordinary seed, and in addition give a little egg-food or boiled milk sop. Rub if you give the sop, squeeze as much of the milk out of it as you can, and mix well into it six drops of syrup of Buckthorn. Give this fresh each morning for four days, and then for one week, give in place of the syrup of Buckthorn, six drops of Parrish's Chemical Food, and in its drinking water, fresh every morning, ten drops of good Scotch whiskey and six drops of paregoric. Continue this treatment until well.

ROLLERS.

Answered by "SCHOOLMASTER."

Canary Seed; and Breeding.

Tich.—Only three grains of the Canary seed reached me; the rest got lost owing to you putting same loose in the envelope. Expect it got out in the course of the post, or was spilled when letter was opened at the office of CAGE BIRDS. The little that I saw looked plump and well-ripened, and not at all dear at 6d. the quart. Better can be had, of course. I don't quite know what your point is, when asking whether two German hens and a Yorkshire cock "in his first-feather," will be all right for breeding next year. There is no reason whatever why they should not breed—that is, so far as can be told from a statement like this—if they are in fit condition. You will, of course, merely produce good singing "mongrels" from such a mating. If you had some other reason for asking this question, will you kindly set it out more clearly?

Young Casting Feathers, etc.

B.A.—I think the reason of the young casting feathers is clear; removing them from a cold-room in which they were bred and moulted, to the warm kitchen brought the trouble about. If you intend to teach them, and winter them in a warm room, you must either moult them in the latter, or move them before the cold weather sets in. Your other procedure is quite right. I certainly think it is far the best plan to keep young cocks being taught their song in a room by themselves—that is, away from the hens. It is not essential that the youngsters should be kept in the dark while being taught, but I know Continental breeders, who give all their young pupils an early breakfast, then shut them down (so they are in semi-darkness, and quiet and attentive) when the bird-organ, or the schoolmaster, is set going. Young birds undoubtedly listen more attentively, and so learn more quickly and accurately, when some such plan is adopted. If a bird-organ is being used, it is easy to darken a room; but a living "schoolmaster" wants to see more-or-less light while he is "teaching."

A Little Out of Sorts.

W.A.W.—For two days give to drink two tablespoonfuls of water in which has been well stirred (fresh daily) half-a-teaspoonful of dandelion juice, from the chemist's. After a day's interval on plain water, give one more dose. Feed well, giving a little egg-food every day for a time; then maw-seed one day, egg-food the next. After the dandelion juice, for 14 days, just colour his drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food; half-a-teaspoonful to two tablespoonsful. If at any time he seems constipated, stop the chemical food for a day, and give the dandelion juice. This treatment, will, I think, put the Roller right again.

Song of Songsters.

R.L.—The song of the young from a Norwich cock paired to a German hen would not be much improved unless the young were trained under a good Roller cock. The hen Roller has much influence on the song when paired to a cock Roller, of course; but when paired to a Norwich, well, that is a very different story. You must not forget that the song of the best Rollers is largely artificial—i.e., almost everything depending on their training. High-bred youngsters will produce the best song when well tutored; on the other hand, they will sing bad notes and tours with the lowest of the "low-bred" if permitted to hear and learn.

GREENS.

Answered by S. HADWIN.

Puffy Norwich Green Hen.

No Name.—You do not say how long your bird has been ill, but from what I can gather from your letter, the bird seems to have chronic asthma, which is practically incurable. The remedies you have tried are good, and as they have proved ineffectual, the most humane course will be to put the bird out of pain by killing it. During weather like that we have had recently, the bird must have suffered severely.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Goldfinch Ailing.

J.L.—Parish's Chemical Food was no good for your bird; you should have tried him with a purgative that would act on the liver—say dandelion juice (taraxacum). If alive when you read this reply; get two or three pennyworth of dandelion juice from the chemist, and stir a good half-teaspoonful into each two tablespoonsful of drinking water. Give for three successive days, then on alternate days for a short time, being guided by the state of the birds excreta. Besides maw-seed, let him have niger seed liberally, and while ailing, crack his hemp seed (fresh every day).

Cheap Lark Food.

R.H.S.—To tell you the truth, I don't believe in "cheap" foods of any kind—so many have nothing but their cheapness to recommend them, and that is usually a negative quality, inasmuch as one's birds do not thrive while eating them. Again, it is not good for any of the usual softbill birds that their food should be "only moistened with water," and Larks are certainly included in this statement. Why, clover grass is one of the best possible things to give a Skylark to make it sing, and keep it healthy, also to assist it during the moult. Chopped green-food of different sorts (tender grass, chickweed, lettuce, etc.) grated raw carrot and mashed cold boiled potato, are indispensable, in my opinion and experience, to the health of the majority of softbill birds, both large and small. I can recommend the following as a very efficient and cheap stock food for Larks: game meal (without grit) or crushed puppy biscuits, three pounds, finely ground silkworm pupæ, half-a-pound, meat meal, good ants' eggs and dried flies, a quarter pound each, by weight. It will keep a long time. A few mealworms and other insects should be frequently given; also a little seed, in a separate dish.

Mating of Goldfinches.

Abbess.—It is sheer guesswork, of course, but I should say that the moulted Britisher would be a likelier breeder than the Russian you have just bought. You never can tell, though (as another philosopher has remarked), for Goldfies are funny things, and only a trial can prove whether any bird will or will not breed. Some fanciers have stated in CAGE BIRDS that they actually prefer steady, black-legged Britishers to house-moulted birds for muling purposes, holding they possess more "go" and life. Many fanciers often experience not the slightest trouble to induce black-legged Russian or Siberian Goldies to breed. I never worry, personally, so long as a bird is steady and "kind tempered." I should recommend you to show preference to a good, strong young hen Canary; or one not more than a season old. May and June are the two great months for the early Mules; it is usually not much use looking for fertile eggs earlier, especially with birds kept under natural conditions.

Staging a Goldfinch.

Snow.—Whether a Goldfinch needs hand-washing, depends largely on where its owner lives—if in the smoke of a large town, then it most assuredly will. Even when one is living in the country, one's Finches get soiled in time, travelling to and fro, and at the shows, when a "tubbing" becomes an essential to winning in keen competition. Indeed, it is wonderful what an improvement a skilfully accomplished wash can effect in the looks of a Goldie (or any other British bird) even though appearing quite clean before being touched with the soap. A tight fight is frequently settled by this matter of condition in the contending birds. A very pure, mild soap should be used, and clean boiled rain-water where possible—never very hard water, which should be boiled, and softened with one or two spots of toilet ammonia (or Scrubb's cloudy ammonia). Tub the bird three or four days (at least) before the show, and lightly syringe him every day afterwards with soft water, in which has been well stirred some finest quality glycerine, a good teaspoonful to a pint of water. One requires to allow a few days after the wash, to get all the "bloom" on the plumage.

Desirable Crosses.

H.S.G.—Out of the list you give, the cock Chaffinches, Bullfinches and Linnets will not be likely to indulge in crossing so long as you keep the hens of the same species in the aviary. In any case, it is doubtful whether the cock Chaffies would interbreed with any of the birds you have, as, up to the present, the only properly authenticated Hybrid from these birds is the Bramblefinch-Chaffinch. The Yellowhammer, too, is a very doubtful breeder; he is much more likely to spend his time chivying the others about, and making them uncomfortable. I think your best plan would be to remove the hen Linnets and Chaffinches, and turn in half-a-dozen more hen Bullies. The best crosses would be Siskin, Redpoll, Greenfinch, Goldfinch and Linnet-Bullfinch, in order named, probably, though this depends largely on the individual excellence of the progeny. Chaffinch, or Yellowhammer Bullfinch Hybrids would "cap" the lot— "if" you breed them! Your aviary is a nice size; don't overcrowd it.

Food of Woodlarks.

J.P.—Bread soaked in cold water, and mixed with crushed hemp seed and grated liver, or hard-boiled egg, does not appeal to me at all as a staple diet for a Woodlark, and I certainly should not give it to any of my own birds. It must be messy stuff, and very apt to turn sour in hot weather. You should try the stock-food recommended "R.H.S." in this week's issue, which is, I think, as good as one need wish for, and certainly most successful in keeping these birds in the pink of condition, and on song. The grated liver and the egg can be added now and again, and make an acceptable change; but finely-minced green-food, etc., must not be forgotten. Woodlarks ought certainly to have a regular supply of live food—many droop for want of it, I am sure. There is certainly nourishment in ants' eggs, and good nourishing properties, too, in good quality eggs. I have often kept tiny softbills on nothing else for a considerable period, as they would not touch other articles of food, unless alive. Many real good insectivorous foods are advertised in CAGE BIRDS every week.

More about Woodlarks.

New Reader.—The feeding of Woodlarks is dealt with in one or two other replies this week. Give the stock-food therein advised, damped (not made sloppy) with plain water now and again, at other times moistened with some vegetable ingredient or other. A little seed should be given in a separate vessel. A good stock cage can be made out of the usual type of Skylark cage, one perch being placed in same. The bird likes a turf; and must also have a dust bath. Many of the makers of cages advertising in our columns stock a special Woodlark cage, and this you would be sure to find quite suitable. The cage I myself like best is one of the pattern known as the "Lark runner" (only longer and wider from front to back) with doors at each end, and a canvas roof. A large turf fits in at one end, a perch over the other (the "dust-bath" end), and the food and water vessels hang on the front. In this you will have no trouble with their feet, given reasonable cleanliness.

About a Bullfinch.

College.—The Bullfinches you have seen on the show-bench may have been black-legged (not housemoulted) specimens. Anyway, it is no use colour-feeding a bird except during the moult—and you say yours has already reproduced its coat. You should have given it plenty of ripe blackberries, privet berries, black cherries, straw and raspberries, and other natural colouring agents, while moulting, or as in season (you can get lots of fine privet berries now, and even through our advertisement columns). I know that a good many fanciers are fond of croaking. "You have to colour-feed to win," but I also know that some of the biggest winning Bullies out have been moulted without even the proverbial "smell" at the pepper pot.

Goldfinch and Greypate.

T.H.H.—There is no definite age when a Greypate ceases to be a Greypate. Strictly speaking, a Greypate is a young Goldfinch with a grey pate, that is, a head on which no trace of the red adult plumage is to be seen. Therefore so soon as the "blaze" begins to show, so soon does the young Goldie cease to be a Greypate. This, however, does not come about at the same age in every individual bird—some are more forward than others. There will after Christmas still be many last season Goldfinches showing very little trace of the blaze. The blaze is the sure guide to youth in the Goldfinches; the song is another guide to the experienced fancier, of course. Numbers of last season Goldies are on song now; I have many myself, and so have other fanciers, without a doubt. I do not personally keep the hen Canary in the cage exactly for steadying purposes, but more to show the fresh-caught Goldies their way about—to food and water, for instance. I never worry myself as to whether the "stimulating food" will upset her—most old hens can stand a rare lot of it!

An Interesting Aviary.

K.D.F.—1. The Dipper has always proved a most difficult bird to keep in captivity, as I believe you already know, and possibly your bird may be sickening, as so many others of his kind have done before him when confined in aviaries. If so, the food will be of little moment. I don't see how you could possibly better it—it is surprising, in fact, how you manage to supply the live-food with such regularity and so liberally. The Dippers certainly ought to thrive; indeed they have already lived a gratifying length of time with you, viewed in the light of other experiments in the same direction; 2. You cannot improve on this feeding for your Wrens; 3 The Gold-crest, common Wren, Flycatcher, Chiff-chaff, Swallow, Willow and Wood Warblers, would, I think, find ample room in the aviary along with its present inmates. You must not turn them out until the spring is well advanced, however, or you'll run serious risk of losing them. By-the-way, I have long since given up the habit of mixing mealworms, gentles, and other live foods among my biscuit, etc., stock-food, and for this all-sufficient reason; the latter is immediately thrown out of the receptacle in the mad hunt for the former, and gets scattered and trampled all over the floor—anything, in fact, but eaten.

Brevities.

Cheap Lark Mixture (D. Atkinson).—Curiously enough your query is anticipated by another reader this week. Note reply to "R.H.S."

A Question of Colour-feed (G.D.).—There is only one colour-feed you can use for Yellowhammers and Chaffinches, and that is the same as for Canaries, viz., tasteless pepper. It is advertised largely in "C.B.," especially towards the beginning of the moulting season. I trust this answers your question, which is not altogether plain.

Young Cock Larks (J.R.).—If you get really large, bold birds, you can be practically sure of their sex. I am sure there are many dealers using our columns who would gladly send you two genuine cocks if you intimate that you are prepared to pay a reasonable price for them.

Mode of Pairing (Sambo).—You can mate all the Finches you mention (Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Greenfinch, Chaffinch, and Yellowhammer) with hen Canaries. The usual method of trying for the Canary-Bullie Hybrid, however, is cock Canary to hen Bullie. And if I were myself seriously trying the Chaffinch and Yellowhammer crosses, I should mate up both ways, i.e., with the sexes reversed.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

"One in Doubt."—In reply to your query respecting some fine singers, the printer has misinterpreted my copy, and made me say you may have an immature "Albino Finch."—I wrote "Alario Finch."

Treating Parrots.

H.W.M.—It all depends upon circumstances. A Parrot that has only been say, two or three months in this country, ought not to be kept in an entirely cold room, but in one in which a fire is burning during the day—say, your ordinary living-room. On the other hand, a bird that has spent practically the whole of the year in this country, providing it was thoroughly fit, would fare well enough under the conditions you name. Under any conditions, even the most hardy species must be protected from draught. It is not necessary to purchase two young birds in order to get one to live; the losses with young Grey Parrots occur mostly from the insanitary conditions of importation, in consequence of which they come to hand with the germs of disease in their systems, which sooner or later cause them to "shuffle off." As soon as a young Parrot is able to crack seed, that should form its staple diet, but until it can do so you must supply boiled maize (this only keeps fresh one day, and food vessels must be kept strictly clean); at the same time a supply of the seed mixture must be kept in the cage, and as you observe, the bird taking this, gradually discontinue the boiled maize. Seed mixture: two parts each canary and oats, and one part each hemp, dari, wheat and sunflower seeds; also give, so as to vary the diet, ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts (shelled walnuts are best), boiled potatoes (dry), green food (leaf of fresh lettuce at the season), with regular supplies of cuttlefish. Water had better only be offered three times a day till it becomes accustomed to same. You must not give table scraps, milk, or other slops, or any kind of animal food.

Breeding Birds in Cages.

"S'il vous plait."—(1) Plum-headed Parrakeets are probable breeders in a cage; at the same time many of them refuse to do so unless they have sufficient room for flight; (2) Budgerigars, Cockatiels, and possibly Peach-faced Lovebirds; (3) This must be large to give any chance of success, say, as a minimum, 3 by 1½ by 2ft. high; supply 2 husks or log nests of suitable size for the respective birds in each cage. Only one pair must occupy each cage; (4) You would most certainly have greater prospect of success in a box cage. However, the case is not by any means hopeless with these two species. Fix a cocoa-nut husk in each dome, and put a screen over the outside of dome to give the birds privacy. Do not supply husks till next March, when you can put them in; supply hay and a canary nest bag, and leave them to take their own course. If any young are hatched, supply some good soft food mixture daily.

What Parrot?

P. G.—Your bird is a male Cockatiel, a native of Australia; it is a hardy species, and only needs protection from draught. Canary, millet, and a few oats, with green food, grit, and regular supply of water will be ample to keep this bird vigorous and healthy. As regards talking, I think not, though

I have heard of several that spoke plainly and a fair number of sentences, but such were mostly hand-reared birds, which had been taken in hand from the nest. What I mean is, that I do not consider an imported bird or an adult will learn to talk; there are, of course, exceptions to all rules, and we may hear of such in this case. Mix a little millet with the canary seed, but if it should refuse it, the bird will thrive well enough on canary seed alone, but offer it a few oats occasionally.

A Species of Amazon.

A C.—You appear to me to have some species of Amazon. If you send me a description of the plumage on the various parts of its body, I shall then be able to tell you what species it is. I should have asked you for this in my last reply, but I gathered from your query that your friend knew its name. When a bird has been improperly dieted as yours has been, it generally ends in feather plucking, etc., and you may consider yourself fortunate that the case is no worse. Continue the diet you are now giving, and the treatment already advised, and it should soon lose this annoying habit; but you cannot expect anything but a gradual resumption of normal conditions. Do not give Parrots any table scraps, slops, or any kind of animal food. Till you are sure your new purchase is quite healthy, do not let it come into contact with your Amazon. If it is a young bird, it will perhaps need a little boiled maize; but if it is eating heartily of a dry seed mixture, it will be better without it. Again, if it has been fed on boiled maize before reaching you, do not stop this suddenly, but gradually discontinue it. See reply to H. W. M. in this issue for correct and full dietary. Keep it free from draught.

Size of Waxbills.

"Box Cage."—The Zebra Waxbill is the smallest of the Waxbills; the Avadavat ranks next, the Common or Grey, the Australian, and the Orange-cheeked are about equal, but a little larger than the Avadavat. The Green Avadavat is about the size of its crimson congener, and very prettily and chastely clad. All are small birds and seed-eaters. There are some very pretty birds among the genus "Spermophila," but these are somewhat quarrelsome in the confines of a cage. The Fire-red and Lavender-backed Finches are very neat and pretty little birds, about the size of the Avadavat, but they are rather dear, being still very rare. Not a great deal larger are the Silverbills, Ruficauda, or Rufous-tailed Finches. All the above are seed-eaters, and none of them difficult to keep in condition.

Treatment of Foreign Finches.

J. Flynn.—Canary, millet, spray millet, cuttlefish, green-food, and water ad lib. for drinking and bathing will fully meet the simple needs of the Weavers and Finches you name. Of course, all birds suffer more or less when kept in confined quarters, and if you find any of your birds getting unduly fat, a timely dose or two of Epsom Salts (but you must not scour them), and a liberal supply of green-food, should soon work an improvement. If their cages are at all small, train them to take a daily fly round the room, you can soon train them to return to the cage as desired by placing some dainty tit-bit they are fond of therein. The terms, flighted and unflighted, are barely applicable to foreign birds; repeat this portion of your query to one of our Canary experts.

Cockatoo Lost His Feathers.

D P. (Jarrow).—I can only say, in addition to my previous reply, that if you are quite sure it is not pecking or pulling its feathers, there is no need to continue to spray with quassia solution. Continue the chemical food in its water as already directed, also give it sulphur by some means. The best way to give this is to slightly damp a piece of bread or Madeira cake and well dust it with flowers of sulphur. Recovery will not be rapid, and you must persevere with the treatment. Do not keep too warm; at the same time protect it from draught. Encourage it to take plenty of green-food and ripe fruit, also as much cuttlefish as it will eat. I take it, from your note, that the bird is constitutionally weak, and that the recovery of its plumage will be rather slow; but as the bird appears otherwise fairly healthy, it should ultimately recover same. Permit me to congratulate you on your success with the Blue Mountain Lories.

Parrot for Household Pet.

Pulchræ Aves.—Tastes vary so in this respect, that a reply is very difficult. Some want a talker, others a pet they can handle and fondle; some prefer a large one, others a small one, while others again prefer gorgeous apparel before anything else. If you want a really good talker it must be either an Amazon or Grey. If, on the other hand, you want a wrist bird, or a tame pet you can have at liberty in your room and about you, then you cannot do better than get a Tui or some allied species. It is not large, but at the same time is a handsome, bright green bird, relieved with a few small patches of yellow. All the genus "Brotogerys" make good pets, they are not very common, and consequently not cheap, neither are they very costly, and one or other of the species can usually be obtained, viz., the All-green, the Orange-winged, the Yellow-winged, the Orange-flanked, the Tovi, the Tui, and the Golden-fronted Parrakeets; perhaps the three last would be the most suitable.

Amazon Running at the Nose.

"Nightingale, J. C."—Spray the bird's nostrils twice daily with diluted glyco-thymoline. Do not keep it in the warmest part of your room, rather where the temperature is the most equable and yet free from draught. It will do no harm if a little of the solution is swallowed. In lieu of spraying, you can dab the nostrils with the solution, using a small camel-hair brush, but the brush must be well cleansed, and a fresh portion of the solution used for each occasion. If it should go off its food at all, you had better write at once, supplying the fullest details you can.

Chummy and Companionable.

S.W.—It is the Roseate or Rose-breasted Cockatoo (Cacatua roseicapilla). They are not as a rule noted for talking capacity, though accounts have been published recently in CAGE BIRDS of quite accomplished talkers: nevertheless, it is a fact, that the majority of these birds do but little in this respect. They make chummy, companionable birds, and are interesting for their acrobatic antics. There is but one thing you can do, keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, also teach it by constant repetition, and it should ultimately, at any rate, speak a word or two. It is perhaps best to cover these birds up at night, but there should be a small space on top of cage left uncovered for ventilation; I don't think such covering up will help it to talk, or make it easier to teach it to do so. Do not give table scraps, tea, coffee, or milk slops, or any kind of animal food, it is a hardy species, and only needs protection from draught. Diet as advised regularly in this column.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Recovery of Expenses (A. Carter).—If you received no notification of class being cancelled (or entry fee was not returned) then we think you could recover expenses on the one exhibit concerned. You should write to the chairman (or one of the committee) seeing the secretary ignores your letters. You most certainly are entitled to the return of the entry fee.

"Lively doings at Lancaster" (Member).—Such a letter as you send us we could not possibly publish over a nom-de-plume. It comes within reach of the law of libel, we are afraid, from beginning to end.

Photograph (J. Simon).—We should very much like to publish the photograph you so kindly send us, but we are afraid it is not clear (sharp) enough to reproduce satisfactorily. We will, however, see what our printer thinks on this point.

Sidmouth Show (F.F.).—We are very much indebted to you for sending us a report of the fixture, but unfortunately we had already made arrangements to receive one. Pleased to hear it proved a success.

Cheap Roller Cocks (W. Hatcher).—You should apply to one of the wholesale dealers and importers of German Canaries advertising in our columns. We cannot (it is against our rules) recommend any particular dealer or dealers.

IN THE COURTS.

The Railways and the Carriage of Live Stock.

Last summer Mr. J. W. Ramsden took up a case for the C.B.U. with reference to a member's bird being lost on rail, with negligence alleged. The railway company pleaded their limitation clause, and it was agreed to await the Appeal Court's decision in the dog case—which was on all fours with this case. The Court has just decided in favour of the railway company, so the limit imposed by the railway companies seems now legally held to be a reasonable one. The appended is a condensed report of the case in question:—

An appeal by the Midland Railway Company raised a point of great importance not only to all the railway companies, but to exhibitors and breeders who have to send valuable dogs from one part of the country to another by rail.

Mr. Williams, the plaintiff, was owner of a pointer bitch, Rose of Gerwn, which was said to be of the value of 500 guineas. In February, 1905, he sent the dog from Neath by the Great Western Railway consigned to Chester, under a contract which contained the condition that the railway company would not in any case be responsible in the event of loss for a greater sum than £2 unless the higher value were declared at the time of delivery to the company and a percentage of 1¼ per cent. (minimum 3d.) paid upon the excess value so declared. En route the dog was transferred to the Midland Company and arrived at Chesterfield about 6 p.m. It was placed in the parcels office, and about midnight the basket in which the dog was packed was found to be on fire, and the dog was burned to death. An action was brought by Mr. Williams to recover £300, the agreed value of the dog. The company paid £2 into court, and pleaded that under the contract note they were in no case liable to pay more.

The real question raised at the trial was whether the contract note—which is the same in all companies—was "just and reasonable." In support of Mr. Williams's contention that it was unreasonable, it was urged that the same percentage was charged no matter what distance the dog had to travel; and, further, that the amount which he would have to pay to get the benefit of the company's extended liability on a dog of the value of £300 would come to £3 15s., which was out of all proportion to the risk. The £3 15s. was five times the rate which a third-class passenger would have to pay, and nearly three times as much as the first-class fare of a passenger.

Mr. Justice Walton held that the owner of the dog was entitled to judgment for the £300, the value of the dog.

After a long legal argument, the Earl of Halsbury said the question was whether the plaintiff (Mr. Williams) was entitled to say the condition as to declared value was unreasonable. He did not agree with the decision come to by Mr. Justice Walton, whose findings he did not distinctly understand. He thought it not only reasonable that there should be a percentage, but the fact that the 1¼ had lasted over sixteen years without question was evidence that the percentage was reasonable. That being so the appeal must be allowed.—Sir Gorell Barnes agreed.—Mr. Justice Bigham said he agreed that if the reasonableness of this condition was to be considered with reference to the evidence that was given its reasonableness had been established. But even if the question was to be considered apart from the evidence he should have been prepared to hold that this rule on its face was reasonable.—Judgment was therefore entered for the railway company, and the appeal was allowed with costs.

Then—and Now.

When I came into the Fancy I did not know a Norwich from a Yorkshire, but CAGE BIRDS soon taught me better. I have not missed an issue since the autumn of 1904, and it has been my guide since then. In 1906 I got in the tickets with every unflighted Yorkshire I put on the Bench, while I have two Thrushes, 1905 nestlings, which CAGE BIRDS taught me how to feed, that have not yet been beaten—first and special every time.—W. DOWNING (Manchester).

OUR COLOURED PLATE.

Some Triumphs of Hybrid Breeding.

For Mr. Norman's painting of some of the most charming of our known Hybrids, which accompanies this Christmas number, we anticipate an even warmer welcome than that which greeted his recent plate of Mules, "A Blend of Canary Blood," to which, indeed, the present plate may be said to be a companion picture. The blending of the colours and structural peculiarities of the different parents is depicted in the masterly fashion readers of CAGE BIRDS long ago began to associate with Mr. Norman's truthful brush. In most of the Hybrids between two British birds (especially between bright-coloured species), the sexes are distinguished by considerable differences in the plumage. This is well shown in the cock and the hen Redpoll-Bullfinch Hybrids seen in the plate (two rare birds, by-the-way, painted from specimens loaned by that cute breeder, Mr. T. Dixon, Wigton). The young cock greatly resembles the female (even after the moult) until his second year. The beauties of the Goldfinch-Siskin, Goldfinch-Linnet (painted from the well-known winners exhibited by Mr. E. J. Lamb, Kingston-on-Thames), and Linnet-Bullfinch crosses will be apparent to all.

CORRESPONDENCE.

LATE CANARY BREEDING.

SIR,—Being a great advocate of open-air breeding, I should like to bring before your notice an unusual instance of late season breeding of Canaries. I had hatched on November 1st a nest of two. On the 22nd they were flying about, and they are now doing well. They were hatched and bred in the open. I have been a constant reader of your paper ever since its commencement, and I have never seen in print, or heard of any other Canaries being hatched so late in the season. I should be pleased, therefore, if you would kindly publish this information. I have been an open-air breeder for the past ten years, with very good results. I have bred 64 Linnet Mules this season with great satisfaction. I should be very pleased to show the birds to any callers.

WILLIAM ACLAND.

245, Cassland-road, South Hackney.

THE DIPPER IN CAPTIVITY.

SIR,—Some time ago I wrote to you telling of my efforts to keep the Dipper in an aviary. They (my birds) are still alive and healthy, and would have been on the show bench at Dublin if the secretary had sent me a schedule as requested. I wrote off about a week before entries closing, and then set to work to prepare my birds. They were steady and in glossy plumage, and I had just got some new show cages for them. Judge of my sorrow when the day of the closing of entries arrived and no schedule had appeared. All my trouble and labour were in vain, and I have probably lost the opportunity of showing them this year, as I do not like to send them far away. The show, too, has lost a chance, for I believe they would have been the first Dippers exhibited (for a long while at least), and would have been a great attraction. CAGE BIRDS is a splendid paper, easily the best. I am sure fanciers will sympathise with me in having lost an almost certain win.

K. D. FITZMAURICE (Miss).

THE NOVICE QUESTION.

A Point for Lancashire Shows.

SIR,—I would like to know the rule with regard to the showing of British birds throughout the country. In London and district I noticed that amateurs and novices are allowed to show their British specimens at open shows, in the champion classes, without any fear of a win throwing them out of the novice Canary section. I also noticed what bumping classes they got at both open and members' shows, and I thought how differently the novice was treated down South, and how he appreciated this kindness by helping to fill classes at the open shows. How different this to our treatment here in Lancashire, where no classes are provided for the amateur or the novice in the open shows. A novice can only show with the certainty of being fired out of the amateur Canary section if he wins anything with his British. I contend this is not right. Why should these points be counted against us in the Canary section? We breed our Canaries (I have bred every winner I have shown) but we buy our British—a wide difference. Yet the latter, when we have got them, are of very little use to us for show purposes, seeing we are only able to show them against our fellow-members at about three shows a year. And the novice with a couple of good birds only requires to win a few times to reduce the number of birds to almost vanishing point in the two usual classes for members' Hardbill and Softbill—sometimes only one class. Fancy a Thrush and a Redpoll both in the same class, both real good birds; do you think the judge is born who could do justice to these two birds in one class? What price the Redpoll, and its owner going to the trouble and expense of staging it again? I have also seen a House Sparrow in the same class. In my opinion this kills sport, because a man would be most foolish to stage a bird that he knew, before it left home, had not a ghost of a chance of winning. The consequence is that though we see so many British in our members' rooms, there are very few put on the bench. If a novice has a real good one, he must either kill the class after a short time, keep his bird at home, or sell; and I have the pleasure of knowing more than one fancier with birds fit to win in the open, but they are also Canary breeders, fighting their way up with a strain of their own. More power to 'em, more honour in breeding than buying birds! What are they to do? Well, I think it would be for the good of the Fancy to allow them to show their British at any open show in the kingdom without any hindrance, with Hybrids between two British birds or between British and Canary to be classed with the Canary section. Then I believe we would soon see extensions of classes and double the number of birds in them, the novice encouraged, and grist brought to the mill of struggling shows.

LANCASHIRE THROSTLE.

A FANCIER'S DEPLORABLE LOSS.

SIR,—I beg to thank most sincerely the following ladies and gentlemen who have sent me donations for Mr. A. C. Brotherhood's loss: CAGE BIRDS, 10s. 6d.; Mrs. Burton, 10s. 6d.; Ned Loring, Esq., 10s.; Mrs. Broughton, 10s.; Rev. W. J. Burges, 10s. 6d.; Rev. J. P. Noble, 2s. 6d.; A. Heber Percy, Esq., £1; Rev. J. Percival Farrar, 10s.; Boville Spencer, Esq., 5s.; Mr. Hall, 4s.; Mr. Hindley, 5s.; Hon. Gerald Hill, 2s. 6d. P. VICTOR WILLIAMS.

THE LOWESTOFT LAW SUIT.

SIR,—Early in the year you very kindly published in CAGE BIRDS the fact that my society had had the misfortune to be dragged into a law suit, through an accident at our late show, December 5th, 1906, caused by the fall of an advertisement board, which had been standing outside the show building. The board fell on and injured a lady who was passing. You also recorded that the County Court Judge non-suited the plaintiff, but refused to allow my society costs. On the advice of our solicitor, Mr. H. E. Everitt, the action was taken to the Appeal Court, and I am pleased to inform you the decision of the County Court Judge was reversed, the Divisional Court deciding in our favour, with all costs, so that, thanks to the able management of our legal adviser, the matter is now cleared up, and without costing the society one penny. With this case unsettled my committee thought it inadvisable to run a show this year, but we now hope to carry on the society as hitherto, and have our annual show in 1908. E. L. A. CROW.

THE APPROACHING DECAY OF CAGE BIRD CLUBS.

SIR,—Seeing some correspondence in your valuable paper on the above subject, I shall esteem a great favour if you will allow me a little space, as it seems to hit a certain society to a nicety. I might say a new society was started in this district with the intention of encouraging the novice fancier, of drawing more new members into the interesting hobby of bird breeding, and of promoting the welfare of our feathered pets. After the society was formed it was decided to have a show, every member being in favour. A committee was formed to wait on the public to see if it were possible to get special prizes. The public responded most generously; a number of medals were given, and a splendid cup was also given to the points in Plainhead classes. Everybody was delighted, and would try their best to gain some of these specials, and therefore made several entries. Show day arrived, and the members visited the show to see how things stood with them. But, alas! what a disappointment for them, as they saw birds of great value that had never been seen before by any member, although the exhibitors' rooms were visited a very short time previous. What do we learn? The birds were supplied by the judge, and, of course, he had placed them all in the money, therefore giving a fancier who had spent his time and labour in trying to breed a good bird no earthly chance whatever. This, mind you, by men who had promised to help the novice. Instead of helping them, it has about broken their hearts, as several have vowed they will never again be a member of that society. And can it be wondered at? Some people get so carried away in their desire to win, that they throw prudence to the wind, and either borrow or hire their winners; or do anything, as long as they win. Where is the honour? I'm at a loss to know why, as years go on, this class of fancier still stands in the same way as he did when a novice, as he cannot gain experience unless he uses his headpiece to pair up successfully to breed winners. I notice "Fancier" suggests there should be a visiting committee. With him I agree, and it was put to this society and carried; but at the next meeting it was rescinded. Why? Because it would interfere with those that did not show honestly. The sooner a club adopts a visiting committee, I think, the better, as it will stop a lot of dishonest practices that are now being carried on. I don't agree with "Fancier," that a man should be debared from showing, unless he shows his own birds, that are bred by himself. On the contrary I give a man credit if he can buy a winner, for if it were not for such buyers, one would not know what to do with the birds one breeds. What I think should be done by all societies, is to make a rule and compel all exhibitors to put in the schedule the name of the breeder of the bird shown by them, and thereby give the credit where credit is due. In conclusion, should this meet the eye of anyone who is accustomed to such tricks as stated it may pull him up before the practice gets too far, for as sure as there is a sky, it will be found out sooner or later; then, what a degradation! EXHIBITOR.

CITY OF GLASGOW O.A.

SIR, — The annual business meeting of the City O.A. is to come off on Saturday, 21st December, and it is to be hoped every member within reasonable distance will fill his niche and take part in the proceedings. It is the place to clear up all differences. It has been suggested that it would be an improvement to abolish the severe tax of special prizes, and let the money wasted in that direction flow into the coffers of the Association. The City should lead in matters of reform, and here is a golden opportunity. I am sure our hard working secretaries will welcome the change. The canvassing for special prizes is the most unpleasant part of their duties, they have enough to do otherwise, and deserve every encouragement. Fellow fanciers come and help in healthy reformation! A MEMBER.

THE COCKERMOUTH FEATHER SOCIETY SHOW.

SIR,—Permit me this opportunity of thanking those fanciers who so generously rallied round us last week, and in every department assisted in making our show one huge success. After explaining in your columns how the C.B.U. had dealt with us, I ventured to ask your readers to give us a record entry. They did so, and some went so far as to forward with their entries letters of sympathy. Why, Sir, we had entries from Carlisle sent in the same sporting spirit, and not with any feeling of antagonism to their own show. I hope our success will be an object lesson to the C.B.U. to give more consideration to the so-called "smaller" shows, and to conduct their affairs in a more business like manner. Our total entries were 1,055, our takings in the room over £40, our visitors coming from the Scottish borders to Furness, with cheap bookings from stations within a radius of 15 miles. I commend these figures and the enterprise which made them possible to Mr. Lythgoe. I would conclude with a special word of thanks to our friends in West Cumberland, for their generous practical support GEO. OGLETHORPE.

WITHHOLDING AWARDS AND PRIZE-MONEY AT KENTISH SHOWS.

SIR,—Your correspondent, "Commune Bonum" has rushed into print entirely unaware of the true facts. It is always advisable to support facts, where possible, by figures; but statements should be as free from prejudice as figures are accurate in detail. Without taking up too much of your valuable space, permit me to deal in order with your correspondent's complaints. There was no record entry in the C.B. Section, thanks (?) to the action of certain local executive and ordinary members of the K.C.C.B.A., who boycotted the show. Some months since something of a local executive split took place in that association, and the ill-feeling generated from the same found expression in this boycott, though the Dover F. and F. Society—as a society—had no part in it. This explains why so little cancellation took place. Now as regards awards. This was our seventh exhibition. The judge was at liberty to award and to use his discretionary powers as in former years. Therefore I infer that the Hardbill classes received higher awards because of their higher merit. Surely "Commune Bonum" does not demand a first, second, and third award in each class irrespective of standard merit and the number of exhibits? Permit me, sir, to make an emphatic and strong protest against the unwarrantable assertion that the Dover Society has "done" exhibitors. This expression is as unnecessary and uncalled for as the truth of your correspondent's "hard facts" is to find. Far more considerate and worthy of a sportsman would it have been to communicate direct to my committee making these complaints and asking for explanations. Had this exhibitor even approached the Society, by suggestion through the K.C.C.B.A. after his cause for complaint against the latter, it would have received, at the least, the courteous consideration he has denied to us. I have little or no knowledge of the method of calculating points for the K.C.C.B.A. bowls; but it must always seem to the impartial, unprejudiced by self-interests, that first in a class of eight will generally be of higher merit than in a class of, say, four; and unless the judge has some voice in the matter there will assuredly be safer ground for complaint. As to the appointment of the pigeon judge—to whom the sincere thanks of the Dover Society are due for helping us out of a dilemma—to judge C.B. Section, it may be news to your correspondent to hear that I did not receive notification of Mr. North's inability to officiate until first post on the day previous to the show. Further, the number of exhibits in the sixty-one classes referred to were about 405, and not "about 450." This is another "hard fact" in which the error is on "Commune Bonum's" side—an error of hasty condemnation which, in the future, he will do well to avoid. I am sure your readers' love of justice will deprecate the "bull-at-a-haystack" method of rushing into print before one is sure of their figures. In face of the above facts, some may naturally conclude that "Commune Bonum" should have been written "Self-Interest."

ARTHUR S. HORREX,
Hon. Sec. D. and D. F. and F. Society.

SIR,—I fully agree with Commune Bonum as to treatment at Dover and District Show. I was a winner of three firsts and a special, for which I have had most elaborate cards and a cheque for 12s. 6d. instead of 30s. Even taking half prize-money, this should have been 15s. One class of two entries should have been cancelled; my bird was first, and I have a first prize card, but I only receive 2s. 6d., as the award stood at half second-prize money. Now, as the entry fees were to my mind excessive (considering the show), namely, 1s. 9d. each, and the carriage of birds is 2s., there is not much over for time and trouble when you get 2s. 6d. for a first prize. Another class was amalgamated, but only half prize money was awarded. It seems to me that once entries are made and the £ s. d. is safe, then the show committee start exercising their advertised rights, to do as they please as regards money, amalgamation, cancelling, or anything else that takes their fancy, and the poor exhibitor is nowhere. But they must not forget that if there were no exhibitors there would be no money. So surely their "mainstay" should be studied a little. This is no case of a disappointed exhibitor, as I did well, EXHIBITOR.

SCOTCH FANCY CANARY CLUB.

SIR,—Noticing a letter from "Scotch Fancier," in which he alludes to the eight classifications, permit me to say that I am hopeful of seeing at least one show in England with such classification next year. It could easily be arranged in a central town in connection with an annual fixture. But while we have certain funds in hand, it is members we want. "Scotch Fancier" says such and such would draw from Scotland; yes, but we want their support also. Any way, I promise Scotch fanciers, if they will only give their support to the club, there will be no need of complaint for want of encouragement next year. I have just received from a fancier twenty shillings, four members' subscriptions. I will be pleased to hear from any fancier wishing to become a member.—J. HARRISON, 145, Balby Road, Doncaster.

CLASHING OF SHOW DATES IN CUMBERLAND.

SIR,—The border county, though fairly extensive in area, is only thinly populated, but its people are thoroughly sport-loving, and fanciers of every kind of animal and bird, followers of every sturdy, manly game and pastime are exceptionally numerous. This sporting instinct is fostered by a multitude of clubs and societies, who in organising their gatherings find it increasingly difficult to avoid clashing with others, a necessity due to the sparse population. Might I suggest that representatives of the various poultry, pigeon and cage bird societies in the county should meet at an early date in the New Year, and in conference endeavour to arrange amicably and expeditiously dates, etc., for their various shows. I should be glad to make arrangements for such a meeting. GEO. OGLETHORPE,
Lorton, Cockermouth.

WHAT KIND OF NORWICH HAVE WE TO BREED?

SIR,—Following up the letter by St. Mungo, we are in the same fix this way. It is true, we have a standard of the Norwich Plainhead for our guidance, but when some judges go for "Rooks" and others for "Tomtits" we really hardly know what to call a show specimen. At Kent shows of late years we have had first prize winners of large size—sometimes a little browy, rather long, and not always tight in feather. Now this season at two shows the birds we should have called wasters from our best pairs have come home with flying colours—little birds, short and good quality. If we wish to catch the judge's eye, and we do not happen to know his pet type, does this mean we must put two birds in each class—one a "Rook" and the other a "Tomtit"? I have shown a typical buff cock that has taken first in a strong class of 32, but under another judge he came in "commended" only, and yet on looking round he was practically the best bird in the class. But this judge went for the colour, yellow, whereas I contend a really rich buff with boxwood feather, short all over and good head, is more difficult to breed than a small yellow bird. This one is well fed and shown in grand form. Another buff that took two firsts under two judges, under a third one only came in third, and again a yellow of small size beat him. What standard can be worked for when opinions differ so much? PERPLEXED KENTITE.

THE SONG OF THE EXHIBITION ROLLER.

SIR,—With reference to "Variety's" letter in your issue of 7th inst., my experience of breeding Rollers has been similar to his, and with him I shall be glad if some prominent breeder would kindly give us his views, which would be greatly appreciated by another AMATEUR.

THE CHALLENGE SHIELD AWARD AT DULWICH SHOW.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. Baker's letter, he seems very hard hit over something. Instead of me showing "the most deplorable exhibition of petty jealousy," it seems to be vice versa. I did not approve of the way in which the judging was carried on. Three judges were appointed to judge, and should have completed it, or left it alone. If we allow this kind of thing to continue, where will it stop? As Mr. Baker admits he is not an expert, he should not have undertaken to finish an expert's work. W. MORRIS.

THE GIBSON CUP.

SIR,—The Gibson Cup was got by a certain Scotch fancier to be competed for at the Scottish National Show, and it was understood to be for the Scotch Fancy section, which is having a hard struggle for existence. The other sections could not leave it there, and troubled the donor, in my opinion unnecessarily, and the outcome of that interference is that the Cup is to go year by year round the various sections. That is not a satisfactory arrangement, in my own opinion, and I would like to have, through your columns, Mr. Wright's version of the terms upon which the Cup was originally given. I see plainly that there is a disposition to crush out the Scotch Fancy Canary, which is and will ever remain the most valuable of the Canary tribe. A SCOTCH FANCIER.

THE LENGTH OF THE YORKSHIRE CANARY.

SIR,—For a long time past I have been turning over in my mind the advisabilty of someone calling attention to the growing craze for length in the Yorkshire Canary. It does seem an absurd thing to me to fix upon a standard length of say 6¾ inches, and then for three out of four of the winners at quite a number of shows to be found measuring anything, from 7 inches to 8 inches. Some of these birds, I know, get it in "tail." I am not saying this in any vein sarcastic, but really I have often wondered whether some of our judges have begun to confuse the Yorkshire Canary with the Long-tailed Whydah. I mean, of course, in the matter of length of tail. No doubt size is very attractive to people, who have a large optic and want a lot to fill it, and as length generally accompanies size, it is probably concluded that a good big 'un in this respect ought always to beat a good little 'un. My word! and some of the long-tailed, flat-sided, coarse-headed, ugly-beaked, flaky-feathered, loose-breeched specimens that have been taking the prizes—not winning them—have been ocular demonstration that it is "size that appeases the passion" of some judges. But where will this tend? Will it tend to improve the variety? Will it tend to make or mar the beauty of the Yorkshire of the future?

J. T. CLIMB.

AN ALLEGED MISLEADING ADVERTISEMENT.

SIR,—I think Mr. W. Walsh must have misunderstood my letter of last week. If he will read my letter again he will find that I did not say, nor did I insinuate, that he was masquerading under an assumed name; neither did I say that I was the only Walsh that owns a winning strain of Yorkshires. What I did say, however, was that I was the owner of the strain of Yorkshires that is winning at the Yorkshire Union shows under the name of Walsh. That I again assert, Mr. Editor, and with your kind permission will prove. But first, just to clear the ground a little, if Mr. W. will turn to the last paragraph of my previous letter he will see how, by a very small outlay on his part, he could have prevented its being written. And now for the proofs. Up to date there have been ten Union shows, and I find in going through the catalogues that the following awards have been secured by birds exhibited under the name of Walsh: 7 firsts, 10 specials, 4 seconds, 4 thirds, 4 fourths, 5 v.h.c.'s, 4 h.c.'s, and 3 c.'s all but one v.h.c. being won by my birds (Mr. W., kindly correct me if I make a mistake). Here, Mr. Editor, let me apologise to you for having written the above, and to assure you, Sir, and your readers, that my object in writing has been, not to damage anyone's interest, but merely to protect my own. Finally, if Mr. W. had not seen fit to demand me to withdraw the accusation (what, by the way, is the accusation, I wonder?), and also apologise, I would have been content to have let the matter end with his last letter. H. W. WALSH.

Halifax.

HYBRIDS AT PERTH SHOW.

SIR,—I expected to see Mr. Langland's reply to my letter by this time, but evidently he does not care to vindicate his position. Now, in all fairness, he should at least let me know why he marked my bird wrong class. When a judge comes to a decision such as this, he surely must have some reason for it. Exhibitors do not pay entrance fees and railway expenses—which are in all conscience heavy enough—to have this treatment meted out to them. If he has made a mistake, and we are all liable to err, the best thing he can do is to own up to it.

JAMES OVENSTONE.

AN S.Y.C.C. MATTER.

SIR,—For the enlightenment of those gentlemen who are showing such abnormal eagerness to elevate Mr. G. J. Warley to the champion section and for the special edification of the sporting (?) fellow member who protested against him before troubling to inquire into the facts, I would inform them and him that the novice classes held at Rochester Show Dec. 17 and 18, 1906, were confined to novice members of the S.Y.C.C. and were not open novice classes. I have documentary evidence in front of me now to prove this. My only object in writing this is that Mr. Warley has been threatened with all the pains and penalties, etc., should he still show in the novice section, although it is obvious he is still a novice according to the present rules of the S.Y.C.C.

R. P. BROOME,
late Hon. Sec. S.Y.C.C.

ALLEGED DISCOURTEOUS TREATMENT AT A SHOW.

SIR,—I beg to thank you for inserting my letter re Birds sent to a certain Midland show, and the treatment I received. I must say that up to time of writing I have had no communication whatever, neither have I had my money returned, although as stated, the date of the show was October 23rd. I also beg to inform you that I have (as seen by show reports) sent to Lowestoft, Diss and Sudbury where, I may say, I received the utmost courtesy from secretary, and stewards; all possible was done in feeding and packing birds. These are small and large soft bills which I have taken to this year, after reading an excellent lecture from Mr. Sandy (in CAGE BIRDS, May 25th and June 2nd) and the other valuable knowledge inserted each week in your paper. My Redstart and two Gales will feed from hand—both through the netting and with hand inside cage door. "ONE OF THE MUGS."

TREE SPARROW-HOUSE SPARROW AT WESTMINSTER SHOW.

SIR,—I was greatly surprised to find that my entry No. 7 in Class 115 had been marked "wrong class" by the judge. Why this is so it is impossible to understand, the class being for A.O.V. Hybrid between two British birds, and the Hybrid in question being the result of a cross between the cock Tree-Sparrow and hen House-Sparrow. The bird was bred in my outdoor aviary during the past summer, and was hatched by a Canary hen, who reared it with a little assistance from myself. Anyone at all familiar with the two species from which it is derived (and surely Mr. Houlton is not ignorant of the distinctive markings and colours of such very common birds) can see at a glance that it is not a pure-bred example of either P. domestica or P. montana. I will just point out a few distinctive characteristics. Tree-Sparrows, of both sexes, have a distinct patch of black on each cheek. Their heads are of a beautiful claret-brown colour, unbroken by any mark of another colour whatever. At the throat there is a V-shaped black mark, the breast, etc., being whitish-grey. There is a white collar round the back of the neck. As everybody knows, the cock House-Sparrow has the cheeks dirty greyish-white, quite unmarked. The sides of the head are dark brown, and the crown and back of the head are dirty brownish-grey. The black of the throat extends to the breast, where it spreads out in a more or less irregular fashion, some old males having quite a black waistcoat. The parts which are whitish-grey in P. montana are dinghy-grey in P. domestica. In my bird the black cheek mark of P. montana is only very faintly indicated. The sides and back of the head are bright brown, the crown greyish. The throat mark commences V-shaped, so to speak, but extends down the chest in an irregular band. Like its father, the white parts are much purer in colour than the corresponding parts of the House-Sparrow. The white collar is quite apparent, but only extends half-way round each side of the neck. In addition to these differences, there are many other subtle ones between this bird and pure-bred examples of either of the parent species which are at once apparent to the expert eye. In face of the above facts it seems incredible that a man of Mr. C. Houlton's experience could make such a mistake.

WATSON LYLE.

AN ALLEGED ACCUSATION AGAINST A BRISTOL EXHIBITOR.

SIR,—At the Bristol Fanciers' Show, Dec. 4th and 5th, I took 3rd in a class of 15, and won the Crocker Cup with a Norwich P.H. The cup was for the best bird bred by exhibitor in 1907 any variety. Now, it has come to my notice that I am accused of buying the bird to win it with, and that it is a bird bred 1906. In the first place, I should give the judge credit for knowing a flighted from an unflighted fed bird, and what is more, I can prove to all concerned that I bred this young bird, and bred the mother of same. The cup winner took second in June last at the B.C.B.S. first feather show, and in August it took v.h.c. at Brislington, h.c. at Downend, v.h.c. and Mr. Brown's special (value 20s.) for the best unflighted bird any variety. Now I challenge the member who has spread the rumour to prove that I did not breed this bird, or else make an apology through CAGE BIRDS, or before the members of the B.C.B.S. at their club meeting on January 1st, 1908.

THE SHOWS.

KIDDERMINSTER.

The above well-managed society held their annual show on Dec. 11th and 12th, in the Town Hall—a grand place for a show, plenty of light, so that exhibits could be seen easily. The Norwich and British were splendid, some grand specimens being staged. The foreign did not come up to expectation. Mr. Hall's winning yell. Norwich was a grand bird. The Wryneck of Mr. Hingley's is a fine one, and took leading honours in the British section. The three British classes were amalgamated, which caused some grumbling. Councillor Harold Watton opened the show, before a good number of Fanciers, and said that as he was an exhibitor himself, he was very pleased to see such a very fine lot of cage birds and children's pets, which were a credit to their respective owners. The show was nicely decorated with CAGE BIRDS coloured posters, which were much admired. The committee would be wise another year, to have a cage bird judge; it would, according to the remarks we heard, increase the entry without a doubt. Mr. Jones, the secretary, worked hard for the success of the show, and deserves great credit; he was backed up by a capable lot of stewards, who all knew their work to a nicety. Mr. Jefferies had charge of our section, so that exhibitors were sure of their birds being well looked after. Mr. Forsyth judged. YORKS (2): Bishop, nice buff; he, Farmer and Sly. NOR. (11), a very good class: 1, 2, spl, Hall, fine pair, yell. and buff in order named, yell. true Nor. grand quality, good head and neck, neat wing carriage, wins, buff good size, nicely mealed, both well shown; 3, Elleson, nice yell., feather or two out of place; r, Hingley, eye and wing tick., buff, good breast, nice wing carriage, will improve with time; vhc, Horner; hc, Capewell, Cradley Heath winner; hc, Guest and Miles. A.O.V. (7): 1, spl, Bishop, Hinckley and Leicester winner, in good condition, dark crest, of nice radiation, good centre, well shown; 3, hc, Munn, two German songsters; r, Miles. BRIT. (Amalg): 1, 2, vhc, Hingley, Wryneck, Waxwing, Hawfinch, Wryneck good feather and condition, very steady, well pencilled, nicely shown, Waxwing nice crescent and bib, good tail, Hawfinch in very fine condition, a nice trio; 3, Perry, Goldfinch, very fair specimen; r, vhc, Potter and Bracey, grand Hawfinch in good plumage, fine bib and tail, very large, hard lines; vhc, grand Bullfinch, shown in the best of condition, good cap and wing bars, fine coloured breast; vhc, Miss Tavell; hc, Sly, Tate, Capewell. FOR.: 1, spl, best Brit. or For., Jews, Red Cardinal, a very fair exhibit; 2, Hingley, nice pair of Black Gouldian Finches; 3, r, Poole, scarlet Tanager, leading, well put down.

FEDERATION OF CAGE BIRD SOCIETIES.

Final Competition.

The final show was held on Dec. 5th and 6th, at the headquarters of the Stockport Society—the Boar's Head. The following are the results. Mr. W. Bowyer judge.

LANCS. A.V. (3): 1, Hazel Grove (7 pts.); 2, Oldham (6 pts.); 3, Stockport (5): LIZARD A.V. (5): 1 Stockport (7 pts.); 2, Hazel Grove (6 pts.); 3, Ashton (5 pts.); 4, vhc, Oldham (7 pts.) CREST OR C.B. (2): 1, Oldham (7 pts.); 2, Hazel Grove (6 pts.). NOR. A.V. (4): 1, Stockport (7 pts); 2, Oldham (6 pts.); 3, Ashton (5 pts.); 4, Ashton (4 pts.). YORKS. A.V. (3): 1, Hazel Grove (7 pts.); 2, Stockport (6 pts.); 3, Ashton (5 pts.). A.O.V. (4): 1, Stockport (7 pts.); 2, Hazel Grove (6 pts.); 3, Oldham (5 pts.); 4, Ashton (4 pts.). BRIT. (3): 1, Hazel Grove (7 pts.); 2, Stockport (6 pts.); 3, Ashton (5 pts.). Total pts.: Hazel Grove, 39; Stockport, 38; Oldham, 31; Ashton, 28. Final table:—

	Hazel Grove. Pts.	Oldham. Pts.	Ashton. Pts.	Stockport. Pts.	Total Pts.
Stockport ...	33	40	39	38	150
Oldham ...	36	36	32	31	135
Haze Grove ...	38	31	31	39	139
Ashton ...	31	30	35	28	124

A gathering of representatives was held on Dec. 6, when the cup was handed over from the Hazel Grove Secretary to their neighbours, the Stockport Society. Mr. F. Steeple, President (Oldham), in a very encouraging speech, referred to the object of the Federation, viz., the creation of good feeling between the neighbouring societies and the improvement of attendances at show. It gave him great pleasure, he said, to hand the cup to the recruits, who had gained the position by 11 pts. Mr. Dickinson, president of Stockport Society, in accepting the cup, said he was pleased that they had won the trophy, and hoped that the Federation would prosper, as it had created great interest amongst the members of the respective societies during the show season. Mr. Walters, of Hazel Grove, said they had tried hard to maintain their hold of the cup for another year, but were proud of the fact that it was not being taken out of Stockport. Mr. Broadhurst, treasurer of the Federation, also spoke of the interest taken in the Federation.

CUPAR, (Fife.)

Cupar, Fife and Dist. O. S. held their twentieth annual exhibition of Canaries on Dec. 7. The Corn Exchange, in which the show was held, is a splendid hall for the purpose, being of good dimensions, lofty and well lighted. President, Mr. G. White, Vice-Presidents Messrs. A. Allan, J. Gibson, and D. J. Watson, the secretary and treasurer, Mr. W. Ruddiman, who is one of the most capable and obliging managers we have had the pleasure of making personal acquaintance with, had the working of the show in apple pie order, and he was well backed up by a large and hard working committee, comprised of the following fanciers:—Messrs. Goodfellow, Robertson, Drysdale, Edmond, Welch, Speed, Burton, Gillespie, Low, Smith, Beggie, Dick, Houston, Morgan, Donaldson, and Cairns. Entries were well up to the average and good quality was here on view throughout. Scotch Fancies embraced over 70 entries, and these were well handled by Messrs. E. G. Wright and C. Berwick. Norwich varieties were well to the fore and Crests were well represented. Mr. J. M'Lay, of Norwich fame, had the handling of this variety, as well as the Plainhead classes, and his awards were well received. Borders were not so strong in quantity as we have seen here, but quality was well upheld, and some lovely birds were on view. Mr. H. Bennet gave his awards in this section, and his duties were performed to the satisfaction of most of the critics. This breed. British classes contained a grand variety, and helped to make an attractive display with their various and beautiful colours. Mr. M'Quiston judged these varieties and gave general satisfaction. Entries numbered over 325, and the judges got through their work in good time. Catalogues with awards filled in, were on sale by half-past 2 o'clock, which was very satisfactory. The show was well patronised during the day by visitors.

F. CARL, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet St., London.

CHESTER.

Held Dec. 11th, in the Corn Exchange, Eastgate, very suitable for the occasion, being well lighted from the top, the birds could all be judged without being moved. The members' classes were well filled. There were eight open classes. In the open Yorks., the competition was very strong, while the Norwich were a real treat. There were birds left out quite capable of winning at most shows. The British open class was an exceptional one, there being so many varieties in it. The capable and courteous hon. sec., Mr. Red, had everything in first class order, and the work seemed no trouble to him. He was well backed up by a good committee. Mr. A. Wellings judged, and gave every satisfaction.

OPEN YORKS. YELL. BRIT. (26): 1, Kirkham, Wryneck, shown in the best of condition, very tight in feather; 2, 4, P. V. Williams; 2, Clough, brilliant coloured legs and beak; 3, Nightingale, very steady, in full song, after judging; 3, Chick, grand Hawfinch, very brilliant colour; vhc, Mort; hc, W. Williams; c, Miss Hopwood.

(Members' classes next week.)

HORTICULTURAL HALL (London).

Held in the Horticultural Hall, Westminster, on December 6 and 7. The classification opened with Crests and Crestbreds, which made a nice display, amongst them being several real stormers. A magnificent youngster is "King Edward," owned by Mr. T. Taylor (Gatoshead), and many envious looks were cast towards it. Another outstanding bird was the almost green, the property of Mr. W. Radley (Skelmanthorpe), a winner on many previous occasions. The same owner's Buff Var. Crestbred also stood out as one of the "plums." We were sorry to hear that Mr. Mills, of Northampton, had the labels reversed on two of his cages, which had come from Bristol Show, the consequence being that his young (1907) bird got into the old bird class, and his old bird amongst the youngsters, the result, we understand, being the probable loss of a member's cup, as the youngster had just accounted for one of the Bristol bowls. The mistake was not noticed, both birds getting awards in the classes they wrongly competed in. In the novice section, Messrs. A. Lazarus and T. Gale took the lead with Crest and Crestbred respectively, both far above the ordinary run of novice birds. Yorkshires, the birds of "Graee and Beauty," struck one as being a real good collection, probably the best lot yet seen at any Southern show this season. Some hard battles were fought between the Northern and Southern cracks in many of the classes. The Yellow Cock (clear) staged by Messrs. Bailey and Swanger was voted a topper, as also was the Clear Buff Cock which represented Mr. W. H. Shackleton. Both are well-known winners and appeared with their toilets got up to that pitch of perfection only master hands can reach. In a hot class of Yellow Hens Mr. J. Hawes (London) captured premier honours with an enchanting damsel, which for length and quality and neatness and style was almost perfection. Mr. J. Wilcock placed on view a lovely Yellow Cinn. Marked Cock, while the Clear Yellow, 1907 bred, successfully shown by Mr. R. L. Crisp, and the Clear Buff, 1907, owned by Mr. A. E. Pattrick, are a couple of highly meritorious and promising youngsters. Novice classes filled well, as is generally the case, and great credit is due for the manner in which they staged their choice ones, to Messrs. Moss, Holbrook, Dobson, and Silverthorn. The Norwich Plainheads were truly a grand lot. The Clear Yellow staged by that well known Isle of Wight enthusiast, Mr. E. Baker, found many admirers, and well it might. Mr. W. Whetstone also stood at the head of affairs with a magnificent Clear Buff, a real model. In the hen class competition ruled exceedingly keen, many big winners finding themselves amongst the cardless division. A superb exhibit is the Clear Buff Hen owned by Messrs. Hopkins and Allsop, which was closely followed by the noted Clear Yellow, the property of Mr. J. Sandiford. Both hens are charmers, and good enough to "fight for a kingdom." In the novice classes one could pick out several that could hold their own amongst the "upper ten." Very typical specimens were shown by Messrs. Wearden, Lawrence, Marley, Nichols, Tottle, and Keech. The Borders classes contained many lovely examples, and the "Bantams" drew expressions of admiration from a goodly number of those present on their pert and smart appearance. Very high-class exhibits were shown by Messrs. Brownlie, Jenkins, Seiranac, and Sheldon. The Lancs. and Lizards were fairly good in numbers, and an attractive lot, Messrs. F. J. Green, West, and Adams in the former, and Messrs. Rukin, Lawton, Dewsnap, Hampshire, Green, Fisher, and Wynn in the latter having out some grand birds. A distinct and pleasing novelty was the class for London Fancy Canaries ("stock birds"), which had eight entries, six birds facing the judge. They were not so perfect to the ideal as formerly, but we hope they will be brought back to their one-time beauty in the near future. We were inclined to prefer the second prize bird (Mr. A. G. Filby) ourselves. This gentleman staged four, and Mr. Tyson (who won) two. The Roller Canaries were a "knock-out" — there were no fewer than 55 birds in the young bird class! The Roller C.C. generously duplicated the prizes right through this class. The birds were a continuous source of pleasure to the visitors, and were nicely arranged in a warm vestibule. The chief prize winners were Messrs. Raudall, Whittaker, Fisher, Lyons, Merrick, Percival, Wilsdon, Kerr, Bramhall, Walters Bros., Whittlestone, Burton, Wirth, White, Roche, Norris, and Tweed. The cage section provided a most interesting display, and the wares of Messrs. Newley, Palmer, Hathaway, Lindsay, and Loveland were much admired. Messrs. Trower and Co., made a magnificent show of seeds, foods, and specialities on their stand, and Messrs. Carter and Co., also had in the hall a splendid stand of their seeds, etc. Mr. T. Dewhurst also exhibited his heating apparatus, a most efficient and moderate priced article.

The judges were Messrs. T. J. King (Crests), R. Halliday (Yorks), J. Robson (remainder of Canaries), C. Boulton (Hyb. and Brit. Hardbills), P. F. M. Galloway (Exjt. Insectiv.), W. T. Page (For.), and Lester, Roehl and Rettich (Rollers). Their decisions, on the whole, met with acceptance, as only an odd "grumble" here and there reached our ears.

The Canary Section.

CAGE CLASSES, A.V. SHOW CAGES (27): 1, 2, 8, vhc (3), hc, c, Newley, a fine lot of up-to-date, beautifully made and finished show cages (Hawfinch, Goldfinch, Siskin, Wagtail, Foreign, etc.), most reasonable in price; vhc, Hathaway, grand cage for Lories, high in price, but very high class; hc, Linsay, good Thrush cage. BREEDING CAGE (12): 1, vhc (3), Newley, double breeder leading, very practical in design and fittings, well made, cheap in price, singles for Nor. and Yorks. and 3-compartment Mules follow; 2, 3, Palmer, single and double breeders respectively, marvellous value for the money (4/6 and 7/6 respectively), and really well constructed and neatly finished, quite up-to-date in design, too; hc, Loveland, Linsay, a couple more excellent cages. TRAVELLING CASES: No award given in catalogue, but we noticed a well-made, and decidedly "ornamental" case on the staging, exhibited by Mr. Whittaker.

The Hybrids and British Hardbills.

The Hybrid classes must be counted a decided success. Some fanciers' lost their chances with really choice hybrids through their exhibits arriving too late for competition; they should see to it that they are despatched to arrive long before midday on the day of judging. Six Bullfinch Hybrids were entered, and Mrs. Askham scored 1st and 2nd with a cock and hen Canary-Bullfinch. It is but fair to say that had Mr. C. J. Ward's Linnet-Bullie and Redpoll-Bullie arrived in time for judging they would have fought hard for premier honours. The A.O.V. between two British birds brought together several fine and very interesting exhibits. One was claimed to be between a "House" and "Tree" Sparrows. The pairs matched for Hybrid breeding formed a very pretty and instructive class, a class that is worth putting on at all open shows. The British Hardbill section was very strong indeed, and an exceptionally fine lot of Goldfinches came together. They were remarkable for the close run and evenness of merit shown in the majority of the 26 birds present. We noted one very likely winner "Invicta" by name, who has had the misfortune to lose nearly the whole of two toes off the left foot. He would take a lot of beating if his feet were right. Bullfinches came up splendidly, a very superior level lot all through. The Greenfinches were real champions, and all the ticketed birds deserve the greatest praise. Hawfinches were a sight to see. Never has there been a better lot together, and after the winner, "Midland Chief" by name, it was the finest competition for places that could be.

UNEVEN, ETC., HYBRID (8): 1, Taylor, lightly var. yell., Gold-Can., real Nor. type, very solid, level colour all over, in fine tight feather and condition; 2, Beaty, 6-point buff and ticked nape, grand size, shape, colour and quality of feather; 3, Lamb, 6-point yell., tick thigh and rump, smaller, but beautiful colour and feather; 4, Dixon, 6-point buff, ticked cheeks, grand colour, feather and condition, nice size and runs second very close up; vhc, Hopkins and Allsopp; hc, Lack; Nos. 2 and 8 arrived too late to be judged. DARK GOLD-CAN. (11): 1, Marshall, grand Jonque, rare size and shape, brilliant bright colour, sound glossy feather and condition, nice blaze; 2, Coffey, grand head, size and colour; 3, Best, very fine buff, good brood chest, big face, well coloured, nice feather and finish; 4, Carter, fine, big buff; vhc, Pearce and Williams, good coloured yellow; hc, Beaty; c, Mortlock. DARK LINNET (6): 1, Coffey, well-known slashing, big bird, full of splendid markings, colour, shape, feather and condition, very glossy; 2, Dixon, fine head, a grand bird when in the best form and condition; 3, Morris Bros., well marked, very pretty shape; 4, Godfrey, small yell., in very nice condition; Nos. 1 and 3 absent. A.O.V. DARK CAN. (10): 1, Maxwell, very clearly marked yell. Siskin-Can., beautiful bright, level colour all over, tight as wax in condition; 2, Lamb, capital lengthy Twite-Can., very smart in condition, very glossy and sound feather; 3, Marshall, yell. Green-Can., nice colour, medium size, good shape and condition; 4, Wyse, big yell. Siskin-Can., make a good one when properly handled; vhc, Howe, yell. Green-Can., rich colour and good feather; hc, Macdougall; c, Palmer. BULLFINCH, HYBRID (6): 1, 2, Askham, Mrs., both Can.-Bull, cross, cock and hen, hen first in best condition, large bird, grand, champion shape; 3, vhc, Lamb, Linnet-Bullfinch and Green-Bull, former in best feather and condition; Nos. 2 and 5, Ward, both arrived too late for judging, champion good Linnet-Bull and Redpoll-Bull; a pity to leave them so late in despatching to the show. A.O.V. (11): 1, Cooper, about the most perfect specimen of Chaffinch-Bramblefinch one has seen, not quite the largest but grand markings, colours and feather, and neat in shape, feathered like a Java; 2, Taylor, very bold shaped Siskin-Greenfinch, just as perfect in feather and markings as one could wish for, nice size, symmetrical form; 3, vhc, Lamb, Redpoll-Greenfinch, and Redpoll-Goldfinch, former in splendid condition, latter had been bathing and was a bit out of condition; 4, Tonks, very choice Goldfinch-Greenfinch, fine flush, big, and clean cut, good size and well up in colour, and solid condition of feather; vhc, Gunnell, Redpoll Greenfinch, hc, Cutting, same cross; hc, White, Siskin-Greenfinch; c, Maxwell; wrong class No. 7, good Common Sparrow, been well kept and used to cage. PAIRS (MATCHED FOR HYBRID BREEDING) (9): 1, 4, Frostick, Greenfinch Bullfinch and Goldfinch Bullfinch respectively, both pairs look all over very likely ones to produce the required results; 2, Rouse, very affable pair, Goldfinch cock and Bullfinch hen, both fine birds, in best of feather; 3, Gunnell, capital Linnet and a yell. hen Canary, both very fine birds, right sort to select; vhc, Howe, Greenfinch cock and Hawfinch hen; hc, Wyse, Greenfinch cock and Bullfinch hen; c, Cutting. BRIT. GOLDFINCH (26): a rare good lot; 1, Hurst, the Pride of Liverpool, looking at his best now, and won after a very hard fight with 2, Williams and Morgan, very clean cut, big blaze, grand colour, good moons and bars, tight feather above; 3, Prior, rare body shape, very silky feather and condition and steady; 4, hc, Maxwell, deep colour blaze, nice even moonings and bars good, rich tan; c, Wyse. BULLFINCH (17): 1, 3, Beaty, really fine pair, full of peach like bloom, first excelling in size, width, general all-round fineness and finish; 2, Vincent, grand breast, good deep, well filled all round, sound in feather and condition, first slightly more massive and dense through; 4, White, lovely shape all over it; vhc, Howe, little behind former, all the above are a fairly level lot; hc, Mays; c, Carter. LINNET (19): 1, Vale, about the largest and best shaped one we have seen this season, full of markings, like satin in feather and condition; 2, c, Prior, grandly marked, like wax in feather, bit active on the perches; 3, Howe, beautifully coned from head to tail, nice size and good markings; 4, Carter; nice head, well shaped body, good back spangle, well up in size, steady; vhc, Maxwell, Beaty; he, Tavner, Coffey. SISKIN, ETC. (7): 1, Hurst, the redoubtable Redpoll "Mauretania," a real wonder of all-round merit; 2, Rouse, enormous Twite, chest like a "wagon horse," only wants handling to make a champion; 3, Maxwell, splendid Siskin in every respect, grand cap, size, colour, markings and finish; 4, Howe, lovely lesser Redpoll, in perfect feather; vhc, Prior, good Twite; hc, Francis, Mays; c, Goodall. GREENFINCH: a bot lot; 1, Hurst, great size, wonderfully made in head, neck, shoulder and chest, grand deep level colour, sheen and polish of the very best and wins well; 2, Howe, well known winner, great bird in size and most properties; 3, Goodall, bold, fine big bird, all in him is grand; 4, hc, Coffey, very level and rich colour, both just beaten to-day in breast and condition a little, amongst a very hot lot; hc, Davis, grand shape and colour, good quality; c, Wickham, Curry. CHAFFINCH (20): 1, Maxwell, regular full chest, big head and shoulders, large bird in every way, lovely shade of colour and clear, well defined markings; 2, vhc, Howe, pair of fine birds, very hot fed, often before described; 3, Feltham, good colour and markings, fine feather; 4, Hurst, really fine bird, but not in the best of condition; hc, McVay, Curry; c, Henderson, Cocks, Prior, all worthy a card. BRAMBLE (11): 1, Howe, wins on his all-round perfect condition to-day, looking fine; 2, Prior, lovely spangle; 3, Chick, very large, beautifully spangled bird, rare colour and shape, well polished, couple of tail feathers growing surely kept him from the top, a fine bird; 4, Hathaway, grand size; vhc, Watson Lyle; hc, Cocks; c, Henderson. HAWFINCH (13): 1, Chick, "Midland Chief," Notts., etc., winner, late (Hakes), grand, all-round bird, with all the standard points of champion all over him; 2, Maxwell, rare good colour, nice breast, good head, even brown tone above, capital wings and tail; 3, Francis, little behind former, breast, good size and steady; 4, Wickham, rare size, good feather; vhc, Mays, nice bloom and condition; hc, Hurst; c, Frostick; Prior, a good all-round lot as anyone might wish to see, no better lot been shown together. YELLOWHAMMER (11): 1, Hurst, almost perfectly marked, capital size, level bright, deep colour, polished like glass; 2, Hunt, splendid head markings, grand colour and condition; 3, c, Prior, nicely refined in head markings as leaders, very good feather and finish in body condition; 4, Gunnell, fine body and condition really good; vhc, Curry; hc, Mays, the definition of head markings is where most of these birds fail, look well at first and second for good head markings. A.O.S. FINCH, ETC. (6): 1, Mays, really fine Corn Bunting, wins well; 2, Carter, almost perfect Cretolan Bunting, very steady; 3, Francis, very neat Cirl Bunting; 4, hc, Wynn, Corn Bunting and smaller Cirl Bunting, both in tight condition; vhc, Maxwell. HEN. BRIT. SEED., ETC. (16): very good class; 1, Morris Bros., very smart hen Hawfinch, in the very best of condition; 2, 4, Howe, grand Bully hen and a Cirl Bunting hen in fine feather, well conditioned; 3, MacDougall, very good feathered hen Yellowhammer, steady; vhc, Curry, fine hen Linnet; hc, Francis, hen Twite; c, Frostick, good hen Bully; c, Shiers, all were in really good feather and condition. MEMBERS: HYBRID: 1, Maxwell, a very neat Goldfinch-Bullfinch, good colours, shape and condition; 2, Pearse, Mrs., yell. var., Gold-Can., nice colour and shape; 3, Harper, buff var., Gold-Canary; No 3 absent; No 5 entered as a Chaffinch-Canary, appears to be a Pied Chaffinch. GOLDFINCH (10): 1, Howe, very nice blaze, good colours right through, well defined; 2, Maxwell, almost equal in all points; 3, Lucas, also well up in merit to others; vhc, Marshall; hc, Cooper; c, Mrs. Pearse.

The Insectivorous British.

The Insectivorous section provided some interesting exhibits, but a few of the classes contained only four and five birds, unfortunatey. The Continental class was also very interesting and no doubt is a class much needed and I fancy that a few of the other Softbills staged, if they could speak, would tell us that they would be quite happy and contented in this class. The class for any other species Insectivorous bird, resident or migratory, although only numbering five exhibits, contained three uncommon and rare cage birds in the Nutcracker, Hoopoe and Red Shank. If we get many of the latter kind exhibited, they would form an interesting class, and I think personally that a class for them, to themselves, would be both necessary and useful, as it might contain many out of the way birds, such as the Woodcock, Jack Snipe, Common Snipe, Summer Snipe, Dottrel, Golden and Grey Plover, Curlew and a host of others. In the Albino and rare feathered class, we had some nice exhibits, amongst them an unusual cage bird, viz. Ring Dove; a curious freak was the 3rd prize Goldfinch, described as a Cinnamon, but really a Silver Grey. This bird excelled in buttons on wing, so much so that many an exhibitor would no doubt have been pleased to have such on an otherwise good British Goldfinch.

SONG THRUSH, ETC. (13): 1, Pearce, Thrush, large, shapely bird, well spotted right down to undertail coverts, fine colour; 2, c, R. J. Howe, former a Blackbird, nice glossy, dense black throughout, fine shape, and good deep orange bill, and eye cere; 3, vhc, Francis, former a Starling, very sleek, glossy, and well spangled, nice and tight in feather; 4, Mays, Thrush, a fine shapely bird, profusely spotted; hc, Carter. LARK OR PIPIT (8): 1, Maxwell, Tree Pipit, lovely quality and condition, grand shape and colour, very nice pencilling on breast; 2, Cooper, Shorelark, very steady, good colour for winter plumage; 3, Mays, Skylark, nice length and size, well pencilled on breast, a trifle restless at time of judging; 4, White, another fine Tree Pipit; vhc, McVay; hc, Cook; c, Hathaway; Chough, etc., cancelled. BLACKCAP OR NIGHTINGALE (11): 1, R. J. Howe, Nightingale, not quite the largest, but grand shape and condition, rich, warm, nutty brown in colour, good bold eye; 2, Francis, another Gale, larger, but not quite the colour of winner, otherwise a grand specimen; 3, hc, Frostick, former a Blackcap, a large one, good body colour, well developed, dense black cap, reaching well back over head; 4, Maxwell; vhc, Hathaway; c, Withers Bros.; absent, Baker and Chick. A.O.S. RESIDENT INSECTIV., SMALL (12): a good class; 1, 2, Maxwell, leader Treecreeper, a gem, good length of beak and head, nicely curved, good clear white breast, colour of silky texture, nicely mottled on back, wins, the latter, a smart Goldcrest, feather like wax, showing rich coloured crest well; 3, Morris Bros., good tight feathered, house-moulted, Bearded Tit, lovely colour and steady; 4, Wither Bros., Grey Wagtail, longest and most shapely in the class, but could do with clearer colour on breast, very steady; vhc, Mays, another good Goldcrest, failed to show crest at time of judging; hc, Cook; c, R. J. Howe. A.O.S. MIGRATORY, SMALL (13): This class was a hot one, containing in addition to the winners, many birds worth a prize; 1, R. J. Howe, Blue-headed Wagtail, a gem for condition and colour, excels in head markings, being very pure and distinct in the white stripes over eyes and nice and blue on crown of head, showing a good percentage of the bright spring plumage seen in the breeding season, one small toe nail missing, but bird not disfigured; 2, 3, Maxwell, leader Yellow Wagtail, perfect shape, size and condition, rich in colour, steady as a rock, latter Black Redstart, another rare exhibit, nice colour, and shape, just lacks the essential white marks on flights, or could have been higher; 4, c, Wither Bros., another Black Redstart, younger bird; vhc, Dewhurst; hc, Vincent. LARGE (5): 1, 2, R. J. Howe, leader a Roopoe, rare bird, in good feather showing good length of head gear, not the longest of bills to be seen in this species, but a good all-round specimen, latter Red Shank in fine condition and uncommon as a cage bird; 3, W. Cook, Nutcracker, another rare species, in fine condition, was busy eating putty from a join in back of cage, trust no ill-effects; 4, Francis, great spotted Woodpecker, a nice bird hard lines to have to compete against the rarer ones. ALBINO (6): 1, Hakes, Albino Blackbird, large, shapely bird, fine colour, lovely condition; 2, E. J. Lamb, cinnamon Redpoll, a smart shapely little Redpoll of a true cinnamon shade; 3, Dr. Rowntree, Goldfinch, another freak, a Silver Grey, an interesting exhibit; 4, Vincent, Albino Ring Dove, unusual exhibit in cage bird classes, very clear in feather; vhc, Prior; hc, Winter. A.S. CONTINENTAL (8): 1, 3, Maxwell, winner a beautiful Wallcreeper, lovely exhibit, perfect feather and condition, latter a good Blue-throated Warbler, very steady, tight in feather, with good display of breast markings; 2, 4, Cook, great Reed Warbler, another uncommon species seldom seen on the bench, in good condition, but just a shade rough on throat; 4, Alpine, Chough in good trim; vhc Kilner; hc, Drake; c, Mrs. Partridge.

The Foreign Bird Section.

These were a numerous and classy lot, quite a galaxy of beauty being found among the 127 entrants, making the judge's task both a difficult and thankless one. Owing to the hall being occupied till quite a late hour on the preceding night, the exhibits had no time to settle down before judging began; had judging taken place a few hours later, several exhibits which were passed would certainly have received cards.

BUDGERIGARS, ETC. (5): 1, Mrs. K. L. Miller, Blue-winged Lovebirds; 2, Mrs. C. Cooper, Yellow Budgerigars, very tight and of good colour; 3, 4, F. Howe, nice pair of Yellow Budgerigars. The most noteworthy exhibit in this class, a nice pair of rare Guiana, Lovebirds, was unfortunately robbed of its award (first), by an unfortunate clerical error on the judge's part. The award was given to the Guiana Lovebirds, but was unfortunately placed opposite No. 1 instead of No. 2 on his slip. When the error was discovered—too late for correction—the owner of No. 1 was quite willing to forego the prize, but the L.C.B.A. officials, ultimately and rightly, upheld the rule "that judge's slips must not be altered after being handed in." PARRAKEETS (16): A fine, varied, and interesting array, the gorgeous plumage of many of the exhibits being quite a feature of the section. 1, W. Cook, rare Black-crowned Lory, will be a gorgeous bird indeed when it has passed through another moult; 2, H. M. Cooper, the well-known pair of Red-vented Blue Bonnets, in fine condition, a rather doubtful pair, but given the benefit of the doubt; 3, C. Cooper, Barnard Parrakeets, an attractive pair; 4, G. W. Leavers, nice Senegal Parrot; ex. 4, K. L. Miller, grand pair many-coloured Parrakeets; vhc, Conway-Gordon, good Ceram or Chattering Lory; hc, Frostick, Alexandrine Parrakeet, good colour, very sleek and tight; c, T. Miller, K. L. Miller, Cooper, Dewhurst, Brammer; also exhibited very fine Chattering Lory, a well-known winner, not yet through the moult; its owner should have its claw cut; also Crimson Lorics, "puffy" when judged. PARROTS (8): 1, Mrs. Miller, rare and unique Dusky (or Violet) Parrot, in very finest condition, a most interesting and chastely coloured exhibit; 2, J. Tyson, very nice Grey, quite an accomplished linguist; 3, C. Cooper, very good Blue and Yellow Macaw; 4, W. Salisbury, nice Grey, also a good talker; c, Mrs. Summer; also exhibited Moluccan Cockatoo, attracting much attention by its varied and fluent utterances. WAXBILLS, ETC. (12): 1, F. Howe, St. Helena Waxbills, quite the finest we remember to have seen; 2, Warren-Vernon, Zebra Waxbills, good colour, very tight; 3, Meadows, good pair Green Avadavats; 4, Maxwell, very good Rhodesian Ribbon Finches, larger than the common species; vhc, Mrs. Cooper; hc, Townsend, Hodgson; c, Howe, Hodgson, and Partridge. MANNIKINS, ETC. (12): 1, F. Howe, Violet-eared Waxbills, very rich in colour, sleek and tight, quite one of the best we have seen; 2, 3, K. L. Miller, Sydney Waxbill, a beautiful, softly coloured bird and Melba Finch, a nice bird, but not quite so bright as some we have seen; 4, S. M. Townsend, good pair of the prettily-marked Rufous-backed Mannikin; vhc, M. B. Partridge, White Java Sparrows, very pure and tight; hc, K. L. Miller; c, Maxwell, Shiers and Cooper. GRASSFINCHES, ETC. (12): 1, K. L. Miller, scaly-crowned Weaver bird, an uncommon exhibit (which however bids fair to become rather common), in perfect condition, a pretty, quietly clad bird, in a pleasing array of browns, the feathers of the fore crown being black-edged with brown, standing out very distinctly, used from which the bird takes its name "Scaly-crowned"; 2, 3, Warren-Vernon, nice pairs of Diamond Doves and Queen Whydahs, in the order named; 4, vhc, Maxwell, Queen Whydah, just beginning to show signs of getting out of colour; hc, K. L. Miller; c, S. M. Townsend, F. Howe, and Hodgson. GROSBEAKS, ETC. (5): a most interesting class, containing several rare and fine Java exhibits, of which I believe the Lavender-headed Finch and Black faced form to be new to the show bench this season; 1, Maxwell, Lavender-headed Finch, very light in feather and of good colour. This diminutive Finch is a handsome little fellow; 2, Mrs. Galloway, Black faced form, a lovely bird, in very finest condition, its plumage being a pretty arrangement of Canary yellow, green, and black; 3, Mrs. Cooper, Black headed Sakin, an uncommon exhibit; 4, S. M. Townsend, nice Quail Finch, vhc, Maxwell, Sepoy Finch, an uncommon exhibit, the natural colour of the cock, is a fiery grenadine red, but in captivity they moult into orange yellow; hc, E. W. Harper, K. L. Miller, S. M. Townsend; c, W. Cook, nice nonpariel Bunting. TANAGERS (16): The class was worth a long journey to see, for gorgeous and irridescent plumage the Tanagers are almost unsurpassed. The Superbs alone (quite apart from the rarer species), were a feast of beauty, Mr. Dewhurst's specimen being very rich in colour (colour-fed). The Festive Tanager, a lovely bird of rich, grass green, var. with black on the upper surface, top of head, rich, blue and sides of face, golden-chestnut; a first appearance on the show bench: 1, 2, 4, Maxwell, Festive, Black-headed, and Maroon Tanagers, in the order named, a grand team; 3, equal 4, Townsend, with superb specimens of Magpie and White capped Tanagers; vhc, Miller and Millsum; hc, Warren-Vernon and Townsend; c, Dewhurst and Shepherd, each with very fine specimens of Superb and Scarlet Tanagers. Too great praise cannot be bestowed on every exhibit in the class. SUGAR BIRDS, ETC. (6): A small class, but of rare beauty, two of them, the Indian Sun Bird and Black-faced Sugar Bird, being decidedly rare: 1, Maxwell, Indian Sun Bird, a little smallish bird of great beauty, the whitish undersurface, lighting up the irridescent plumage of the upper surface, a unique and beautiful exhibit; 2, Townsend, Black-faced Sugar Bird, an equally beautiful and rare exhibit, sleek and tight in plumage, one of the largest of the Sugar birds, it certainly is not the least beautiful of this exquisite family; 3, T. Miller, very fine Gold-fronted Green Bulbul; 4, vhc, Townsend, good pair of quaint Japanese Lostnops, and a Green Bulbul. A.O. SPECIES (12): The feature of this class was of course the King Bird of Paradise (not the specimen which has been winning in the provinces), an exhibit of rare beauty, in very fine condition and well shown. Its glowing plumage cannot be described, neither could same be appreciated in the limits of an exhibition cage; 1, C. T. Maxwell, King Bird of Paradise, a grand exhibit, without a flaw; 2, De Ven, immature Bower Bird; very rare and attractive; 3, Millsum, Black throated Chinese Laughing Thrush, an uncommon exhibit, in very fine condition; a bold, handsome fellow; 4, Warren-Vernon, Bronze-headed Trogon, a beautiful exhibit, very tight and silken; vhc, Townsend, Warren-Vernon and Bromwich; hc, Miss Shepherd; c, Miss Shepherd and Withers Bros. HYBRID: Cancelled, only one entry.

A Quartette of Successful Border Shows.

CARLISLE.

Carlisle and Dis. C.B.S. held their 32nd exhibition and competition, in the Queen's Hall, Victoria Viaduct, on December 6th and 7th. The show proved one of the most successful ever held under the auspices of this society, entries coming up well, numbering about 400, and the quality throughout being of the highest standard. In the two classes provided for Scotch Fancies, not a bad one was exhibited, birds possessing rare length and substance, and full nerve and action being the order of the day; especially was this the case in the gems exhibited by Messrs. R. and J. Thompson and W. Sloan. The Border Fancy classes (under the patronage of the B.F.C.C. and E. and W.B.F.C.C. were very well filled, and contained some of the choicest specimens we have ever seen. Most of the crack exhibitors staged teams which, for type, quality and carriage, were really marvellous. The medal for best Border was won by Mr. J. Calderwood, with his clear yellow hen, a regular topper, whilst the novice medal was won by Mr. J. Murray, jun., with his foul buff, a little gem, which would do credit to any champion exhibitor. Mr. Thomas very cleverly won in both the even marked classes, with a couple of birds hard to find fault with; other grand specimens were staged by Messrs. Wilson, Pennington, Dixon and Simpson, and Nixon. Norwich classes were fairly well filled, but what they lacked in numbers they made up for in quality, the majority of the exhibits being all that could be desired, possessing, as they did, all the essential points of a true Norwich, viz., good, bold, thick-set birds, feathered to perfection, ablaze with colour and possessing plenty of size. Many noted winners were amongst them, including Mr. E. Godley's clear yellow cock, clear buff cock, buff hen and unlighted yellow. Mr. A. Younghusband's marked yellow and buff and natural colour buff, and Mr. J. Atkinson's yellow hen. Crest classes contained several tip-top exhibits, the most notable being Mr. Godley's wing marked dark Crest, and his champion var. Crest-bred both well-known winners. Mr. Geo. Goulden's 2nd prize Crest-bred is also an exceptionally good one, being a grand bodied bird, with an excellent skull, carrying heaps of feather and fit to win in any ordinary competition. The yellow cock exhibited by Mr. Mountain, Mr. G. Tweedie's buff cock, and Mr. A. Nelson's natural colour buff in the Yorkshire classes were three very typical specimens. The quality all through this section though, was very good indeed. Mules, Hollands and British made a grand show, as only could be expected at a fixture held under the patronage of the N.B.B. and M.C. and N.B.B.M. and F.B.C. The classes contained birds quite capable of holding their own in any company. The special for best British was captured by Messrs. Laidlow and Robson, with their champion Goldfinch, an extra fine specimen, and a marvel for colour and size. Mention must also be made of the really smart exhibits of Messrs. Jackson and Bond, Davidson and Boyd, S. J. Nicholas, and W. M. Hill. The selling classes contained some very cheap birds, many of which were no doubt claimed. We were sorry to see the Foreign classes were cancelled, but no doubt it was owing to the clashing of the show with several others. The Queen's Hall is an ideal room for the purpose, being very spacious and well-lighted. All the exhibits were staged so that they could be viewed with ease, and everything possible was done to ensure the comfort of the exhibits. The Secretary, Mr. W. Thomas, is the right man in the right place, and carried out his numerous duties in a very courteous and masterly manner, and we feel it our duty to congratulate him on the general success. The assistant secretary, Mr. W. H. Wright, is a capable helper, and the committee, Messrs. Cranston (chairman), McGuffie (vice-chairman), Atkinson, Dawson, Dockerty, Gill, Harris, Johnstone, Jones, Lawson, J. Nixon, J. H. Nixon, Sloan, and Wilmot, also deserve high credit for the most excellent and efficient way in which everything was carried out, and especially on the way in which the birds were despatched home at 5 o'clock on the Saturday night. The judges were Messrs. J. Thompson (Wigton), Scotch Fancies and Borders, and Parker Robinson, the remainder. Both were very painstaking, and left little, if any, cause for complaint.

COCKERMOUTH (Cumberland).

Cockermouth and Dist. F.S. held their third annual exhibition in the Tweed Mill on December 6th and 7th. Considering that Carlisle Show was on the same day, the entries came up well from the exhibition point of view. It was a great success. The efforts of the Committee and officials were well rewarded in the cage bird section this year, entries in this section were nearly trebled. The Norwich section was very fair, but Yorkshires were a splendid show, some well-known winners having to take a back seat. Border Fancies were a little show in themselves. British birds were not strong in numbers, but made up for this in quality of exhibits. The pick of the district were here, including well-known winning Goldfinches, Linnets, Mules, etc. The certificate of merit for the best bird in Canaries and mules was won by a yell. marked Goldfinch mule; the certificate of merit for best British was won by that well known Yellowhammer of Jas. Stewart's. Messrs. Snoddon and Thompson's Red-sided Eclectus won CAGE BIRDS 1st prize, J Sillwood's Scotch Fancy won 2nd, Hopper Bros. buff Border best 3rd bird. The arrangements and staging of the exhibits were carried out in an altogether admirable manner and won the commendation of both exhibitors and visitors. Mr. James Graham made an efficient and courteous secretary, backed up by a good working committee, of which Mr. Geo. Oglethorpe is chairman. While making notes we noticed Messrs. J. Ellwood, Duncan and several others seeding and watering all cage birds, making sure of the comfort of all birds entrusted to their care. One incident is worth recording: An exhibitor sent his water tin with 4 holes punched in; one of the holes about a quarter of an inch from the bottom; water could scarcely remain in tin. One of the committee had to plug one hole up to allow the bird to get water. This goes to show how carefully every detail was watched. The judges, Mr. J. S. Wilson, Workington, Cumarles; Mr. Jno. Wilson, Workington, Mules, British and Foreign Birds, carried out their duties in such a manner that left no room for grumbling. NOR. (six classes), five cancelled. KILMARNOCK.

Show held December 7th in the Art Gallery Halls, London road, and was a success beyond the most sanguine expectations. The entries numbered 630, and the quality was of the very best, birds of the finest quality taking part in the contest, so that the competition was extra keen. A pleasing feature with Kilmarnock is that the well-to-do classes and merchants take a practical interest in the exhibition, contributing to the funds (the donations amounted to close on £11), and by their personal attendance they encouraged the management. A good percentage of the visitors were ladies, and they seemed to be quite interested. The Scotch Fancy opened the show, and the quality was exceptional. Mr. McClure, whose name brings honour to him wherever he goes, had no less than five first prizes, and there was general satisfaction to find Mr. Findlay again in the tickets; he won quite a number, and the youngest convert to the Scotch Fancy captured a second prize. Messrs. Black and Smith, the judges, were congratulated on the very efficient judgment they bestowed upon their work, which was a pleasure, having capital material to operate upon. Mr. Young, whose care and precision are widely known, placed the Crests in order of merit, and gave satisfaction. The Crests and Crestbreds were a show in themselves; wealth of quality entered the competition, and as an indication of the strength of this section, the cup and gold medal for the best bird in the hall was won by a young Crest cock, the property of Mr. John Noble. The runner-up was Mr. McClure's cup winner, the Scotch Fancy foul buff cock. The medal for the best young Crestbred was awarded to Mr. Wm. Cairns. Seldom has a finer collection of Plainheads been brought together. The judge, Mr. Ferguson, had his task heightened with the quality put before him; he spared no pains, and his services were appreciated by the competitors. The medal for the Scotch Plainhead was secured by Mr. A. Sloan. Nowadays, a show without the Border Fancy Canary is a desert. Though mentioned last in the Canary section, they were by no means least. Their lively, bright forms add lustre to the gathering. Mr. McKenzie had a superior lot to handle; quality pressed so hard upon quality that judging must have been difficult, but Mr. McKenzie got through it with credit. The hall is nicely lighted, and it is admirably adapted—compact and free from draught. The weather, too, was cold, but the temperature had a cosy, comfortable feeling. The arrangements were admirable. The secretary, Mr. W. Watson, upon whom so much depended, was fully master of the situation; he had a fine grasp of the entire business. Willing and courteous, the society have in him the right man at the helm. The president, Mr. Adamson, guided the affairs with dignity and grace. The vice-presidents, Messrs. Hutchison and Calderwood, and the willing committeemen, vied with each other in rendering service. We have never come across a show where so much enthusiasm was displayed. An unusual number of shows was held to-day, so that it is a credit to Kilmarnock to have such a prosperous event. A very smart piece of work for a one-day show was the issue of a neat and complete slip giving the awards.

The Mules, British and Foreign.

Close upon 200 exhibits turned up in this section, and were judged by Mr. D. J. Gardner (Bathgate), Mr. J. B. King (Kilmarnock), who was also down to judge, being unable to attend. The awards seemed to give general satisfaction. Many noted winners were staged, including the disputed Canary-Bullie belonging to Mr. Ovenstone (Grangemouth), when it was again awarded 1st and spl. for the third time in succession by this judge. Many comments were made on this exhibit, but no one doubted its parentage. The outstanding classes were Hybrids, For. Goldies, Greenfinches, and large Brit., many winners having to go cardless. Two of the prizes offered by CAGE BIRDS were won by light Mules, viz., 1st prize, 10/-, Charles Douglas, and 3rd prize, Wm. C. Cunningham, over a dozen entries being made in this section alone. LIGHT MULE (7): 1, 6, Douglas, buff Goldie-Canary, ticked on eyes, grand condition, wins CAGE BIRDS 1st prize; 6th, var. Goldie; 2, 3, Cunningham, 2nd evenly mkd. Goldie in rare condition, presses; 3rd evenly mkd. yell., best of colour, wins CAGE BIRDS 3rd prize; 4, Menzies, monster Greenie-Canary, var., nice exhibit; 5, Leigh; 7, Porteous. HYBRID (9): 1, Sharp, Greenie-Bullie, in rare fettle, frequent winner often described; 2, 3, 4, Arrighi, 2nd Goldie-Bullie, in pink of condition, deep blaze, well marked, we liked; 3, Linnet-Bullie, good can, nice breast colour, also put down in fine trim; 4, Greenie-Bullie, quite a good exhibit; 5, spl., Cunningham; 6, Douglas; 7, McCaw. DARK MULE (15): 1, spl., Ovenstone, Canary-Bullie, which was recently passed as not being of that cross, looking well as ever, shows parentage clearly, popular win; 2, Marlin, large yell. Goldie-Canary, grand blaze, full of colour, good second; 3, McQuiston, another good one, 4, Watson, Greenie-Canary, plenty of size, nice condition and colour; 5, Leigh; 6, 7, Cunningham; 7th yell. KELSO.

This old-established Society held their annual show on Dec. 4th, and the cage bird section was well up to former years, some grand birds being on view. This being the hot-bed of Borders and Norwich entries were good on an average. Norwich opened the programme and contained some really high-class specimens. All the winners were outstanding specimens, the unflighted classes being really good. The pick of the section, many thought, was Mr. Cameron's ticked buff cock, a beauty, short and chubby and feathered like wax. Borders followed, and here the competition was exceedingly strong, gems of the first water being in each class; many of the well-known Border firms being represented. The pick of this section was held to be the yellow hen, a beauty for type and quality, but as her owner Mr. Bennett has now secured his allotment of B.F.C. Medals for the season, another winner had to be found, and turned up in the ticked buff hen, a grand one, wins on her type, the property of Mr. Gilchrist, the runner up being the yellow cock exhibited by Mr. Smart. The judge was tasked to his uttermost in picking the winners, and probably such a collection of gems, will be hard to find again this season. British on the whole were good. The best Hardbill proved to be Mr. Laidlaw's Bullfinch, a gem for quality, and the Softbill was Mr. Laidlaw's Pipit, a well-known winner. Foreigners were a nice lot, the King Parrot of Mr. Moreland's being greatly admired, and winning special for best in section. Mr. T. C. Bennett was at the helm for another year, and this able secretary had everything forward in his usual faultless style. He was ably assisted by an enthusiastic committee, who worked hard and to excellent purpose to make the show a success. Mr. J. W. Bruce judged, and his awards on the whole were well received.

ABERDEEN.

The Aberdeen O.S. held their 52nd annual show (open to the United Kingdom), and under the Scottish N.P.C. patronage, which brought together some of the finest Norwich seen in Aberdeen for many years back. The ball-room music hall is the best hall in the City for a cage bird show, being nice and central, and high in the roof, but as it is only lighted from one side, we think it would be an improvement if the exhibits were staged around the room, instead of up and down the centre. Entries came up well, over 400 facing the judges. In the Norwich section, the most notable specimens that met our eye, were the young yellow cock, belonging to Mr. Geo. Davidson, a bird of rare colour and typical, also the Buff cock belonging to the same owner, the Dundee Cup winner, and Mr. Howie's very sweet yell hen of the right size and type. These two fanciers having previously won a N.P.C. Medal were debarred, and Mr. A. G. Forrest was the successful member, taking the medal with a grand yell. var. hen. The Members' Cup for best unflighted Norwich was gained by Mr. J. Hector; Ramsden's medal by Mr. Wm. Clubb, and Sandiford's Medal by Mr. Geo. Davidson. The management of the show was all that could be desired, and reflects credit on everybody concerned. In making the show the success it was, Mr. W. B. Mackie, the excellent secretary, was ably assisted by the treasurer, Mr. W. Silver and a hard working committee, comprising Mr. J. Hector (President), Messrs. J. E. Donald and W. Allan (vice-presidents), and Messrs. J. Strachan, J. Lyon, G. Mackie, F. Scott, A. Thomson, W. Rae, A. Rae, J. Holman, J. Wright, J. Sandison, J. D Matthews, J. Irvin, J. Balfour, W. Dunn, and W. Walker. The Norwich classes were judged by that highly esteemed fancier, Mr. A. McFarlane. Before starting, he informed the fanciers around him that type and quality were the points for him, colour would be left open, and we were pleased to see that this was carried out from start to finish, and all seemed pleased with the awards. The other sections were in the hands of those capable and respected fanciers, Mr. John E. Donald, and Mr. Peter Pettigrew, and they were equally successful in pleasing the exhibitors and critics who were present.

Schedules will be sent to all paid up members; unpaid by that date will not be entitled to show. All fanciers' wishing to join will be put forward at a special committee meeting and if elected will be eligible to show.—H. T. LUCAS, hon. sec.

TAMWORTH.

The first annual show of the Tamworth and Dis. C.B.S. was held on November 30th, at College-lane Schools, and was confined to a radius of 14 miles, excluding the Birmingham lunelers. The room was a well lighted one, and free from draughts. Entries were only moderate, but the quality of the exhibits was good. The Rev. J. H. C. Clarke opened the show. The hon. sec., Mr. J. E. Brown, was unable to be present owing to a very unfortunate accident. Mr. Adcock, with the committee—Messrs. Hatton, Archer, Machin, Lawton, Colloby, and Benton—had all arrangements well forward. We think an open show next year would be successful if again run on correct lines. Mr. J. H. Roe judged. NOR. YELL. WIGAN.

The lanchers of cage birds are only few in numbers in connection with the Wigan and Dist. Society, but what they are lacking numerically they make up in thoroughness and experience. A fine lot of helpers—Messrs. Simpson, Crabtree, Bennett, Dyer, Jameson, Rhead, Sharrock, Thornley and Williams—put in an appearance at their annual show on Dec. 6th and 7th, which was held in the Old Court Hall, King Street. The mayor had consented to perform the opening ceremony, but was unable to be present. The deputy mayor took his place, and in a neat short speech spoke of the benefit there was to be derived from such a hobby. Mr. Ridge briefly thanked the deputy-mayor. Greens were a feature of the show, there being no less than 98 entries in the eight classes. Mr. Deacon staged some very typical birds in the Norwich section and Messrs. T. Seed and Clemin.son also stood well up with their very fine and well-known teams. Points specials were won by the following:—Messrs. Burton, Lane, Clayton, Vernon, Hegginbottom and Riley, Carswell, Deacon (4), Cleminson (2), Seed (2), Parkinson Simpson, Dyer, Walsh, Pitchford, Almond, Boardman, Keighley and Whittaker, Clark, and Bullough. Mr. Simpson was the winner of "Hyde's Special." CAGE BIRDS great prize competition was won by Mr. Parkinson, with a clear yell. Nor. hen; 2nd, Pitchford; and 3rd, Herd. For members' points throughout the show, Dyer gained 37, Simpson 31, Rhead 29, Bennett 21, Crabtree 11, Ridge 10, and Sharrock 5. The secretarial reins were in the very competent hands of Mr. Ridge, he having everything in ship-shape order. One of the soft-billed birds, a Wryneck, was in a very poor way, and was being well cared for by the secretary. Mr. J. Trengove, Rishton, judged.

YORKS., CL., ETC. YELL. AND BUFF cancelled, also YELL. HEN. LIVERPOOL B.B.A.

The Liverpool Bird Breeders' Association held their annual members' show on Nov. 29th and 30th, in the Alexandra Hall, Islington, Liverpool. The number of entries was much below the average, only some 253 birds being staged. Though poor in numbers, the exhibits were considered good in quality. Mr. H. W. Battye (Huddersfield) placed the cards on the Yorkshires, and Mr. A. G. Davis (Manchester) on the Nor., Brit., and the rest of the exhibits; their awards gave general satisfaction. YORKS CL. TAVISTOCK.

Tavistock Cage Bird Society held their eleventh annual show on December 4th in the Market Hall. The weather was very bad, and no doubt somewhat interfered with the attendance. The cage bird section was handicapped by reason of the failure to procure a licence from the Cage Bird Union, on account of the fixture clashing with Bristol. The show was, on the whole, a very successful one. The arrangements were excellent, reflecting much credit on the secretary, Mr. A. R. Glanville, who was assisted by a large and very energetic committee. Mr. F. Dowdell placed the cards, and the awards appeared to give satisfaction. YORKS. MUIRKIRK (N.B.).

The annual show and competition of the Muirkirk O.S., was held in the Temperance Hall on Dec. 7th. President, Mr. William Gilchrist; Vice-President, Mr. James, Blackwood; treasurer, Mr. R. Thomson; secretary, Mr. James G. Torbett, with a business committee of twenty members. The hall accommodation was all that could be desired, ample room, splendid light, and free from any sign of draught, and it gave visitors, of whom there was a large turn out, ample facilities for viewing the exhibits, with every comfort. There was an excellent turn out in the cage bird sections—the entries were considerably over last year's total, and the quality all over very good. Bor. Fcy. were a fine collection, some noted winners being staged. The blue ribbon winner was a Yell. Var. ck., winner of Hyde's special, also B.F.C. medal, a bird of well-known merit, was 2 at Glasgow and Ayr, 1st at Kilmaurs and Troon, belonging to Mr. Thomas Findlay. The runner up for medal, etc., was a very fine var. ben belonging to Mr. A. Robertson, a typical bird, and staged in grand condition. The best Scotch ck. was a cl. yell. belonging to Mr. Thomas McKean, and the best second hen was a buff var. belonging to Mr. Wm. Mossie, the best third hen was cl. yell. belonging to Mr. John Dempster. The cage birds were judged by that well-known veteran, Mr. David Holden, Muirkirk, one of the most respected judges in Scotland, and whose awards gave general satisfaction. This is the society's fourth show and competition, and each year proves a marked advance on former years, and tends to show that the efforts of the management are being appreciated. The able secretary and treasurer, Messrs. James G. Torbett and Robert Thomson, ably supported by a hard-working committee, are to be congratulated on their success. One very pleasing feature we think should not pass unnoticed was the presence and assistance so heartily given by the secretary's and treasurer's good ladies, the Mrs. Torbet and Thomson, which was much appreciated by the members.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

DEWSBURY.

The first open show of Canaries in connection with the Dewsbury and Dis. C.B.S. took place on Dec. 7th. The exhibition was under the guidance of the Yorkshire Union Rules, and was favoured with the patronage of the Yorkshire and Cinnamon-marked Canary Clubs. Total number of exhibits was 251, in the 20 classes provided, giving an average of over 12 per class. The Royal Hotel provided a nice-sized room for the staging of the specimens, which was carried out in neat order. The classification for Yorks was excellent, and brought together many well-known winners. The representatives of Messrs. Bailey and Swanger played a most prominent part. Mr. H. W. Walsh had on view his Palace winning tkd. yell. cock, still looking tip-top. Mr. J. Wilcock's Cinnamon ticked yell cock struck one as being one of the first water. In the novice section were several very choice specimens. Grand birds were shown by Messrs. Livesey, Wilson, Drake and Son, Robinson, Frankland and Lodge. Nor. Plainheads made a nice show, 28 birds in two classes. Messrs. J. W. Holmes and F. Hammond answered for most of the spoil, with fine exhibits. Selling classes provided many rare bargains. Hyde's special was captured by Mr. W. Cook, with a very nice Cinnamon mkd. yell. cock, teeming with quality. Sandiford's went to Mr. M. Ainley, his clear yell. Yorks being one of exceeding warmth. Radius specials for 2nd and 3rd best, fell into the hands of Messrs. Cook and W. T. Hall, respectively. The President is Mr. T. Hall, the Vice-President Mr. Mitchell, a couple of very useful officials. The treasurer is Mr. A. Cook, and in better hands the "shekels" of the society could not rest. A committee of management consists of all the members, which number upwards of 40, many of whom are well known practical fanciers, who know the full requirements of an open show, carrying out such duties to a nicety; they deserve great praise. Mr. B. Cook, the worthy secretary, is a hard and enthusiastic worker, and has the society's interests at heart, nothing being too much for him to do. He has our good wishes. Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield), had the placing of the cards, and his awards were very well received. Judging was over in good time, and cards were displayed promptly as each class was adjudicated upon, by Messrs. S. Taylor and N. Reynor, the acting stewards, who proved themselves very capable. We heard that prize money would be paid out at 5 p.m. to all winning exhibitors present at the show, a thing worthy of commendation, and which should not be overlooked by fanciers on future occasions. The secretary informed us, too, that all exhibits would be in the railway officials' hands, for the return journey, by 7.30 p.m., so as to arrive at their destination the same night.

ROTHESAY.

The Buteshire United Fanciers held their seventh annual show on December 4th, in the Public Hall. The hall is one of the most suitable in the country, having plenty of good, bright daylight, and being free from draughts. The cage bird entries totalled 129, this being slightly more than those of last year, and the quality was superior. The exhibits were, in the majority of cases, well staged, there being a few in very poor cages which might have done better had they been better shown. Mr. Wm. Spence judged this section, and his awards in the Canary classes were well received, but some were heard to make a few complaints in the British and Foreign classes. Mr. S. Kennedy won the special for the best bird with a Yellow Scotch Fancy cock, and Mr. Hill won the special for second best with a grand Crested hen. The outstanding birds were two light Mules, shown by Mr. Douglas, of Tarbent, gaining first and second in both the open and confined classes. Mr. J. M'Crone acted as secretary, and very ably did he perform his duties. Mr. J. Clark, who usually "scooped the pool" in the British classes, did not show this year. CONFINED CLASSES.—SCOT. FCY. Gildfinch, nice blaze.

EDMONTON.

Entries came up rather badly in the cage bird section of the Edmonton F.A. Show, at the Town Hall on December 5th. Some very nice Britishers were staged, also an interesting and large class of Foreigners. Mr. Williams acted as steward of the section, and carried out his duties most admirably. Mr. Burgess, the hon. sec., is a most energetic and urbane official, and he, with the rest of the officials, worked hard to bring about success. Mr. C. A. House judged. YORKS. DALZIEL.

The Dalziel O.A. held their annual confined show on Nov. 30th, in the Lesser Town Hall, Motherwell. President, Mr. John Roddie; treasurer, Mr. Wm. Allan; secretary, Mr. Wm. Paterson, in whom the Club have a hard worker, and one who has their interest at heart. The entries numbered just on 300, being nearly double that of last year, and quality was well represented. Mr. Chas. Owen's buff Nor. hen being shown in the pink of condition, he takes Gold Medal and Cup for best Nor. in show. Border Fancies were also well to the fore. Competition in the Mule and Brit. Sections was keen and the first Brit. Goldfinch shown by Mr. W. Arnott was at the head of the list, taking Medal for best British in section. Scotch Fancies turned out strong with some good birds amongst them, notably Mr. J. Roddin's young winning yellow, and Mr. T. Allan's winning buff. Mr. J. Scobbie won the Cup for most points throughout the show. Mr. Jas. Lawrie, Govan, judged Scotch Fancy and Borders, and Mr. Andrew Muir, Glasgow, judged Norwich, Mules and British; both gave general satisfaction.

ILFORD.

The annual show of the Ilford F.A. was held in the Methodist Schoolroom, Ilford Lane, on Dec. 7th, and although the other sections all gave evidence of progress, the cage birds were hardly up to last year. This is to be regretted and we trust the cause may soon be removed and that the Cage Bird section of the Association may keep on equal stride with the other sections. All the arrangements were nicely carried out by the committee and the secretaries, Messrs. Simmonds and Drew, were most obliging. The show was visited by a good number of fanciers, and was, we hope, a financial success. Mr. C. A. House judged.

KING'S LYNN.

The annual show of the King's Lynn and District Fur and Feather Society (£5 Limit) brought an excellent entry of upwards of 200, which were arranged in the Corn Exchange, a capital building for the purpose, well-lighted and free from draughts. Messrs. S. D. Hunt (of Mule and Hybrid fame) and Barrett, are the practical and energetic hon. secretaries, and this fact alone was sufficient guarantee that the cage bird section would be well catered for. Moreover, the committee are all fanciers, and the band of cage bird stewards included the names of Messrs. A. Hall, J. B. Balding, W. H. Catton; H. J. Cole, W. Dickerson, R. Edmonds, T. Hall and T. Hubbard. Mr. Jacob Mackley judged. Norwich Plainheads were good classes, and the quality A1, Crests and Yorkshires were excellent, in point of merit, and the team of Mules and Hybrids sent by Mr. S. D. Hunt were the admiration of all who saw them. British birds were grand in point of merit, and indeed, the whole section excelled in this respect.

NOR. CL. YELL. (8): 1, A. E. Brooks, well-known winner, rare shape and size, lovely quality, quickly claimed at limit price, also winner of Messrs. Mackley Bros.' ROTHERHAM.

Rotherham C.B.S. held its tenth annual exhibition in the Masonic Hall, on Dec. 6th and 7th. The hall is a grand place for a show, very lofty, spacious, with good top light, so that birds could be comfortably staged, and every exhibit seen without handling. Snug inter-rooms provided the committee with nice accommodation for exhibitors' cages on the one hand, and warm and comfortable quarters for their hard working sec. and themselves on the other. The Patron of the Society is Earl Fitzwilliam; President, Dr. Wood, who, on behalf of the committee opened the show; the vice-presidents are Col Stoddart, J.P., A. M. Spencer, Esq., J.P., W. Reckett, Esq., A. Owen, Esq., J. Neal, Esq., Messrs. Harber, E. Lloyd, P. Neal. The working committee are Messrs. Eldgway, T. Twigg, W. Bagnall, W. Ducker, W. Brotherton, G. Tupman, F. Pearson, A. Hunt, G. Oakes, W. Turner, G. Stringer, J. Atter and G. H. Greenfield. Mr. G. Knowles is treasurer, and was ready and anxious to pay any prize-winning exhibitor "spot cash" if he were present. The secretary, Mr. J. C. Hayes, had everything in good order, and was ready and willing to give every assistance in his power to all comers. A goodly number of lady visitors attended, and seemed delighted with the show, more particularly with the British section. That keen lady fancier, Mrs. Moss, junr. (Huddersfield) was present, and showed a thorough knowledge of the points of the Norwich and Yorks. varieties. The quality in the open classes was very good, and in the members' classes some fine birds were put down. Novice classes filled well, showing the wisdom of the committee in providing such classes. The members' Yorks. Cup was won by Mr. G. H. Greenfield, with a sweet, young yellow tick; Mr. G. Stringer was a close runner up, whilst Mr. W. Turner was awarded the Members' Nor. Cup for a massive saddle-marked, unflighted buff; Mr. Ducker being close at his heels. Messrs. J. Boxson and W. Vardy judged to the apparent satisfaction of all. Mr. Bygate lent a very nice case of stuffed specimens, comprising a pair of Turtle Doves, with nest in situ, containing eggs and young.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.

Held Dec. 6th and 7th, in the Christ Church Hall, a very suitable room in every way, much better lighted than the room used last year. The birds were staged at a nice convenient height, and were well cared for by the stewards. Mr. Woodhead had everything in good working order, but this is only what all who know him expect, and Hartlepool are very fortunate in having so capable and hard working a secretary. Entries were only moderate in numbers, but competition in some sections was very keen; especially was this the case in Yorkshires. Messrs. Cuthbertson, Ambler, Broughton, Edmondson, Towers, Hirst, Radley, Hodgson and others being successful. In Norwich, the teams of Messrs. Hill and Stewart, Hirst, Harland, Houghton, Cowling, Dobinson, Wake and Carr, and others accounted for most of the prizes, and included some typical birds. Borders were weak in numbers, but nice in quality, Messrs. Hopper Bros., and Mr. Wilson sending nice teams. Crest and Crestbreds too, were very low, but British and Mules were nice classes, and good birds were staged by Messrs. Marwood, Taylor, Todd and Son, King, Woods, Mogie, Livingstone, Dixon, and Nicholson and Son. Foreign, with only one class, was grand if only for Mr. Porteous' beautiful superb Tanager. This bird won special for best in show and well did it earn it. Members' classes, owing probably to slackness of trade among the exhibiting members, did not fill as well as usual, but some nice ones were put down. This is the first time the Society have held a two days' show, and we hope their expectations as to gate receipts, etc., will be realised, and that the show will turn out the success the committee deserve. Mr. H. W. Battye judged Canaries, Mr. Maddison the British, Foreign and Mules.

LANARK.

Annual show (confined to the upper ward of Lanarkshire), held Dec. 7, and taken on the whole it proved a success. Scotch Fancies headed the list, but the numbers unfortunately were on the small side, though the quality was well up to former years. They were under the jurisdiction of that well known breeder, Mr. Higgins, and he left nothing to be desired. Norwich Crests and Plainheads followed and here the competition was keen, some real high-class specimens being staged, notably the buff Plainhead and the crested cock. British were a grand show and the foreigners a great attraction. Mr. C. McDonald judged these varieties, and his awards were well received. In Borders, competition was particularly keen, birds were plentiful and quality superb, many well-known West country winners being staged. This variety was judged by Mr. J. W. Bruce, and his awards seemed to give every satisfaction. The show was held in a grand hall, free from draught and well lighted, the staging being well and securely fitted up. The Society are fortunate in having an ideal secretary, Mr. Clark, who, through his untiring efforts, has brought the Society to its present flourishing condition. Everything was in A1 order, and he was ably assisted by an enthusiastic committee, who vied one with another to get through the work.

FORRES.

The Forres and Northern Society held their twenty-first annual show on December 7th, in the Mechanics Institute, a hall admirable in every way for a bird show, being large, well lighted and perfectly free from draughts. Unfortunately the Cage Bird section had a severe drop in numbers owing, no doubt, to Aberdeen show being held on the same date. However, the quality of the birds was very good all through, and some notable Northern winners were on view. All the exhibits were nicely staged and well looked after by an enthusiastic committee, which consisted of the following fanciers:—Messrs. C. Ross (chairman), Miller, McLennan, Campbell, Low, Grant, Ross, and several others who worked hard to get everything in order in good time. The exhibits presented a most imposing appearance, being arranged length-wise towards the stage, on which were placed no less than five Palace aviaries, filled to overflowing with all manner of birds. It formed a splendid background for the whole. The show sec., Mr. W. Cumming, although new to the work, carried out his duties to the letter, being most obliging to everyone. The committee are to be envied in possessing a sec. of such abilities. Long may he reign. Amongst the principal exhibitors were:—Messrs. Garden, Campbell, McLean, and Russell, Todd and others. The medals for best bird in hall were won by Messrs. McLean and Russell (second best), W. Paterson (Ramsden's), R. Ross (Hyde's), G. Russel (best Brit.), D. Ross, and A. Campbell. The winners were birds of exceptional merit. Scotch Fancies, it seems, have almost given up the ghost, as far as the north is concerned; anyhow, only one turned up, staged by Mr. C. Grant, who is not going to let his favourites go without a struggle. Mr. Martin, Hamilton, made the awards in all classes to the satisfaction of everyone.

FALMOUTH.

The Falmouth and Dis. C.B.S. held its second annual show in the Polytechnic Hall, on Dec. 6th, under C.B.U. Rules. The building is admirably adapted for the purpose, being well lighted and free from draughts. The secretary, Mr. W. J. Medlin, worked hard for the success of the fixture and deserves considerable praise; he was well backed up by a hard-working and painstaking committee, consisting of Messrs. Barnicoat, Johnson, Cowan and Trerise, with Mr. T. Burton as show manager. Everything was in the pink of condition and order, the entries exceeding last year's total, a very satisfactory result. The quality of the exhibits was far better than that of the previous year. The silver cup for best bird bred by a member, 1907, was won by Mr. W. J. Medlin, with a good yellow Cinn., in good feather and condition, the same exhibitor winning the point special. Mr. F. W. Dowdell (Plymouth) judged, and gave every satisfaction.

DISS (Norfolk.)

Fourth annual open show held on December 3rd in the Corn Hall, one of the best halls in the Eastern Counties for a bird show. Great credit is due to the secretary, Mr. Gooderham, who makes a very able one, and knows his duties well. He was ably assisted by a committee consisting of Messrs. Burrows (chairman), Rice, W. W. Mowle, A. W. Mowle, Cooper, Dixon, Haystead, Morris, and Spurgeon. These are one and all able fanciers, and they worked hard to bring about the success of the show. One of the features of the show was a stand of stuffed specimens shown by one of the committee, Mr. Mowle, which attracted a lot of attention. Mr. Francis Taylor opened the show, and in a few kind remarks wished the committee every success. Mr. Robson judged.

LITTLEHAMPTON.

Littlehampton and District F.A., held their first members' monthly competition show at the Gratwick Hotel, on Dec. 4th. Mr. C. E. Baker (Hon. Sec.) is an excellent worker, ever ready to answer the call of duty. There were some good quality birds put down by the members. Mr. E. Mustchin had things all his own way with the Yorks., his buff hen being a gem. Norwich were good, and Goldfinches a small class, but good quality. Mr. A. Burtenshaw judged.

YORKS. (5): 1, spl, 2, 3, Mustchin, the leader long, slim buff hen, wins; 2nd, another buff, smart, but not quite the length of leader; 3rd, nice Yorkie, bit open front; vhc, Twine; hc, Mustchin. THE YOUNG NATURALIST.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given after next week for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be children under sixteen years of age, and must state from where stories are taken.

Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*A Six-year-old Canary.

I have a variegated yellow Canary given me by my father. The bird has no toes on one leg, only a stump, so that he has flat perches to rest on. He sings all day, and when you go near his cage he droops his wings and comes to you. He likes a bit of fun very much. He is now six years old.—LESLIE LACY (11 years), 54, Middle Street, Deal, Kent.

*Uncle's Young Canaries.

My uncle has a number of Canaries, and last summer one of the hens had three eggs. Soon after they were hatched the cage door was accidently left open and the mother escaped. For a few days the young ones were fed by hand with new-laid eggs, finely chopped up. Then uncle put them with another bird which brought them up splendidly. In the aviary, where some of the birds are kept, there is a nice swing, and it is amusing to see them flying this way and that, on and off the swing.—From CHRISSIE DURRANT (age 12 years), 158, Woolwich Road, East Greenwich.

*A Pair of Satisfactory Siskins.

I have a pair of Siskins which I bought last Christmas for 3s. The hen had not a tail, and has since made two attempts to grow one and has at last succeeded. They were not very tame when I bought them, but now when you let them out you can catch them in your hands, make them eat off your hands, or tongue, or anywhere. They are the most interesting and satisfactory birds I ever bought. They bathe every morning and are not at all ferocious with the Canaries, which I have in the aviary. They live up in the dome of my aviary. The cock Siskin is the prettier one of the two, because of the green on his body; the hen is more speckled.—ALFRED L. WELLS (age 12), 3, Belsize Park, London, N.W.

TO DISTINGUISH THE BIRDS FROM THE FLOWERS.

A Curious Book from the U.S.A.

Professor Robert W. Wood, of John Hopkins University, U.S.A., author of an advanced treatise on the theory of light and various scientific papers, might claim close affinity to Lewis Carroll, the profound mathematician and creator of the inimitable "Alice in Wonderland." Mr. Wood's latest effort, according to the "Publishers' Circular," is a treatise on no less a subject than "How to Tell the Birds from the Flowers," aptly described as a "manual of flornithology for beginners."

Nature students who have hitherto wrestled with the annoying problem of differentiating between such homologous species as the Crow and the crocus, the Parrot and the carrot, the Cow-bird and the cowslip, the Blue Mountain Lory and the blue morning glory, will hail this little volume with shouts of joy. No longer need one worry over the close resemblance of the pecan to the Toucan, for though

"Very few can tell the Toucan
From the pecan—here's a new plan!
To take the Toucan from the tree,
Requires immense agil-i-tee,
While any one can pick with ease
The pecans from the pecan trees;
It's such an easy thing to do,
That e'en the Toucan he can too."

For years no scientist has been able to distinguish, to a reasonable certainty, between the common Tern (Sterna hirundo) and the commoner turnip (Brassica campestris). Mr. Wood graciously illustrates the striking similarity between two typical individuals of either species, supplementing his life-like sketches with the following distinctive description:—

"To tell the turnip from the Tern,
A thing which everyone should learn,
Observe the Tern up in the air,
See how he turns, and now compare
Him with this inert vegetable,
Who thus to turn is quite unable,
For he is rooted to the spot,
While, as we see, the Tern is not;
But the turnip is not doomed to be
Thus bound to earth e-tern-ally,
For "cooked to a turn" may be inferred,
To change the turnip to the bird."

While the author's high standing in the scientific world places him beyond such attacks as have been directed against the writers of some nature books as being unnatural, we venture to criticise his drawings, which, though clever, are not always accurate. We even have the uncomfortable feeling that perhaps he is poking fun at us when he says, in writing of the Cow-bird and cowslip:—

"The Cow-bird picture, I suspect,
Is absolutely incorrect;
We make such errors now and then,—
A sort of cow-slip of the pen."

This little book is published by Paul Elder and Co., of New York and San Francisco.

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

DEWSBURY Show, held on December 7th, under Y.U. rules, did not come up to the standard of the previous shows, in regard to entries, a total of 251 in 20 classes being below the average. The Cinnamon Marks again came up well, and I was pleased to see that the champions of old (Messrs. D. Mallinson and Son) were again on the war path, 1st, 2nd, and 4th with four entries falling to the lot of these veteran exhibitors. The Novice Yorkshires were a surprising failure, only 63 birds putting in an appearance in the six classes provided. This is in great contrast to the 48 birds in one class at Bradford City a fornight ago. Interest in the fixture generally, however, seemed as keen as ever, a nice lot of fanciers being present, and everything passed off very well indeed.

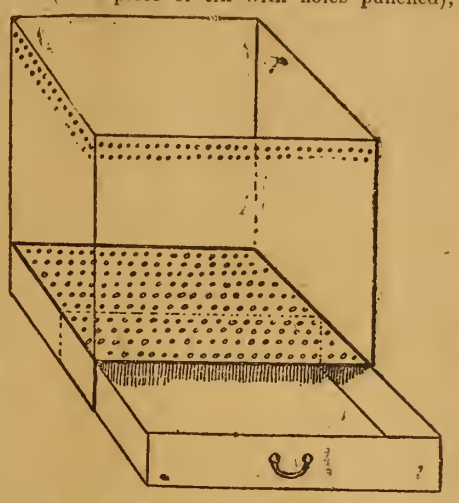
THE competitions for the trophies offered by the various clubs and societies in Yorkshire have now passed the half-way stage, and a summary of results should prove interesting, and spur the exhibitors who are just a little behind to greater efforts to reach the coveted positions. The three competitions of the Y.C.C. extend over ten shows each, the principal of the trophies being the 20 Guinea Challenge Cup, and the half-time score for this up to and including the Westminster Show is as follows: Bailey and Swanger, 69 points; W. H. Shackleton, 67 points; J. Wilcock, 58 points. However, as the secretary of the Y.C.C. has not yet received the catalogue, and has had to trust a little to hearsay, the points given above are not strictly official. Ramsden's Cup and Specials Competition: Wadsworth, 61 points; Wilcock, 41 points; Wilson, 25 points. Sandiford's Cup (for members residing outside Yorkshire): W. Broughton, 73; G. W. Cuthbertson, 71; A. Hirst, 13. Novice Competition: J. Helliwell, 36; H. H. Towers, 12; J. W. Wilson, 4; W. Blakey and F. Cross, 3 each.

THE competitions of the C.M.Y.C.C. extend over 14 shows, and Shipley being the seventh of the series, the points are given up to that show. Open Competition: Odgen Bros., 66; A. Cooper, 58; J. Wilcock, 54; R. Sutcliff and Son, 54; E. B. Denton, 48; A. Hirst, 47; H. Dobson, 47; W. H. Shackleton, 42, and many others are in close attendance. Novice Competition: A. Blackburn, 42; W. Blakey, 40; H. H. Towers, 18; Grayson, 9, and several other members get 2 or 3 points each. As there are five good prizes in the Novice list, they are practically going begging. Now ye C.M.C. novices, rouse up and make the pace a little hotter for these valuable specials.

THE Yorkshire Union trophies are to be competed for at all the eighteen shows held under their rules, and Shipley Show was the ninth of the season. The Shackleton £25 trophy is the principal item, and the following are at the head of the poll: W. H. Shackleton, 158; Bailey and Swanger, 157; J. Wilcock, 134; Odgen Bros., 125; H. W. Walsh, 102; Bray and Charlesworth, 95. For the H. W. Naylor Cup, W. H. Shackleton leads with 126 points: H. W. Walsh, 91; Ogden Bros., 74; J. Wilson, 41; and T. Murgatroyd and Son, 41.

THE competition for the Y.U. Novice medals (nine of which are given for Yorkshire, and three for Norwich, value 1 guinea each) is very keen, and the positions resulting from the first half of the shows can easily be reversed during the remainder of the season. Novice Yorkshires: A. Frankland, 109; H. Lodge, 85; F. Townsend, 69; P. Drake and Son, 63; Shaw Bros., 60; H. Coates, 59; E. Shepherd, 37; A. Livesey, 37; H. Myers, 36; E. Townley, 34; J. Robertshaw, 32; T. Fortnam, 32; T. W Wilson, 31; G. Newell, 30. Many others are close up to above scores. In the Norwich Novice section the following are the principal runners: J. Mottram, 78; J. W. Holmes, 76; A. Lloyd, 65; S. H. Jeffreys, 52; J. H. Greenwood, 42; J. Naylor, 33; W. H. Ball, 32. "STRAIGHT 'UN."

ILLUSTRATED IDEAS



Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

A USEFUL MEALWORM BREEDING TIN.

Sent by P. Allen, 16, Birling Street, Old Town, Eastbourne.

Herewith I send a sketch of a useful mealworm breeding tin, showing interior of same. The idea is to procure the day's supply without disturbing the stock. It consists of a large biscuit tin, having a piece cut out of front to take drawer about two inches deep. Fixed inside, immediately above drawer, on a wood frame, is a square of coarse perforated zinc (or a piece of tin with holes punched), so that mealworms can pass through easily. The tin is filled three parts with alternate layers of bran and sacking, and also perforated with a bradawl two rows round top, and then stocked with mealworms. Until wanting to use the mealworms from same, the drawer is turned upside down to prevent the worms coming through. When ready for use, fill the drawer with meal. When meal womrs are wanted, tip the contents of the drawer into a sieve, just sift over, and there they are, ready for use.—P. ALLEN.

A Useful Mealworm Breeding Tin.

A COMBINED PERCH AND FOOD VESSEL HOLDER.

Sent by F. Knight, 2, Union Road, Wembley, Middlesex.

The following idea I find very useful for fixing the short perches at the front of the cages for the birds to get at the water bottle, etc. It enables one to do away with the long perch across the front of the cage, and securely fastens the short perch, while it is easy of removal for cleansing when required (which is not often necessary when short perches are used). As can be seen by illustration, it can be both easily and quickly made by any amateur, all that is required being a gauge (made as seen at foot of sketch). By the use of a pair of round-nose cutting pliers they are then quickly completed.—FREDERICK KNIGHT.

WILD BIRD LIFE.

December Notes.

Up to the present time we have had very little real winter. Plenty of boisterous winds, and torrents of rain, but the temperature has been quite summer-like. The berries along the hedgerows have hardly been touched, save by the greedy Missel Thrushes; the Starling, Blackbird, and Song Thrush will hardly look at them yet, for insect food is still fairly plentiful, and, for the same reason, wild birds have not yea crowded into our gardens. In consequence of the favourable climatic conditions, we frequently get snatches birdy music. In some cases this is in rivalry of some male intruder, for during the winter months some species exhibit as much jealousy as they do in the spring; they take up a particular beat, and drive away all intruders. The fact of a bird singing lustily is sufficient to prevent a rival from settling.

The tuneful Skylarks are constantly fighting and buffeting each other. This may be the efforts of the old cock birds to secure for themselves the particular piece of ground away from younger rivals, or possibly alien birds are making themselves obnoxious by their presence. The influx of the foreign element is frequently the cause of so much Lark music in the dead of winter. The home bird by song challenges the stranger, and on some days the quarrelling is incessant, the meadows and fields in the district are occasionally alive with Skylarks, whilst at other times scarcely a bird can be seen.

As proof that all Larks are not subject to wandering far from home, a pair can be seen daily in the meadow from my window. These have nested there, and appear to have settled down comfortably for the winter. Occasionally the male bird will twitter a few silvery notes, or play a game of buffet with his spouse. This is quite in play, for they settle down to feed together, and follow each other about as though courting days had just commenced.

Notes from a Lighthouse.

It is astonishing what a number of birds are to be seen from a lighthouse during the period of migration. Lapwings, Curlews, Redshanks, Kittiwakes and Oyster-Catchers have all been seen on several occasions. A Swift once rested in one of the windows, the Blackcap was seen in the company of such strange companions as Dunlins and ring Plovers, and a Heron rested upon the rocks — surely a strange wanderer to be observed, even from a lighthouse. Then comes a cloud of small birds, such as Wheatears, Willow Warblers, Chiff-Chaffs, etc., one or two of which were picked up dead, either killed by shock or from exhaustion. Many birds pass in the night; it seems curious that creatures so fond of sunshine should choose night-time for the long journey to other lands.

London Gulls.

We seldom have the opportunity to study birds in flight at close quarters, but if we station ourselves upon one of the bridges in London we are able to not only see, but almost touch, the gulls, so closely do they fly to anyone feeding them. The other day some boys were giving them pieces of fish, and the birds were at once attracted by it; they flew round and round in front of the feeder, passing by and returning again. Whenever anything was thrown to them there was a rush for the tit-bit, which seldom reached the water below. Occasionally the lads put the fish upon the parapet of the bridge, and waited, until one, more daring than the others, took it. This was generally done by a bird with a small patch on his crown, which hung in the air, just above the lads, and was seldom seen flying round with the others. It is astonishing what a lot of people are interested in the doings of these birds.

Concerning the Crow.

The common Crow is the Carrion Crow of the naturalist, and is distributed throughout the wooded districts and the rocky coasts of England. It is rarer in Ireland and Scotland, its place being taken by its near relative, the Hooded Crow. To show how nearly these two are related it need only be pointed out that they freely interbreed in the districts where the species overlap, and the offspring are more or less fertile. In flight these birds are practically alike, they have the same regular steady wing beat, although when in pursuit of a smaller bird will show surprising agility in turning and twisting. The Carrion Crow is black with greenish sheen, and feathered nostrils, while the Hoodie is black with grey patch. During the winter months I have occasionally seen the latter beating up the tidal rivers of the south, keenly watching the shore for anything left by the tide. They feed upon all kinds of substances, and never miss an opportunity of doing to death a half-starved or wounded bird. Both these Crows are hated by the game-keeper, as they are powerful birds and add a good deal of cunning to their other vices.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

have an idea that they cannot obtain good value from a dealer, but to convince them that this is not so, I ask them to send to me for anything advertised below on approval at my risk, and if it fails to prove entirely satisfactory, all they have to do is to return it, and I at once refund money in full. This is a plain, straightforward offer that is always strictly adhered to by me. Grand large Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, in perfect health and condition, and properly on hard seed, 2/- each, three 5/-. Few grand specimens for show or muling, and guaranteed now in full song, 3/-, 4/-, and 5/- each. MR. ENOCH POWERS.
Has the last consignment of 200 of the Giant Siberian cock Goldfinches, these birds arrived on the 12th December, and are all in grand health and the pink of condition, they are the largest that have ever been imported into this country, price 4/6 each, or £1 8s. per stick of seven. Please note, "These are genuine Siberians." Why pay 6/6 and 7/6 when you can get them straight from the importer at 4/6? If birds do not turn out satisfactory, they can be returned at once. Also received with the above consignment 100 Russian cock Goldfinches, all in finest health and condition, 3/6 each, or £1 1s. a stick of seven. I have also 100 of the finest singing Bohemian Rollers, these birds have various magnificent changes of song, with the true waterbubble note. I offer them at 6/6 each, or buying a stick of seven, 6/- each; also a few Siberian cock Linnets, price 1/6 each, also a few Siberian cock Greenfinches, price 1/6 each, and 10 pet German hen Bullfinches for muling, and warranted to breed, only 4/- each. St. Andreasberg Rollers, 5/6 each or £1 16s. 9d. per stick of seven. Hartz Mountain Roller cocks, in full song, 5/- each, or 4/6 by taking a stick of seven. St. Andreasburg hens, 1/6 each, or 14/- a dozen; Hartz hens, 11/- dozen. Wanted at once for export, the largest possible quantity of Norwich and Yorkshire Canaries, first-class only, best price given. My motto is "Ready cash, no credit."

MATTHEWS, LINNET KING.
Gentlemen, if you want a first-class winner or a winning team give my special birds a trial. I guarantee them the best strain in England, and have been selected by a practical man that understands exactly what you want. I am supplying winners every week from my valuable large stock, and my special birds are called by my customers real deck-sweepers. You can win when you wish with them. If you want to win at your show, send to me at once. Don't keep middle-raters, which is only expense without results, when you can get winners from me at once at working men's prices. Let me fit you up with the finest winning team ever advertised at such prices as I supply all the leading exhibitors in England. They all send to me when they want a winner, as they know my special birds are selected from hundreds of dozens which I sell every week. All my selected birds have been caged months, and are in perfect show condition. I keep every variety of British. Inspection invited to the largest aviaries in England. I keep nothing but the best. Big, fine, healthy Linnets, with nutbrown backs, beautifully pencilled, Norwich type, 1/6 and 2/-. A few giant massive Linnets, beautifully pencilled, ready to win in the keenest competition. 3/- each; also the finest lot of fierce singing Linnets in England, specially trained under my old noted Cheshire Champions, in full song; sacrifice, 2/-; with beautiful singing cage, packet of special seed, instructions, 3/- lot; best value ever offered; worth double; over 500 in stock. Goldfinches. Real Pear-tree Goldfinches, the largest and best you can possibly get, with good deep square scarlet blazes, extra well buttoned and mooned, beautifully tanned, 2/6 and 3/-. Also a few giants, massive in size, with enormous deep square scarlet blaze, extra special birds, sure winners, 4/6 and 5/- each; bargains. These special birds are the best you can possibly get. Bullfinches. Bullfinches with blood-red breast, broad black cap, good wing bars, win anywhere, as they are in perfect show condition, 3/- each. Large massive hen Bullfinches for muling, 1/- each. Large Yellow Giant Greenfinches, as large as Thrushes, ready for showing, steady; cocks, 1/6; hen, 6d. Large mealy Redpolls, good deep bibs, well laced, 1/6 each; splendid full-coloured Chaffinches, 1/-. All birds sent out exactly as described on seven full days' approval. Others are following me, so beware of worthless imitations, as you get the first preference from me.
Gentlemen, could fairer terms be offered? See your back numbers of CAGE BIRDS for results, so send direct to the old-established firm. Plenty in stock; all on seven days' approval; cash or CAGE BIRDS deposit system.—Matthews, Bird Catcher, 44, George-st., Hyde, Cheshire.

BUTLER'S PATENT BIRD TRAPS.
Genuine new invention, round, self-acting, no clumsy woodwork to frighten birds away, nothing visible when set, only baits; neatest, powerfullest trap offered; recommended by Captain Perreaw, of India, in Twitterings, November 30th; free with information on best baits to use, medium 1/3, large 1/9, extra 2/3.—Butler, 58, Salmon-street, Highfields, Sheffield.

PIPING BULLFINCHES.
The finest and most correct tune pipers ever imported; these birds are specially selected for me, and every care has been taken to make them perfect in their tune; they can be heard at any time by intending buyers; broken pipers are never stocked by me.—C. Rochl, 400, Edgware-rd., W.

HARRY ALLEN,
THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING.
Champion of all champions; 1st and 2nd last week, 1st and 3rd this week. I have without doubt the finest strain in the world bar none. Patronised by all the leading exhibitors, Mule breeders, and contest singers. I lead, others follow. Beware of spurious imitations; they will not give you satisfaction. If you want a sure winner or Mule breeder, send to me and you will never regret it. Big fine cock Linnets, well pencilled, Norwich type, 1/6 and 2/- each; extra picked birds, real beauties, 2/6 each. I have a few extraordinary fine show specimens, tight as wax, in A1 condition, can win in good class, 3/- each. Cock Linnets, singing beautifully, in singing cage, a packet of my special mixture, and instructions how to feed, 3/6 the lot, all being taught by my champion. Look out for imitations. House-moulted Linnets, in full song, ready for contests, 7/6, 10/6, 12/6 each, including cage. Cock Bullfinches, real eye-openers, 3/- each, all ready for show, hens 1/6 each, sure Mule breeders. Will do my utmost to further your interest here. Wishing you every success.—J. Prentice to H. Allen." Hundreds of testimonials; see last week's advert. All my birds are on seven days' approval. Cash or deposit. Send at once for a winner.—Harry Allen, Bird Specialist, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

BIRD CATCHERS.
Buy from Maker, and get best value obtainable; it would never pay me to send out cheap and blown together goods. I have been in the trade for years, and still sell more nets than all other so-called makers combined. Every article is sent out on approval; cash or deposit system; if not thoroughly satisfied return them and your money will be refunded; not a single article has been returned this season, but testimonials come in, by every post, although I seldom publish them. Here is one selected from scores, guaranteed unsolicited:—"Great Baddow, Chelmsford, Essex. Dear Sir,—Please send me a pair Clapnets, as per CAGE BIRDS, 18ft. by 4½ft.; amount enclosed. I had a pair of a Birmingham man which were practically useless.—Yours truly, S. G. Crisp." You can't afford to keep buying, but take my advice and buy a genuine article. Every Bird Guaranteed My Own Breeding

Some grand ones for disposal; reasonable; stamp; approval; inspection cordially invited.

Norwich, hot in colour, beautifully feathered, and of correct type.

Yorkshires, lengthy and upstanding, A1 quality, and well on leg.

PAIRS PROPERLY MATCHED.

SILK'S CHAMPION NORWICH!

More winners bred from this strain, which stands supreme, than any other in the fancy. You will not have far to go before finding a friend or brother fancier who can tell you from personal experience that Silk's Champion Norwich are the best value in the fancy; such unquestionable testimony can be obtained by almost anyone anywhere. Those who were disappointed last year with Norwich purchased elsewhere should buy a pair from a strain of many years' standing; hundreds of fanciers are ruining their stock with experiments, whilst the old reliable strain still remains unnoticed; do away with all doubts and buy from the fountain head—success certain; pairs at 15/6, 20/6, 25/6, 30/6, 35/6, and 40/0; some tip top cocks and hens from 10/6, 12/0, 15/6, 17/0, to 20/6 each; approval willingly.—A. E. Silk, Whitstable.

LOVELY SONGSTER.

18, South Terrace, Aberystwyth.
28th Nov. 1907.

Gentlemen,
I beg to thank you for the lovely Norwich songster which arrived safe this morning. I must express my admiration of the way in which the bird was packed; after a journey of some 17 hours it was quite lively and free from cold when unpacked. Thanking you for your choice,
Yours truly,
R. A. Pope to Mackley Bros.

TRADE MARK.

EVERY ONE FAIRLY ENVIOUS.

56, Cann Hall Rd., Leytonstone, London, N.E.
Gentlemen,
The Canary arrived safely and started to sing as soon as he was unpacked. All who have seen him declare that he is the finest bird they have seen. His beautiful plumage and his more than beautiful song makes every one fairly envious. Whenever my friends talk about buying canaries I shall impress on them one name and that is Mackley Bros. Thanking you for the splendid selection you made for me,
Yours faithfully,
C. W. Stockdale to Mackley Bros.

MY WORD!

If you don't read this you will make a mistake; you know that to purchase faulty and useless birds is like throwing your money away, therefore be wise in making your selection of whom you entrust with your orders. The best way to be sure of getting the uttermost value for money is to let me send you the birds you require carriage paid on 7 days' approval at my risk; my stock of genuine trained St. Andreasberg Rollers are second to none; exactly the birds you require, in full rolling song, not common Germans, but genuine trained birds, cocks, in full song, by day and artificial light, at 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, and 12/6 each; pure St. Andreasberg hens, 2/6 and 3/- each; if you require a first-class loud free songster, my Hartz Rollers are the birds to please; guaranteed cocks in full loud song by day and gaslight, 5/3, 5/9, 6/3 each; matched pairs for breeding songsters, 7/6 and 8/6 pair; neat travelling cages 2d. and 3d. each; if you have any birds out of condition, use Storey's Tonic, the best pick-me-up for all kinds of birds, 7d., 1/-, 1/6 and 2/6 bottle; Eggsups, the best egg food in the world, 8d., 1/- and 1/6 tins, post free; thousands of customers testify to high quality of my birds; read the following and note the dates. 8, Kendall Villas, Isleworth, December 14, 1907.—Bird safe to hand; it is singing all day, and has got a note like a Nightingale; I can recommend you to my friends. — W. Plupps to Mrs. Storey. 4, Sanderson Street, Atherton, Manchester, December 14, 1907.—Bird you sent mo is a champion; I would not sell him for double the money I gave for him. I am well satisfied.—A. Partington to Miss Storey, 166, Dumfries Street, Treherbert, Dec. 15, 1907.—Received H.M. Roller on Saturday; it sang lovely directly paper was removed; I am more than pleased with him; please send me another.—J. Davies to Miss Storey. Send me a postcard for full illustrated price list, post free; all Canaries sent carriage paid on 7 days' approval.—Miss E. L. Storey, Bird Specialist, Crowle, Doncaster.

ROLLER BREEDERS.

You are all deploring the monotony of your Roller's song. Why not do as the correspondent in last week's CAGE BIRDS did? Try a Cascade Roller. This has all the purity you are striving for, and the changes which British birds lack. For quality, purity, and variety they are unequalled. He says they beat his £2 2s. birds; so they ought to, or they would disgrace their name. Their song is low, long, and lovely, and the price is only 10/-. By request, I am importing a few Schoolmasters for the fastidious and experts, 15/- each. Don't forget the hen has as much to do with the song as the cock. Cascade hens, every bird rung with German breeders' own private ring, 2/6 each; trade terms on application.—Pearson, Cascade Importer, Greenwich.

LARGE COLLECTION

As follows: SEIFERT and other noted strains, not fictitious absurdities, in stock, to be seen and heard, a really fine and superior collection, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/- and up. Hens, same strain, 3/6 and 5/-. Hartz Cocks, singing, 5/-, 5/9, 6/6, Hens, 1/6, 2/- Don't be gulled by fictitious names—they are simply absurd, and I defy contradiction—but send for best strains procurable in Germany. Home-bred guaranteed Seiferts, best Cocks, untrained, 7/6 each; worth any money for breeding. Best procurable Hens, 3/6, 5/-, worth double. I have a reputation to uphold, and cannot afford, even if I so desired, to advertise what I cannot stand by, nor yet hide my identity behind any fictitious name, either female or male. All on week's approval; money back in full if not approved, or deposit with Editor if preferred.

W. RUDD, The Bird Specialist, NORWICH.

PURE SEIFERT SCHOOLMASTERS.

Real contest singers, perfect masters of their art, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- each; St. Andreasberg Rollers, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6; Schoolmasters, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each; Roller hens, 3/-, 3/6, 4/- each; Seifert hens, 5/- each; talking Grey Parrots always in stock; trade supplied; approval, deposit.—Thomas Broxton, Orrell Post, near Wigan.

PURE SEIFERT ROLLERS.

If you require a Christmas treat, try one of my gems; they give satisfaction wherever sent, as they are perfect masters of their art; better money cannot buy; cocks, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-.—Williams, Roller Breeder, Colwyn Bay.

REAL ST. ANDREASBERG ROLLERS.

Notice. When dealing see who you are dealing with and get best songster that England can produce. I challenge any other dealer—my strain against theirs—and birds sent out by me have won hundreds of prizes; they are trained with pure Nightingale, Woodlark, Titlark, water-bubble, and bell water, marvellous songsters, 5/9, 6/3, 7/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-; pure Andreasberg hens, 2/6, 3/-; matched breeding pairs, 10/-, 12/-, 15/-; read my customers' opinions. Liverpool. Bird you sent me is grand songster; sings night and day, never tired. J. Williams, Parkstreet, to C. Baker.—Parson street, Barnsley. Bird I had from you won singing Competition of 20 birds entered. W. Crease to C. Baker.—Dean-terrace, Sheffield. Bird I had from you gives every satisfaction; it woke me up next morning; he is grand songster. Griffiths to C. Baker.—Queen-street, North Shields. Bird arrived safe, and sang a treat as soon as I unpacked it. Mr. Fisher to C. Baker. Hundreds of testimonials can be given and seen on application; all on week's approval.—C. Baker, Herbert-st., Bedminster.

WHEN WE SAY

that we stock the best Rollers that money can buy, we do not exaggerate, as we offer all Rollers on seven clear days' approval, entirely at our own risk; either cash to us, or CAGE BIRDS' deposit system. What could be more straightforward; we have grand lot of Rollers, pure Seifert, in stock, with long deep soft hollow rolls, water-bubble runs, etc., bell, harp and gong notes, perfect little music boxes, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, and 12/- each; pure Seifert hollow roller hens, 2/6 each, 4/6 couple; Hartz Mountain Rollers, good loud clear day and gaslight songsters, 5/6, 6/6, Hartz Roller hens 1/6 each, 2/9 couple; Roller singing box cages, 1/3, 1/6 each; kindly read few of the following testimonials which go to prove the quality of our pure Seifert Rollers:—Castle Carrack, How Mill Street, Carlisle. Dec. 14.—Dear Sir,—The Roller arrived safe. I thank you for your honest straightforward dealings; he is a champion. I have sent to the Editor to forward you cash.—Yours, W. Blake to Parker and Wilden. No. 8, Bedford Street, Aberaman, near Aberdare. Dec. 14. Dear Sir.—Roller arrived quite safe; he is a beauty; neighbours running in all day long to hear the music; he never seems to tire or stop singing all day long; you will hear from me again; you can use the lines for what use you think fit.—Yours, Davies and Son to Parker and Wilden. 18, Blight's Row, Redruth. Dec. 13.—Birds arrived safe Wednesday morning, with many thanks for your prompt despatch.—Yours, W. Miners to Parker and Wilden. Kindly note all on seven clear days' approval. CAGE BIRDS' deposit system.—Parker and Wilden, Bird Merchants, 257 and 258, Farm Street, Birmingham.

Hummel Rollers.

Finest Rollers imported. To speak well of the Hummel is to gild refined gold. Testimonials from customers who say the Hummel is still singing as sweetly as when purchased four, five, six, and seven years ago. All Hummels have delightful deep, delicate bow roll, hollow roll, hollow bow roll, do pipe, hollow bell roll, grand round bass roll vibrating hollow roll, and charming water bubble roll; one price only, 12s. 6d.; no fancy prices; Hummel hens, 3s. each; a beautiful pair of Hummels for 15s. St. Andreasberg Rollers, 5s. and 7s. 6d. each. Hummel Schoolmasters, 20s. each, better than can be obtained elsewhere at treble the price. Thousands of testimonials have been published by me in CAGE BIRDS from satisfied customers. I guarantee strictly honourable trading and satisfaction to all.—Varney, sole proprietor and importer of this remarkable Roller Canary. Twenty years advertiser.—Varney, Stratford, London.—St. Mary Abbey, Mill Hill, December 1st, 1901. Received the Hummel; it sings beautifully indeed. It sings sweetly, and oh so softly, all day, and I cannot imagine any bird with a more lovely voice; he begins, even these dark mornings, at 7.30, under his serge cover, and sings till 6 o'clock. Although his song is so lovely, it is beautifully sweet, he has no shrill notes, and I am able to read through it. Miss F. Blockett. December 1st., Southfelt, Poynton, Cheshire. Received the Hummel, and am more than delighted with such superior song. W. Glover, to Varney, the largest importer of Rollers in London.

THERE'S NO QUESTION

about it, if you want the best possible value for your money, you must buy your Rollers from me. I am the sole importer of the genuine Leipzig Roller, and by importing direct am able to save all middlemen's profits, and can retail these grand birds at prices far below those charged by ordinary dealers. I have a grand collection of pure St. Andreasberg hollow Rollers, all direct from Leipzig, and stamped on wing "Hans Weber, Leipzig," all are in full song, day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, waterbubble runs, soft roulades, piccolo trills, bell, harp, du-du and Nightingale pipes, etc., etc., and are guaranteed to be entirely from from Titlark or any objectionable notes whatever, price, 7/- and 8/6 each. Special Schoolmasters, which excel in the deep bass rolls, 10/- each. Few extra special contest Masters, guaranteed pure Seifert blood, 15/- each. These contest birds are gems of the very first water, and have a grand flow of the rich, round, deep rolls, not the thin, metallic, ear-piercing shrieks, and are perfect masters of their art. Pure Roller hens, guaranteed same strain as above cocks, 2/- each, two 3/6. Grand lot of exceptionally loud, free singing Hartz cocks, extra free songsters, and just the thing for public bar, etc., 5/6 each, or 31/6 stick of seven. Hartz hens, 1/6 each, two 2/6 or 12/- dozen. Roller song cabinets made specially for my Rollers, 2/6 each. Ordinary singing box cages, 1/- and 1/3 each. Elegant solid brass drawing-room hanging cages, with ruby cut-glass round and opal feeders, etc., 5/6, 7/6, 10/6, and 13/- each As a special Christmas offer, I will supply up till December 31st only, a free singing Hartz cock in full song in a 10/6 solid brass drawing-room cage for 10/6 complete, or a Leipzig Roller cock in full song, value 7/, in 10/6 cage for 12/6 the lot. This special offer of bird and cage is made instead of giving away almanacks, which are, in most cases, useless, and will only remain open until December 31st, 1907. As usual, all birds and cages are sent safely and warmly packed, upon full week's approval, either on receipt of cash, or CAGE BIRDS deposit system, and money fully returned if every satisfaction not given. Hundreds upon hundreds of unsolicited testimonials have been published in previous issues of CAGE BIRDS, and few more given below, please notice dates and full addresses. "Upper Grove, Sellack, Ross, Dec. 9th. Sir,—I am delighted with the contest Roller, he sings from morning till night, day and gaslight. Please send another as follows. Yours, G. Preece." "215, Ferndale-rd., Swindon, Dec. 9th. Sir,—The two Rollers arrived safe, and give every satisfaction. Please send the following for some friends, as I have recommended you to them. Yours, T. Poole." "2, Graham Buildings, Hillhouse-lane, Huddersfield, Dec. 9th. Sir,—The Roller I got from you is giving every satisfaction. Please send another at 10/- Yours, E. Schofield." "26, New-st., Leominster, Dec. 8th. Sir,—The two Rollers arrived safe, and am very pleased with them. They started to sing the minute they were unpacked. You will hear from me again. Yours, G. Vaughan." "99, James-st., Llanelly, Dec. 8, Sir,—Birds all arrived safe and am well pleased, Schoolmaster doing well. Yours, J. Davies." "13, George-st., Oswaldtwistle, Dec. 5th. Sir,—Having had birds from you for past two or three years, I can do no more than give you another order; all the others being satisfactory. Please send me another contest Master at 15/-. Yours, G. Rushton." "12, Hammersmith-rd., St. George, Bristol, Dec. 5th. Sir,—Schoolmaster is singing lovely, and am very pleased with it. He is the best I have heard. Yours, M. Hill." "Grimsby, Dec. 5th. Sir,—I am very pleased with Schoolmaster you sent me, I have had several, but none to come up to yours. Yours, G. Jacklin." "720, Swansea-ter., Brownhill, Blackburn, Dec. 2nd. Sir,—Glad to say I am very well satisfied with Roller received Nov. 16th. Please quote price for contest singer. Yours, L. Crossdale." "Leicester, Dec. 4th. Sir,—Seifert Roller arrived to-day. He is singing beautifully now as I write by gaslight, so I need not wait the week's approval out, as I am well pleased with it. Yours, A. Smith." "1, Moss-lane, Platt Bridge, Dec. 2nd. Sir,— Please send me a Hartz cock. The Roller I had from you last year was a perfect little musical box. Yours, J. Meek." "Burleigh, near Stroud, Nov. 28th. Sir.—I am most pleased with Roller, it is a real beauty, and sings lovely. I am more than satisfied with it, and the straightforward way you do your business. Yours, A. Doel." "Cross-st., Bowst., N. Aberystwyth, Nov. 28th. Sir,—Received Roller safe, and am well satisfied he is a champion for the price. I have always done my best to advertise you, as you have a genuine way of dealing with your customers. Please send following. Yours, T. Meredith." "Beech-st., Blackheath, Nov. 28th Sir, I am highly pleased with Roller, he began to sing as soon as uncovered him, and is an excellent songster. Yours, S. Dotheridge." "Hill-st., Elworth, Nov. 25th.—Sir,—Please send following. I am pleased to say the Roller cock I bought from you two years ago is still singing splendidly. Yours, W. Lee." "1, Church-st., Aber Bargoed, Nov. 24th. Sir,—Received Roller safe, and am very pleased with him. Please send contest Master at 15/- Yours, C. Seralis, Morton-rd., Pilsley. Nov. 28th." "Sir.—Received Roller safely, and am well pleased with him, as soon as put in new cage he started to sing, before even going for food. I had one from —— that I was ready to turn out, as he never gave us a note until yours started. Thanking you for honesty. Yours, T. Berringer." "687, Garscube-rd., Glasgow, Nov. 12th. Sir,—Roller arrived safe, was singing within an hour, and gives every satisfaction. Yours, A. Jardine." "34, Castle-st., Stranraer, Nov. 18th. Sir,—Please send Hartz cock, last I had from you was a topper. Yours, J. Raeside." I am confident that the Rollers imported by me are far superior to any others on the market, and I ask all sceptical persons to have one from me and one at any higher price from elsewhere, test them side by side, and keep the one which suits best. I shall be quite satisfied with result. I claim to be the only direct importer in Midland Counties, and by far the largest retailer in United Kingdom. Inspection cordially invited any time.

CONTEST ROLLERS.

Real St. Andreasbergs. The price of these birds is only 15/-, and we send them on 14 days' trial at our risk, and we don't want your money until you are fully satisfied with the bird. Deposit the 15/- now with the Editor of CAGE BIRDS and don't you buy a Roller or any other article on any other terms, no matter if the advertiser is a large advertiser or a small one. Always deposit your cash, and then you can't be imposed upon. Every one of these Rollers is sent out in prime condition, and a receipt is given, with full instructions how to keep them in condition and contest form, this alone is worth pounds to every fancier, and every bird we sell gets us a testimonial. We could publish hundreds, only we prefer to give value in the birds themselves rather than spend the money in advertisements, and out of the hundreds we sold last year, the Editor of CAGE BIRDS can prove that we had only one deposit to return. Send for one of these masterpieces, and send also to some other advertiser for a 20/- or £2 Roller and compare the two, and I guarantee you will prefer the one we send. A word to the wise is sufficient. German Hartz Mountain Canaries in full song, same as sold by others as Rollers, price, 5/-, 6/-, 7/-, and 8/6 each. Roller hens, 1/6, 2/-, 2/6 and 3/- each. Singing cage cabinets, with closing shutters, complete, 2/6 each. Anything, alive, bought, sold, and exchanged. We have won thousands of prizes.—Northern Aviaries, Ormskirk-rd., Preston.

Real St. Andreasberg Rollers

Pure Hartz Rollers.

XMAS & NEW YEAR PRESENTS.

These Testimonials are for birds sent hundreds of miles away. Have thousands from English customers.

Direct importer. The finest Seiferts strain from Germany, with pure Nightingale, Woodlark, Titlarks, Waterbubble, and bell notes; marvellous songsters; 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/- each; on approval. Now, hurry your orders up for first choice. Hens, same strain, 2/- and 2/6. Wholesalers, write for terms. Just a few testimonials picked from hundreds. These have come from birds I have sent hundreds of miles from Preston. Mrs. Downs, Chelmsford Road, Dublin, writes, Oct. 30th, 1907—"Thanks for the beautiful Roller. He arrived safely about 11 today, none the worse for the journey. He is a beautiful colour, and has a lovely voice. I like him well; he is singing over my head this moment. I want a nice cage for him; send on price of one." Mr. Glenny, Bachelors' Walk, Dublin, Oct., 1907—"Sir, am pleased with Roller, which arrived safe. He is singing continually night and day since he arrived. Scores of testimonials like this. If above not proof enough, send for catalogue and scores more testimonials. Mr. J. Patterson, Cork, Ireland—"Sir, I think it only right you should know that the Roller you sent me won the All Ireland Roller Singing Contest, held here November 8th and 9th." Mr. McConquodall, Greenock, Scotland—"Sir, received Roller and box cage safe; he was singing half an hour after I got him. He is the best songster I ever had. The cage is most suitable." Mr. H. Brooks, Wakefield, Yorks.—Sir, the Hartz Roller to hand. He is a splendid bird and sang under three minutes after caged. He sings in the gaslight; first thing in the morning. I have given twice as much for German Rollers not half as good as this from you." A few real Hartz Rollers—not Belgians, price 5/6 and 6/- each; hens, 1/6, two 2/6. Proper singing Roller box cages, 1/6; enamelled inside and out, inlaid fronts, sand drawers; beauties, 1/10 each; approval with any; established 1879.

SOLID BUSINESS

E. TAYLOR

Bird Specialist,

3 & 7, Thornton Road, BRADFORD.

It is an accepted fact among all classes of civilised trading men, that, in order that business be carried through on satisfactory and solid lines there must be perfect confidence on both sides. That is to say that the buyer must be sure of the seller's honesty of purpose and the seller must have confidence in the buyer's financial rectitude. This is exactly the position of matters which obtains between E. TAYLOR'S business friends and E. TAYLOR himself. There is never any doubt in the mind of the customers as to E. TAYLOR being well able to serve his clients BEST, in Birds, Cages, or Appliances, and the pleasing result is a most harmonious helpfulness on both sides of the counter.

E. TAYLOR'S SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE,

will fully explain how this result is arrived at. It will, besides, afford you much valuable information regarding matters in Bird transactions generally and will be cheerfully sent on receipt of two penny stamps, to cover postage.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all times to send my Parrots on four weeks' trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

SINGING CONTESTS.

LEEDS.

Usual weekly contest held at King's Head, Shannon-street, when 27 birds sang for four good prizes given by Mr. W. Tillottson. Some very good singing was heard, to the enjoyment of a crowded house; 1st and 2nd prize shared by W. Tillottson and W. Fisher; 3rd prize, J. Harold; 4th, shared by T. Summers and S. Hardcastle. Judges, Cooper and Crane. Also a German Canary match on December 9th, when 11 good Canaries sang for three good prizes; 1st and 2nd, W. Wroe; 3rd, shared by J. Pratt and J. Chippindale. Judges, T. Summers and S. Hardcastle.—T. SUMMERS, Hon. Sec.

BLACKBURN.

The Blackburn L.S.A. held their week-end singing contest Dec. 14, at Headquarters, Old Red Lion, Snig Brook. Thirteen birds competed for three prizes; winners, 1, J. Harrison; 2, R. Hayhurst; 3, W. H. Gopping. Also a contest, Dec. 7, and winners—1, G. Rostron; 2, J. Harrison; 3, J. Monk. Judge, Mr. C. McGreevey; timekeeper, W. Wrench; R. Hayhurst, secretary.

YORK.

Usual weekly contest held at Crown Inn, North Street. Twenty-two of the best birds sang for five good prizes given by Mr. J. Smith. Some very good quality singing for the time of the year was to be heard before a good company with the following result: 1st prize, A. Watsou; 2nd, J. Firth; 3rd, Key; 4th, Moore; 5th, Nicholls. Judge, Mr. Perry. Mr. Mason, timekeeper.—J. SMITH, Hon. Sec.

NEWTOWN (LEEDS.)

The members of the Prince Albert Inn C. and L.A. met Nov. 17th, to witness a singing contest for three good prizes given by Mr. J. R. Saynor. 19 birds competed. Judges were Messrs. B. Jackson and W. Bineson. 1st, 2nd, H. Allen; 3rd, divided between H. Allen and J. Chippindale. Another contest, Nov. 24th, when 19 birds again competed for three valuable prizes. Judges were Messrs. G. Towers and B. Jackson. Result: 1st prize, H. Hayes 2nd, 3rd, H. Allen. Another contest December 1st for three special prizes. Twenty of the best picked birds in Leeds competing. The singing room was literally packed with visitors and friends, who came to hear Mr. H. Allen's champion once more in a contest. Judges, Messrs. B. Jackson and J. Smith; 1st prize, Mr. H. Allen's champion, who "ran away" with the contest; 2nd H. Hayes; 3rd, J. Chippendale. Contest held December 8th; three special prizes to be competed for between 20 birds. The large singing room was again literally packed; there was only standing room, when it was known that Mr. Allen was hanging his champion for the last time in a contest of any description. The bird again simply "ran away" with the contest, to the delight of all. The bird has a wonderful record. Judges were Messrs. B Jackson and J. Smith. Result: 1st and 2nd prize, H. Allen; 3rd, G. Atkinson. Also a contest on December 15th, when 14 birds sang for three special prizes. Judges, Messrs. B. Jackson and J. Smith. Result: 1st and 3rd, H. Allen; 2nd, G. Atkinson. A Roller Canary contest held December 8th, when 18 birds competed for five special prizes. Judges, Messrs. B. Jackson and H. Nutter; timekeeper, J. Chippendale. Result: 1st and 3rd, Binks; 2nd, E. Wood; 4th, G. Cockroft; 5, our worthy host, J. R. Saynor. Another Roller contest December 15th, 10 of the best picked Canaries in Leeds competing. That clever judge, Mr. H. Allen, consented to judge, together with Mr. Smith, and with Mr. Chippendale as timekeeper. Result: 1st and 2nd prizes divided between E. Wood and Binks; 3rd, A. Binner, everybody being highly satisfied at the decision.—E. WOOD, Hon. Sec.

CLUB REPORTS.

ROCHDALE GOOD INTENT C.B.S.

Washing Competition held at headquarters, Dec. 4th, when seven members competed. Comment upon the different styles of washing were freely indulged in; two advocated the use of borax in the first basin, whilst another used nothing but soap and a sponge. Three members kindly officiated as judges, and gave their awards to: 1st silver medal, R. Radcliffe; 2, drying cage, Ernest Hartley; 3, photo, E. Sidnway.—SAM M. CLAYTON, Hon. Sec.

YORK C.B.S.

The last monthly meeting of the year was held Dec. 9th, in the All Saints' School-room, York. After the usual business a lantern lecture was given by Mr. Hewitt, of York, on "British birds and their habits." About 100 slides were used for the purpose. The large number of members and friends present were very much interested by the able manner in which the lecturer explained each feature of the bird life. The Chairman, Mr. D. Hunter, moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Hewitt, which was carried with loud applause. Mr. Watson kindly officiated at the lantern, and he did it so as to show the different birds to perfection.—T. BOYLE, Hon Sec.

BLACKBURN, L.S.A.

The Blackburn L.S.A. supper and concert took place at headquarters on Dec. 10th. A large gathering sat down to a splendid repast served in splendid style by the host. After the cloth was removed, the President, Mr. G. Rostron, took the chair. The usual loyal toasts opened the evening's entertainment. Mr. W. H. Topping, in a neat little speech, said that he thought the club was fortunate in having such an enthusiastic associate and veteran member as Mr. D. Bentley. Mr. Brown Bentley replied briefly, saying he would gladly convey the affectionate message home. Mr. McGreevey proposed the next toast "Host and hostess." Mr. and Mrs. Harrison responded in their own humorous and homely way. The musical part of the programme was most entertaining. The singers rendered their songs in their usual good style.—RD. HAYHURST, Sec.

LANCASHIRE CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Meeting held at Middleton Show, Dec. 7th. A fair number of members attended, and the president, Mr. J. Nadin, presided. It was resolved that the guarantee money be paid out to the Rochdale Good Intent C.B.S. and Middleton O.S. The Chairman read a letter received from the Secretary, who is compelled through pressure of business to give up th secretarial duties, and it was decided that the same be left over until next meeting, which will he the annual general meeting; it is hoped there will be a great number present. The decision of the members was, that the annual general meeting should be held at the showroom of the Rochdale Good Intent Society in January. The date and time will be inserted in CAGE BIRDS. Members and Lancashire fanciers are requested to take particular notice of this, the annual meeting, when a good attendance is necessary. JAS. LAW, Sec.

CITY OF BRADFORD O.S.

The members of this society thought it a very fitting time, seeing that Mr. W. Horsman (at whose house the society had its headquarters for 15 years) has had to remove to the Old King's Head, Allerton, to acknowledge in some practical way the many kindnesses received at the hands of both Mr. and Mrs. Horsman. This they did the other evening by presenting to Mr. Horsman a beautifully framed portrait of himself (in centre) and all the officials of the society—namely, Messrs. T. Fortnam, President, L. S. Clarkson, J. Hartley, and W. Wharton, vice-presidents, F. Ludbrook, Treasurer, P. Stansfield, Secretary, F. Rhodes, assistant Secretary, W. Bromham, J. Horsfield, Auditors, and F. Hammond, Secretary to the Yorkshire Union. Mr. T. Fortnam, in making the presentation, referred to Mr. Horsman's illness, and expressed the hope that in his new home his health would he greatly improved, that fortune would smile on him and his good wife, and that when looking at the faces in the picture now before him it would remind them of old acquaintances and the happy times spent with them. Mr. Clarkson and Mr. Ludbrook spoke, having known Mr. Horsman for something like 25 years. They said they had always found him a good and true fancier, and in Mrs. Horsman they had had a kind, courteous landlady. Mr. Horsman returned thanks, and the usual "For he's a jolly good fellow," and "Auld Lang Syne" were sung in a most hearty manner by all present. Mr. P. Stansfield gave a few fine selections on the piano.—F. LUDBROOK.

WEST LONDON FANCIERS' ASSOCIATION.

The annual dinner in connection with the above association was held December 12th at the Bush Hotel, Shepherd's Bush. Despite the inclement weather about fifty members and friends of the association sat down to a capital spread, Mr. B. Stevenson (chairman) presiding. An excellent programme was provided, including the usual toasts to the King, the West London Fanciers' Association, the Visitors, the Kindred Societies, and the Press. After-dinner speeches in connection with the various toasts were made by Messrs. Easterling, R. Thompson, H. Grey, W. H. Mugford, and others, and, of course, the genial chairman, who performed his duties in a very able manner. Many very excellent songs were sung, which kept the company in the best of spirits; in fact, at the conclusion of the evening there were traces of the "smile that wouldn't come off." For this, Messrs. H. Walker, Duguid, and Seaton Holmes were largely responsible. The first-mentioned sang several songs, all with telling effect, among others being "The Old Sunny Window," "Singers and Talkers," and "The Language of London Town." Mr. Duguid sang "Don't You Think He's Mad?" "Side Slips," and others, and Mr. Seaton Holmes was no less amusing in his cleverly-arranged mimicry and mannerisms. A capital feature of the evening was the magical interlude of Professor Bond's. This gentleman kept the company interested for a considerable time with sleight of hand and other incomprehensible tricks. Miss E. A. Baker is a very sweet singer, and her songs, "Because," "Rose in the Bud," and others, were all highly appreciated. The evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem. This is the first time this old society has held a dinner, and, judging from the attendance, the comprehensive [illegible] and the evident satisfaction of everyone who attended—these things constitute a sure criterion—it was a huge success. Doubtless, as was said, this will not be the last dinner, but, we hope, the first of many. Upon no one person does the success of the venture reflect greater credit than upon the hon. sec., Mr. J. Dewhurst. It must have cost him a deal of time and trouble, and he is to be congratulated upon the successful manner in which the arrangements were carried out.

BROUGHTY FERRY O.B.S.

Annual meeting held Dec. 4th, in the Bakers' Rooms, Mr. Carmyllie presiding over a good attendance of members. The auditors gave their report, which showed the Society was in a flourishing condition, and had a good surplus to the good on the year's working. Office bearers were elected for next season as follows: Messrs. Robt. Carmyllie, president; Kelll, vice-president; R. Whitton, secretary; Chas. Muir, treasurer; committee—Messrs. Jas. Campbell, M. Wilson, A. Curtis, S. Duncan, D. Merrilees, etc., etc. Next meeting, January 8th.

ROBT. WHITTON, Sec.

WIBSEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A meeting was held during the judging of the members' show, and the following large list of specials were awarded for the members' shows held this year:—1st prize, 25s. medal; 2nd prize, 20s. medal; 3rd prize, 12s. 6d. medal and 3s. 6d. in goods; 4th prize, 7s. 6d. travelling show case and 1s. in goods; 5th prize, 6s. in goods; 6th prize, 5s. in goods; 7th 8th, and 9th prizes, 4s. in goods; 10th prize, 4s. pipe and pouch; 11th and 12th, two books at 4s. each; 13th, 3-stone of seed; 14th, 2s. 6d. painted panel; 15th, 2s. 6d. pipe; 16th, 2s. 6d. couple of rabbits; 17th, 18th, and 19th, 2s. in goods. By the foregoing list of prizes all members who have exhibited at any members' show will receive a special prize value not less than 2s. Our Society is always well supplied with specials, and we are always ready to welcome new members and visitors at our headquarters, the Horse and Groom Inn.—E. W. JOHNSON, (hon. sec.).

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Instead of the usual monthly meeting, the Society held a smoking concert on Dec. 7th in the Bisley Hotel. Members' prize money was first paid out and specials presented. Our treasurer, Mr. J. Davison, opened the programme proper with a song, "The school board man," which he sang in the local dialect, fairly bringing down the house. Mr. Barron (in the absence of Harry Lauder, who is in the U.S.A.) sang "I love a lassie" and "Fee the noo"; Mr. Spark sang "The Bay of Biscay" and "Village Blacksmith," and Mr. Hedworth, "The Wolf" and "Drinking." Messrs. Dixon, Gair, and Harrison Scott were equally well received. Mr. W. Ogilvie gave two violin solos, and not until mine host, Mr. W. Scott, called "Time, gentlemen!" did the company of 70 members and friends rise and sing in a lusty manner the National Anthem. I hope this enjoyable social evening will soon be repeated. The Chairman of the Society (Mr. J. Hands) ably presided, being well supported hy Mr. J. Davison, vice-chairman. Mr. D. Johnson acted in a capable manner as accompanist.

D. A. OGILVIE, Sec.

GREENWICH & DEPTFORD C.B.S.

One of those delightful functions which tend to bring the members and friends of any organisation closer together took place at the "Two Brewers," Church-street, Greenwich, on November 28th when the annual smoking concert of the above society took place. The chair was taken by Mr. Meades. The large room was filled to its utmost capacity. The pianist having played the initial overture, Mr. F. Putrin caused great amusement with a good song, "Read Between the Lines"; Mr. W. Barker sang "One Minute to Seven Last Night"; Mr. Jenkins, "Twilight"; Mr. Beach was a comic; Mr. F. Putrin sang "My New Pal," and Mr. W. Putrin sang "My Mother" and "Don't Sing a Coon Song, Please"; Mr. Jenkins gave violin solo. Mr. Nicholls sang "For Truth or a Lie"; Mr. Camphell, "I Want to Live a Little Longer"; Mr. W. Putrin "Oh! the Merry Widow" and "Looking for a Sweetheart"; Mr. F. Putrin sang "Bertie in Love" and "It's a Different Girl Again." During the evening the cups and specials, won at late autumn show by members, were duly presented. "Auld Lang Syne" and the National Anthem concluded a most enjoyable evening.—C. W. HILL, sec.

HAYLE FANCIERS ASSOCIATION.

The annual supper was held at the White Hart Hotel, Dec. 2nd, when a good number sat down to an excellent spread hy Host Trevena. The chair was occupied by Mr. J. Roskron. Others present included the Rev, Father Mullins, Messrs A W Thompson (treasurer); L. Cock (Cage Bird Sec.); W. Andrewartha (Pigeon sec.); H. Lee and W. Bellman (Camhorne); T. Rowe, J. Richards, W. Glanville, W. Symons, W. Dale and S. Maddern. After justice had been done to the good things provided, the chairman read a letter from the President, expressing regret at his absence, and hoping that the Society would continue to prosper. The chairman proposed the health of the President (Dr. Z. B. Mudge). He said a large amount of the success gained by the Association was due to the great interest taken in the Society by Dr. Mudge who was ever ready with a helping hand. The general secretary in supporting spoke in highest praise at the willing and ready manner of the President. The toast was received with musical honours. The President sent cigars for the members during the evening. Mr. T. Rowe proposed success to the Association, and in a very neat little speech complimented the officers on the grand show they got together, and also on the excellent quality of the exhibits. Mr. J. Richards in supporting said he was very pleased to see the Society come out on the right side financially, after the very bad weather we had on the show days. Mr. L. Cock, replying for the officers, said it was a pleasure to he associated with the Hayle Society; every one worked for the welfare of the show, and he hoped to have the pleasure of filling the office of Cage Bird sec. for many years to come. Mr. Andrewartha also replied that he could fully endorse what Mr. Cock had said, and he felt it an honour to he an official of the Society. "Our Supporters" was given by Mr. S. Maddern, and with his usual flow of oratory, supported by Mr. W. Dale. The following contributed songs: Messrs. Symons, Dale, Maddern. Wilkes, T. Rowe, S. Rowe, J. Kemp and W. Glanville, the last-mentioned bringing down the house with a song of his own composing. Messrs Thompson and Andrewartha accompanied during the evening. Father Mullins presented the Gen. Sec. with a gold medal, subscribed for hy the members.

LONDON AND COUNTIES A.C.B.

Meeting held December 12th, at headquarters, The Bay Malton, Great Portland-street, W. In the absence of the President, Mr. E. Pretty occupied the chair. Six new members were elected. It was unanimously agreed to change the meeting nights to the first and third Mondays in each month, commencing with the New Year. The programme for the ensuing year was dealt with, and several prominent lecturers were proposed, and the secretary requested to write to and secure. The schedule of the show of pairs matched for breeding was read and amended. The same will be judged by Mr. G. Gardner (who was appointed in January last). The meeting falling in Christmas week, will he abandoned, and held on Monday, January 6th, when the shows for the ensuing year will be fixed and judges nominated, who will he elected at the general meeting on January 20th. On the same evening a show of Yorkshires confined to novices will he held in conjunction with a judging competition. Mr. G. Armstrong (late of Sheffield) will judge, and also lecture on same, debate to follow.—R. J. PRETTY, Sec.

WASHING EXHIBITION AT WOLVERHAMPTON.

Meeting held December 9th, when a good number of fanciers were present to witness a washing exhibition hy Mr. F. J. Weaver, who very ably showed those present his method of washing a bird. The utensils used were three small enamel bowls, two badger hair shaving brushes, three soft cloths, and a very good drying box, size about 18 inches hy 12 by 9, all wood except half the front, which is glass. A door at the end, and a back which takes out for cleaning, four holes and small window in the top, completes the cage, which, when placed before the fire gives excellent results. Mr. Weaver commenced by placing drying box and cloths before the fire, then prepared the water and soap, Sunlight and Lavisine, which he used together, scraping a little of each into a tea cup with boiling water. When thoroughly dissolved, he emptied same into the first bowl of water, making a nice lather. He then proceeded to wash the bird, commencing at the feet, then the tail, wings, body and neck, and head last. He worked the lather well in with the first brush, after rinsing in the other two bowls, and paying special attention to the neck. He then rolled the bird into one of the cloths and placed it on top of the drying box for about five minutes, afterwards placing it inside to finish drying. Mr. Thomson and Mr. Howes also put a bird through. With a vote of thanks to Mr. Weaver this terminated a very interesting meeting.—F. HOWES

WELSH CAGE BIRD CLUB.

Members of the club have received a ballot paper to vote either in favour of or against a club show. Out of those that have been received back again—and there were a good percentage—only three voted against, and even those promised a good entry if a show were held. About 150 entries were guaranteed by those that voted and also subscriptions and cash specials to the amount of £1 12s. 6d. Other specials are also promised. The committee would be glad to receive other promises hy way either of subscriptions or specials in cash or kind, from any member or from anyone wishing to assist us in this our first club show. The prize money will be on the sliding scale, with a shilling entry fee. A special classification was drawn up by the committee at a meeting held on Dec 14th, and they did not forget the novice exhibitor. Any fancier joining the club before the third week in January will be eligible to compete at this show; if they join the first week in January they will be eligible to compete for the spls. given at Neath on the 9th and Llanelly on the 12th. The club show will he held on January 30th, at Mountain Ash, and an outside judge (if possible one who has not visited Wales this season), will he appointed. Mr. T. L. Castree, the chairman, has kindly consented to he show manager and secretary; any matter in counection with the show must he sent direct to him to 44, Commercial Street, Mountain Ash. All other matters concerning the club, such as members' subscriptions, proposing new members, etc., must he sent to me. The usual subscription is 2/6. We are looking forward to a hig increase in membership this next month.—J. H. TEDSTONE, Hon. Sec.

THE SHOWS.

MABLETHORPE AND DIS. F.A.

A show of cage birds was held on December 12th and 13th, in connection with the local show, in a large building adjoining the Louth Hotel. The entries came up fairly well, but the committee had to amalgamate the Fed Norwich, and Yorks., and the Non-Fed. Norwich, and Yorks. There were some good birds shown by Messrs. Young, Crowson, Atkin, and White. Messrs. Elvin and Andrews, the joint secs., deserve every praise for their able conduct of the show, and it is to be hoped they will have a larger entry still another year. Mr. F. Jackson judged, and his awards gave satisfaction. COL.-FED: 1, medal, Young, a clinking Yorks.; 2, T. Peplow, grand Norwich in good form; 3, Atkin, very nice Yorks.; vhc, Crowson, fine Yellow Yorks. NON-FED: 1, 4, spl, Crowson, clinking yell. Yorks., grand trim, stands up well; 2, Harpham, buff Norwich, good one, shown well; 3, Atkin, nice Yorks., stylish; vhc, White. SELL. 12/6: 1, Atkin; 2, Wing; 3, Crowson. BRIT.: 1, 2, White, 1st smart Goldie, steady, nice trim; 2nd, Bullie, good bird; 3, Atkin, nice Goldie.

GLASGOW AND WEST OF SCOTLAND N.M.B. AND F.B.C.

The 18th annual members' show was held on December 14th, in the Good Templars' Hall, 122, Ingram Street, Glasgow. The weather was dry and clear, and the hall was comfortably filled during the whole of the afternoon. There were 70 classes under three judges, and over five hundred birds were staged. The Norwich and Crest section, Judge, Mr. W. D. Milne (Montrose), presented a splendid show, and so uniformly good was the quality that Mr. Milne had no easy time selecting the winners. Mr. Archd. Patterson was successful in gaining Challenge Cup for best young Canary, Mule or Hybrid, and the same bird also won the Stewart Challenge Cup and Gold Medal for best bird, all sections, shown by a Novice. This award gave general satisfaction, the bird being a perfect topper, showing type and quality at every point, and should be heard of among the topnunkers at many of our shows. Mr. Andrew Miller, Anniesland, judged the Borders and all other varieties of Canaries, and although the array was not quite so formidable, the quality was good, some of the Novices running well-known winners very hard for first places. Mr. G. G. Henderson's very fine Norwich Clnn. won Gold Medal for best old Canary, Mule or Hybrid, and Mr. R. Eastman won the handsome tea-set with his Yorks. The British and Foreign section under Mr. John Muir as judge, was indeed a treat, and needed all the skill of this well-known expert to place the birds in their relative positions. However, the task was well accomplished and everybody seemed satisfied. Every class here was exceptionally fine, some of the pick of British birds in Scotland being before the judge, and all joined, fanciers and visitors alike, in admiring the splendid condition of these pretty little feathered friends, the gems of our bonny land. The medal for best British or Foreign was awarded to Mr. Tom Erskine for his superb Tanager, and although this foreigner ousted our own birds, not a single grumble was heard, for truly this was a wonderful exhibit. The beautiful delicate colouring, the splendid condition, and the lovely sheen making "superb" the only word that could suitably depict this handsome bird. Over seventy other specials were annexed by the various exhibitors, and taking it all over the show was a great success. Larger entries, better quality and more visitors all constitute the show a record; it is hoped this will be broken next year. Much of the success of the show is due to the untiring efforts of the secretary and treasurer, Mr. R. A. Brown, who had the arrangements well in hand, and has proved more than once that he knows how to conduct a show. He was ably supported by Messrs. R. Eastman (President), W. Abercrombie (vice-president), A. K. Chalmers, A. Sloan, C. B. Whitelaw, P. Thaw, A. M'Callum, G. G. Henderson, J. Ferguson, G. M'Phail, D. Grabam, and S. Ward.

HYSON GREEN.

The Hyson Green (Nottingham) C.B.S. held their annual exhibition December 7th in that large and well-lighted room in connection with the Cricket Players' Inn. The show itself was one of the best the society has ever had, both as regards quality and quantity. The staging was, on this occasion, arranged differently, and was certainly a great improvement. The Norwich were truly a magnificent lot, and one would have to go to a great number of shows to see anything better. This district abounds with true Norwich Fanciers and birds. The Crests and Crestbreds were not very numerous, but some magnificent birds were staged, which do great credit to their owners. The Foreign and Britishers were a splendid lot, and were a show in themselves. The management was splendidly carried out. The officials were: President, Mr. R. Rhodes; vice-presidents, Messrs. J. F. Birch and G. C. Ley; treasurer, Mr. W. Cottingham; secretary, Mr. Ernest Garton, who is deserving of great praise on his successful management; assistant-secretary, Mr. T. Cutting; committee, Messrs. J. Bertie, E. Wolfe, F. Willis, T. Andrea, J. Breffit, and A. Bexton. Mr. Wm. Irvine, of Hucknall, judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction. The premier prize for most points was won by Mr. J. Bertie, with a magnificent team. Other special winners were Messrs. J. Birch, G. Hill, E. Wolfe, and W. Cottingham.

OBAN.

The annual show of the Oban C.S. was held in the Argyllshire Gathering Hall, on December 12. The cage bird section (confined to a local area) was not numerically as strong as last year, but the quality was very good, many of the exhibits being quite able to hold their own in open competition. The hall is a grand one for a show, well lighted and free from draughts. The committee are men of the correct stamp, and everything was done for the comfort of the exhibitors. Messrs. Nimmo and Paterson, the hon. secs. are to be congratulated on the able manner in which the arrangements were carried out. Mr. Wm. C. Smith (Balguhiddler) was judge, and his awards gave entire satisfaction. THE STANDARD WORK.

"YORKSHIRE CANARIES":

How to Breed, Manage & Exhibit.

By H. W. BATTYE, President of the Yorkshire Union.

This work, which deals fully with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties, should be in the hands of every breeder of Yorkshires. It gives instruction upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, Exhibiting, and how to treat both in health and disease.

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet Street, London.

A Record-Breaking Event.

That go-ahead North-country Society, the Gateshead and District C.B.S. was favoured with a magnificent success at the show held on December 13 and 14, last. The splendid Burt Terrace Drill Hall, of which we had heard so much, and found even exceeded our high expectations, was filled with a collection of cage birds such as is rarely seen at any provincial fixture. It was not one section that towered above the others in number of exhibits, all were alike in being excellently filled, and with birds of the highest possible quality—the cream of the country, in fact. To come down to cold figures, 1217 birds faced the five judges, Messrs. G. Gardner, J. Robson, and G. E. Weston (London), W. Vardy (Hucknall), and J. S. Wilson (Workington), and these provided them with a busy morning's work. Luckily the light was very good the major portion of the time, and as the hall has plenty of windows on every side, in addition to a good top light, this assisted them greatly. The exhibits were splendidly staged, in the latest (and unquestionably the best) style—in flat tiers, resembling the shelves of a bookcase, a plan which leaves the maximum amount of space for visitors, and at the same time, displays the birds themselves in the best possible manner. The hall, too, was warmed to just the right temperature. The steady ding of the judges, and the staging and feeding of the birds were in the hands of skilled and tried fanciers, and so it is hardly needful to add that order reigned supreme, and that everything went off without a hitch. Under the watchful eye of the able secretary, Mr. T. Taylor, every precaution that could be thought of was adopted to safeguard the prompt arrival and despatch of the birds, and the confidence of the Fancy in responding with such a magnificent entry was not misplaced; while the management remains in the present hands, indeed, Gateshead will surely never lack for entries. Mr. Taylor is a fancier and exhibitor himself, so knows how he likes to be treated when he is showing, and he carries out the principle of "do unto others," etc., to the full, and this, needless to say, meets with due appreciation. In capability, enthusiasm, and courteousness, the president, Mr. A. Brown, runs his secretary very closely, and he worked his hardest to make everybody's path a smooth one. The other hardworking officials were Mr. F. F. Hawkins, the chairman, Mr. J. Weatherston, the vice-chairman, with Messrs. J. Brown, W. Longstaff, T. Kirkpatrick, G. Logan, R. Johnson, G. Buck, N. Jerdan, H. George, J. Little, R. Lowery, F. Hayes, and A. Lister as committee, and J. Grieve as assistant secretary, and a due share of the success achieved must be put to the credit of those good fanciers. Among the helpers were Messrs. G. Robson and J. Maddison, and other efficient stewards. The exhibition was declared open by the Mayor of Gateshead, Ald. A. Gillies, J.P., who made a most sympathetic speech, evidencing his good-will towards the Society, and his high appreciation of the keeping of pet birds as a first-rate hobby to take up. The awarding of the Challenge Cup for best bird in the show was one of the eagerly looked forward to events, and this knotty point took a bit of deciding, and roused quite a heated debate 'twixt the judges. Mr. Grey's buff Norwich, Messrs. Murgatroyd and Son's marked yellow Yorks, Mr. Taylor's young Crest, and Mr Williams' Goldie-Bullfie Hybrid were the contestants, and eventually the two latter were left in the ring, when a vote of the judges saw the Crest, the noted 'King Edward,' left the proud possessor of the trophy. His owner received hearty hand-shakes and congratulations from all round the hall, the victory being a highly popular one. In addition to the entry, Gateshead were favoured with a record "gate," and, what is always welcome, a record "take," at the sales office. On the Friday the attendance of fanciers was a strong one, but on the Saturday, despite the dismal weather conditions, bird-lovers flocked from all quarters, so that even the spacious aisles of the Drill Hall were taxed to their utmost holding capacity. The Gateshead Society certainly has cause for self-congratulation on its grand 1907 exhibition.

Norwich and Yorkshires a Hot Lot.

Norwich Plainheads opened the programme, and it was said on all hands that birds of higher quality had not been seen for many a long day, if ever, in this corner of England. Many noted studs fought it out for the prizes, and the coveted cards were pretty evenly distributed, "deck-sweeping" being rather too tall an order to be carried out at Gateshead. Graud exhibits for type, and silky, well-laid-on plumage, were to be seen right through the old-bird classes, while the three unflighted classes were scorchers, with 68 youngsters in them. The judge had an anxious time, but we heard hardly a grumble after he had made up his mind, and allotted the cards. Mr. A. Grey's (Morpeth) clear buff, a wonder for size, shape and texture of feather, and neatness itself, he considered the pick of the section, and a tough battle it waged for the cup. Other specimens of outstanding merit were staged by the same exhibitor, and also by Messrs. Harland, Sandiford, A. Brown, Cowling, Hope, Younghusband, Haigh and Son, Stanger and Herdman, Dobinson, Pickering and Wright, Slater, Mercer, Corston, Richardson, J. and J. Hopkins, and Hayes. It was a grand show of Plainheads, without a doubt. The Cinnamons were also a nice lot, while the Yorkshires were simply superb, and present in excellent numbers. Such a fine display of these graceful birds did great credit to the show. Taken on the whole, the type throughout was first-class, worthy of any fixture in the county of broad acres itself. The birds in the money were all admirable specimens, and Messrs. Cuthbertson, Murgatroyd and Son, Broughton, Stewart, Stebbings, Rhodes, Rennie, Carr, Tweedie and Grieve, are to be congratulated on the teams they put down. The Scots Fancies, too, made a trio of strong classes, a very pleasing thing, and Messrs. W. B. Cobb, Lugton, Willison, Little, Chapman, Sloan and Dixon staged some beauties, strong in all the true properties of the "bird of circle." They found many admirers. The bargains in the selling classes, attracted an eager crowd, and made Secretary Taylor rub his hands with satisfaction when the cash commenced to come in. Mr. Stoves, we heard, annexed Hyde's special.

Some Splendid Crests.

Crests and Crestbreds made a splendid show. There were about 150 in the 14 classes, the members' section contributing no fewer than 51 of the number, an average exactly equal to that of the open section. There seems to be a strong desire on the part of Crest-breeders in the north to get substance in body and quality of feather as well as crest, and in this point many of the birds shown were conspicuous. It is true that here and there a bird with a washed out appearance to its feather might be seen, but in many cases the buffs showed that beautiful mellow tone of feather which adds so much to the beauty and finish of any bird; and this is a step in the right direction. In the crestbreds many specimens were noticeable for the width as well as length of the individual head feathers, and this was combined with fulness, or density. What is referred to here as density has to do with quantity. There are crestbreds with length of head feather, and they have plenty of lashing to boot; but it is when one comes to test one of the full, long, dense ones, that the "clothing" is revealed to perfection. Mr. T. Taylor is to be congratulated upon securing the Society's champion trophy in this section with his grand young crest, "King Edward." This bird was first awarded special for best crest or crestbred over Mr. Roberts' wonderful crestbred, "Blackpool Wonder"—a close race decided on condition as the turning point, and then, after prolonged discussion, the judges awarded him the cup. We congratulate Mr. Taylor on his popular and deserved win. Indeed his comrades congratulated him on all hands. In the midst of congratulations on the general quality of the section, one feels bound to turn aside and note the regrettable falling off in yellows, for these in no way compared, in point of merit, with the buffs.

The International Border Contest.

The Border classes held two teams of winners, and some beautiful little gems, so stylish in action and manner that they fairly took the visiting public's heart by storm. Some keen comments were expressed by not a few—at times both amusing and instructive. The splendid entry of 224 exhibits faced Mr. J. S. Wilson (Workington), which must have been very gratifying to him, and must also have been very trying to get through in such a limited space of time. This being the International contest between the Scottish Club and the English and Welsh Clubs, was the reason of so many champions coming together to do battle for their respective countries. We were a little astonished to find only a paltry six members upholding the cause of poor Auld Scotland, but what they lost in numbers was well balanced by the high quality of the exhibits brought forward by them, and they won comfortably. We are not quite sure of the total points of each club, as some of the members may have neglected to mark their entry forms, but hope to see the exact statement shortly. The most prominent on the Scottish side were Messrs. Bennet, Patterson, Brown, Arnot and Jamieson, Hislop and McVittie, who, amongst them, carried away nine of the firsts, the remaining seven being won by Messrs. Jenkins, Poole, Roberts, Dixon, and Thompson. The medal for best Border was won by a rare clear buff hen shown by Mr. Jenkins, all the way from Swansea. The Novice medal went to a grand buff foul cock, shown by Mr. G. Hislop (Stirling), which we greatly admired, and many thought it might have stood higher up in its class, if it was looking as well when being judged. We were unable to learn this, owing to Mr. Wilson having to leave early.

Three Fascinating Sections.

The Hybrids, British and Foreign sections all attracted an entry large in number, and of the very highest standard as regards quality. In the former the "Mule King," Mr. John Williams paid one of his scarce visits to the show-room (this season, at all events), and his wonderful examples of the Hybrid breeder's art were the admiration of all. His famous Goldie-Bullie lost the Cup by a "short head" only. Mr. C. J. Ward's Redpoll-Bullie is most promising, and the very light Siskin Mules of Mr. Paton provided a distinct novelty. We were sorry Mr. Maddison's example of this cross was absent. Competition was exceedingly keen—fancy the best clear Goldie out only getting a third! The Britishers were a remarkable collection from beginning to end, the strongest class of all, we thought, being that for Linnets. In this, by the way, we were astonished at the number of hens on view. We like pencilling certainly, but we also like it to be on a cock bird. The section special went to Mr. R. J. Howe's Hoopoe, a grand one. In the "Lark" class the judge apparently did not consult his schedule, as he put a Meadow Pipit 3rd, and this requires some stretch of imagination to be converted into a Lark (query, was the exhibitor indulging in one?). A lovely Albino Yellowhammer was put on view by Mr. Kell, but it had to be "wrong class," no place for rare-feathered birds being provided in the classification. The Foreign birds were a beautiful and fascinating assortment. Staged in a cosy and well-lighted spot, they attracted the admiring glances of every passer-by. In conclusion, we may say that the judges seemed, one and all, to have been successful, taking the classes on the whole, in placing the exhibits in their proper order of merit.

Mr. W. Vardy's Classes.

HEN (14): 1, Bennet, a rare good one, lovely texture of feather, well modelled head and front, nice wing carriage, well placed; 2, French, nice colour and quality; 3, Patterson, similar type to 1st, nice, jaunty style, in good trim; 4, McCredie, another good one, grand head and modelled front, A1 wings; vhc, Poole, very nice style and action; hc, Ellwood and Walker; c, Skeldon. BUFF CK (18): 1, Bennet, grand condition, quality and colour, nice front and well rounded; 2, Hawkins, fine colour, fair good quality and shape; 3, Patterson, model from head to tail, lovely texture of feather, many preferred to win; 4, Jenkins, shade stronger in head, but grand bird, fine quality and condition; vhc, Ellwood and Walker, nice type, down in condition; hc, Thompson, one we liked; c, Poole. BUFF HEN (19): 1, and B.F.C.C. medal, Jenkins, a grand one in every point, rare stylish swagger, free in neck, good filled back, wings laid on to perfection; 2, Hawkins, quite another stamp: good colour and quality; 3, Sheldon, better shaped head, rare good type, nice texture of feather; 4, Bennet, nice stamp, in grand trim, rare colour and quality; vhc, Patterson, nice size, grand head and neck, shade soft when judged; hc, Brown, well modelled; c, Jenkins, nice type and size. EVENLY MKD. YELL. (7): 1, 3, Brown, two lovely marked hens, true type markings, and wings to match, nice type and style, former best in eye; 2, Bennett, rare condition and well modelled, fails only in eye markings; 4, Whittaker, cinn. mark, good style; vhc, Thomas, good markings, but a shade larger; hc, Fuller; c, Arnott and Jamieson. EVEN BUFF (8): 1, spl., Patterson, lovely hen, true Border shape, like wax from head to tail, grand eyes and wings to correspond, finished to perfection, greatly admired; 2, Waters, grand style and symmetry, fine eyes and wings, good quality and condition, but we make her a five-point, being marked below rump; 3, Thomas, grand markings, and in fine condition; vhc, Fuller, grand markings, and in fair good trim; hc, McVittie, rare shape and nice size, very wild; c, Arnott and Jamieson. UNEVEN YELL. CK. (1): 1 Bennet, three-point, nice type, lovely quality, good marked eyes; 2, Sheldon, marked eyes, wings and across back, nice colour, very fair type and style; 3, Patterson, five-point, in rare trim, very stylish, lovely bloom, colour and quality; 4, Pennington, grand markings, style and quality, rare head and modelled buck, we liked; vhc, Walker, good head and nice size, in grand trim; hc, Roberts; c, Sincock. UNEVEN YELL. HEN (9): 1, Poole, lovely shape and style, a gem all over for colour, quality and condition, marked wing and neck; 2, Patterson, five-pointed, nicely modelled head and front, good colour and quality; 3, Arnott and Jamieson, another good one, nice balanced markings, lovely head and carriage, we liked; 4, Bennet, nice size, good colour and quality, seemed a shade dull to-day; vhc, Cubby, good markings and type; hc, Brownlie; c, Jenkins. UNEVEN BUFF CK. (10): 1, Roberts, marked eyes and wing, good markings and condition, nice type; 2, Whittaker, heavily marked, nice head and back, very fair condition; 3, Brown, grand type, nicely modelled, just a shade dirty, or he might have won; 4, Pearsou, five-point, in grand trim, lovely condition; vhc, c, Plaskett Bros.; hc, Patterson. UNEVEN MKD. HEN (15): 1, Dixon, grand markings, very stylish front, in grand bloom, like wax; 2, Patterson, five-pointed, fails in eyes, grand quality, condition of the best; 3, Poole, nice style, and jaunty head carriage, well modelled frout; 4, Ellwood and Walker, cinn. mark, good markings, lovely bloom, very stylish; vhc, McCredie, grand stamp, lovely head and feather; hc, Hislop; c, Pearson. TICKED YELL. (5): 1, Bennet, full headed hen, grand colour, feather of good quality, just a wee soft when taking notes; 2, Thompson, hen, marked eye and head, good model all over, grand quality, very tight in feather; 3, Patterson, cock, marked on rump, lovely colour and quality, rare stylish head, and as round as could be desired; 4, Brown, hen, marked on eye, nice type and very free head, good back; vhc, Jenkins. TICKED BUFF (15): 1, Thompson, cock, ticked on head, lovely colour, type A1, rare style; good back and wings; 2, Patterson, hen, ticked wing and breast, nice size and in grand condition; 3, Bennet, cock, ticked on neck, lovely sheen, nice type and quality; 4, McCreedie, ticked side of head, well modelled back and front, grand wing carriage; vhc, Hislop, novice medal winner, a rare good one, we liked, true Border all over, beautiful colour, style and conditiou; hc, Hopper Bros., another good one; c, Rowell. GREEN OR YELL. CK. (14): 1, 2, Bennet, good ones, nice shade of green all through, true type, well staged, and in grand trim; 3, Patterson, good in every respect, must have been a close race; 4, Jeukins, good colour and pencilling, just a shade down in condition; vhc, Arnott and Jamieson, yet another good one, proper shade of green; hc, Brownlie; c, Cubby, grand class. HEN (8): Bennet, grand hen, lovely shaped head, good modelled front, true grass-green shade, closely pressed by 2, Brown, cinn. hen, in spanking trim, a real model all over, beautiful colour, quality and condition; 3, Jenkins, good shape, nice style and quality; 4, Patterson, good one, nice style and front, true shade; vhc, Arnott and Jamieson, good type, quality, colour and markings, a shade unsteady, which might tell against her; hc, Hadwin; c, Amos. BUFF GREEN CK. (5): 1, Amos, fairly good in shape, fine colour and quality; 2, Cubby, cinn., fine type, in proper trim, feather of very fine texture, a model all over; 3, Arnott and Jamieson, grand shade of green, very fine colour and quality, well pencilled; 4, Hadwin, larger, good shade of green; 5, Taylor, wrong class (yellow green). HEN (10): 1, Bennet, a good one, nice size, grand type, colour and quality, in the pink of condition, well pencilled below; 2, Hislop, one of the best buff cinn. hens out this season, lovely shape, very stylish head, beautiful modelled back and wings, a treat; 3, Arnott and Jamieson, grand texture of feather, good markings all through, nice head, wings, well laid on; 4, vhc, Cubby, cinn. another good one, in the pink of condition, well modelled back and head; hc, McVittie, good type; C, Woodman.

Mr. G. E. Weston's Classes.

HYBRIDS, CLEAR, ETC. (12): 1, 3, hc, J. Williams, a clinking trio, the celebrated Goldfinch-Bullfinch leading, as big a wonder as ever, astonishing size and colour, and in lovely bloom, perfect picture, only lost the Cup for best in show after a stern fight with "King Edward," the noted young Crest, 3rd, the champion clear, about the best out to-day, grand size and shape, lovely blaze, wax-like condition, worth an equal first; 2, vhc, C. J. Ward, beautiful Redpoll-Bullfinch leading, also candidate for equal first, all there for size and shape, in grand condition, singing like a top, with another month this rarity should want betting, only a "baby" at present; vhc, the well-known Linnet-Bullfinch, a clinker; 4, Miss Reeves, undoubtedly the best Bramble-Chaffinch seen to date, in lovely condition, shows the cross to perfection, and seems to point to many previous impostors having been seen on the bench; c, Arrighi, another grand Goldfinch-Bullfinch. VAR. ETC. (10): 1, 2, 3, J. Williams, another hot trio, the noted light Linnet-Can. leading, a beauty all over, fine size and shape; 2nd, lightly-marked Greenie-Can. Jonque, hot colour, fine condition; 3rd, five-pointed Jonque Goldie-Can, looking lovely, marvellous colour and quality, grand size and shape, all staged in A1 style; 4, c, Paton, leader head and neck mkd. Siskin-Can., small, but apparently a yellow cock, lovely quality, shows cross well, pleasing exhibit; latter same cross, very lightly mkd, apparently a yellow hen; vhc, Arrighi, Edwards, two very nice light Goldfinch-Cans.; hc, Arrighi. DARK (19): 1, hc, J. Williams, rare big Linnet-Can, rattling substance and style, rich, sound colour, well marked, in beautiful trim; 2, Goodfellow, very fine Jonque Goldie-Can, beauty for size and shape, full of colour, polished like plate glass; 3, Watson, equally good buff Goldie-Can, again excellent substance and shape, tight as wax in condition, big, rich face, fine colour all over; 4, W. J. Taylor, Jonque Siskin, fine specimen, well built, stylish, sound and rich in colour, well marked all over, grand condition; vhc, Davey, nice Redpoll-Can; vhc, Todd and Son, very smart Greenie-Can; c, H. L. Williams, a very strong class, some good ones out in the cold. BRIT. GOLDFINCH (13): 1, hc, King, leader a beautifully shaped, stylish bird, tight as a drum in condition, carries a fine bloom, expansive, rich blaze, grand wing bars and tan; 2, Stanger and Herdman, one we liked, cleaner colour contrasts than winner, well marked all over, face of nice size and beautiful tone of crimson, only just loses for tightness of feather; 3, Hurst, our old friend "Pride of Liverpool," undoubtedly a grand Finch, but not looking so well as we have seen him in past years, inclined to "gutter" in the under-blaze, for colour, and especially tan, hard to beat; 4, Carter, the widest and most expansive blaze of any, grand, cobby body, well tanned and marked, rare colour, well-known winner in fresh hands we think, looking slack and tired, needs a "vacation"; vhc, Davidson and Boyd, excellent all round Finch, hardly clear enough in colour contrasts; c, Axe, evidently a good brilliant-coloured Goldie, but quite "soft" until handled, another candidate for the "rest-cure." BULLFINCH (12): 1, Carter, a beauty, nice size, thick-set, shapely body, fine colour all through, grand cap and bars, finished off with a lovely bloom; 2, Allison, shade smaller, yet a clinker for type, hold well-cut cap, grand back and bars, rich breast, tight in plumage; 3, Walsh, fine stamp of bird, excellent polish, trifle paler in colour; 4, vhc, Woods, two birds of the right stamp, very hot in colour, steady and shapely, should mou't out well; hc, Edwards; c, G. Taylor. GREENFINCH (19): 1, R. J. Howe, the well-known champion, right ahead again to-day for size, quality and colour, in A1 condition, wants a lot of stopping; 2, Goodfellow, a regular blaze of fire compared with winner, and a fine stamp of bird to hoot, excellent size and shape, coat like satin; 3, Hurst, another beautiful non-fed, close up, very fine bird for shape and substance, lovely quality of feather; 4, Maddison, yet another clinker, rare good size and shape, rich tone of colour, fine wings and tail, seemed inclined to go a little soft; vhc, Pickles, also a beautiful Greenie; hc, Paton; c, Walsh; a very hot lot. No. 17, a curious, almost silver-coloured example, had to be "wrong-classed" as a rare-feathered bird. CHAFF, OR BRAMBLEFINCH (11): 1 R, J. Howe, charming coloured Chaffinch, for style, shape and markings a real gem, carries a bloom like a peach; 2, Mrs. J. Turner smashing good Bramblefinch, all there for size and shape, big, bold, steady fellow, grand colour and markings, well put down; 3, Walsh, another lovely Chaffinch, equal to winner for size, shape and style, hardly the same fascinating tone of colour, well marked, grandly polished; 4, Arrighi, very smart and stylish Bramble, beautiful colour and spangling, a little more size and would need beating; vhc, McVay, very large and smart Chaffinch; hc, G. Taylor; c, Reeks. LINNET (25): The grandest lot seen for many a long day: 1, Walsh a bouncer for size, rare big one, Norwich type, sound, nutty colour throughout, wonderfully well pencilled all over, tight as wax in feather, and grandly polished, a real flyer, apparently a new face in this fancier's team; 2, Arrighi, another stormer, right out of the ordinary, giant for size, Norwich type, fine tone of colour, bold, stylish bird very nicely marked, in splendid condition, much improved since last we saw it, only just beaten in depth of colour and pencilling; 3, Cassidy, another wonderfully big, finely built Linnet, grand head and chest, a mass of work all over, deep, sound colour, close up, a little lack of smoothness in neck feather told against it; 4, Hurst, well-known winner, sweet bird, slimmer built beautifully coned body, very rich, sound colour, excellent pencilling, all quality; vhc, Dunn, also a well-known winner, and a really grand exhibit; hc, Stanger and Herdman; c, French. SISKIN, ETC. (15): 1, 2, Hurst, a very fine Siskin leading, big and shapely, beautifully laced on flanks and cap, lovely even colour, well marked all over, latter an enormous mealy Redpoll, exceptional colour and quality for such a monster, splendid markings, inclined at times to show feathers at thighs; 3, Mallory, excellent Lesser, hot run for colour sound all over, grandly pencilled, good bib, in fine trim; 4, vhc, Arrighi, real fine Twite for colour, shape and style, very well marked a wee small, latter another excellent Siskin; hc, Prosser; c, Master Hutchison. A.O.S. SEEDEATER (13): 1, Axe, the well-known Hawfinch, a gem for markings, big, clean cut bib, hot colour, well polished, steady as a statue; 2, Walsh wonderfully good Yellowhammer, pressed winner very hard, rich and pure in colour, dense and clean in markings on head and cheeks and honest markings too, lovely condition; 3, Crockatt, another rare good Hawfinch, A1 at all points, loses only in bloom; 4, McVay, extra large and good Snow Bunting, grand feather, a little tender on its feet, or might have gone up; vhc, Hurst, again a fine Hawfinch, a well-known champion of the past, we fancy; hc, Fenwick; c, Dippie. No. 1, wrong classed, Kell., a charming Albino (yellow pink-eyed) Yellowhammer, perfection. BLACKBIRD, ETC. (13): 1, Axe, topping Song Thrush, large, very shapely and polished, beautifully mooned, in the pink; 2, Howe, equally good Blackbird, extra fine beak and eeres, big, bold fellow, dense in colour, shines like satin; 3, Wildsmith and Hawkins, another candidate for an equal first, rattling good Starling, steady, fine size and shape, mass of correct spangling, coat like glass; 4, Schoeder, very large, bold, well-conditioned Thrush vhc, Bage; hc, McWilliam; c, McGhan. A.O.S. LARGE SOFTBILL (6): 1, spl, 2, Howe, beautiful Hoopoe leading, fine crest, good colour and condition, exceedingly well and clearly marked; 2nd, equally fine Great Grey Shrike, steady, lovely condition; 3, Mrs. Woodhouse, Waxwing, excels in size, substance and depth of body colour, fine crest and wing and tail tippings; 4, Crockatt, close up with another smashing good Waxwing, has rather the best of it in the wax-like wing and tail appendages, but loses in size and body colour; vhc, Wildsmith and Hawkins, another charming Hoopoe, very fine head, loses only in clearness of wing barring, possibly a hen; W. C. Walsh, fine albino Blackbird, we hardly saw how this could be reckoned another species (vide class heading). SMALL (5): 1 2, Howe, gem of a Blue-headed Wagtail leading, in perfect trim, exceptional markings and colour; 2nd, beautiful Treecreeper, very well mottled, clean, silvery breast; 3, Walsh, rare good Wryneck, rich colour, beautifully marked all over; 4, Wildsmith and Hawkins, another very fine Tree Creeper, lost by a shade in breast colour; vhc, Montague, sweet Crested Tit. LARK (10): 1, Allaway, stormer for size and shape, very clean and distinct in marking, tight as a drum in feather, wee bit nervous; 2, McVay, another hot one for substance, very steady, shows "fluff" nicely, close up, but not quite so densely pencilled; 3, Walsh, real good Meadow Pipit, nice markings and shape, in fine bloom, probably ought to have been "wrong classed," as afterwards we noticed class heading simply said."Lark"; 4, Bage, another topping Skylark, lovely shape and markings, well staged; vhc, hc, Lawson; c, Smith. FOREIGN PARROTS. ETC (12): 1, hc, F. Howe, splendid Chattering Lory leading, beauty for colour and condition, a rare exhibit; 2, Tyson, the well-known Macaw, grand specimen; 3, Hollins; 4, McDowell, two more very fine Parrots, lovely condition, latter one of the best Greys we have met; vhc, Porteous, fine King, trifle down in breast colour; vhc, Ledger; c, Mackenzie. AVADAVATS, ETC. (12): 1, 2, 3, vbc, F. Howe, beautiful team, in the best of condition and staged to perfection, Diamond Sparrows, Spice birds, St. Helena Waxbills and an Orange Bishop; 4, Hollins, lovely pair Mannikins, in good form; hc, Sugden; c, Petterson. A.O.S. SEEDEATERS (15): 1, F. Howe, very beautiful Violet-eared Waxbill, perfect living gem; 2, Porteous, excellent Parrot Finch, fine colour and condition; 3, Arrighi, his noted Siberian Goldie, grand size, colour and blaze, looked a wee soft at times, we thought; 4, vhc, hc, Pickles, grand pair of Bicheno Finches leading, fascinating little things, excellent long-tailed Grass Finches and Masked Finches following; vhc, Davidson and Boyd, yet another fine Siberian Goldie; hc, Walton; c, Hollins. INSECTIV. (7): 1, DeVon, satin Bower bird, rare exhibit, badly shown, close pressed by 2, Brown, the noted Mynah, in faultless condition; 3, hc, Pickles, beautiful maroon and superb Tanagers, former a gem, hard on leader's heels; 4, Howe, fine Golden-fronted Fruit Sucker, now in lovely order, unfortunately has defective claws; vhc, Porteous, another charming Superb; c, Taylor.

THORNTON.

Annual show was held in the Public Hall, on 14th Dec. The entries in the cage bird sections showed a slight decrease on last year's total, but what was lacking in numbers was made up for in quality. The Society has a grand list of patrons and patronesses, who greatly help the excellent committee and encourages them to make this annual fixture a great success. The genial President, Mr. Alex. Leslie, is always on the move, seeing to the comfort of the exhibits as well as of the visitors. He is ably assisted by a strong committee. In Mr. James Moyes, the Secretary, the Society have the right man at the helm; he gets through his work with ease and promptitude. The judging of the Scotch Fancies was in the able hands of Mr. James Black (Arbroath), who got through his work in plenty of time. All other varieties were judged by Mr. John Goodfellow (Edinburgh), who had a good day's work, but he handled them in his usual able manner. Their awards were well received. The show was well patronised by visitors during the day.

CARDIGAN.

Some cage bird classes were offered in conjunction with the Fat Stock Show, which was held (the twenty-fourth annual) on December 11th. Mr. Bowker (Nantwich) judged. It was a very well managed fixture, and Mr. Morgan Jones proved himself an A1 secretary. NORWICH: 1, Portman; 2 3, vhc, Davies. YORKS.: 1, 2, Portman; 3, vhc Davies. FOR.: 1, Tyler, Amazon Parrot; 2, Griffiths, Amazon Parrot; 3, Jones, Grey Parrot.

PICKERING.

This fixture was held on December 12th. It was not, however, the success of previous shows in this old-fashioned Yorkshire town. The arrangements for the comfort and safety of the birds were excellent. The exhibits were staged by themselves in a comfortable room upstairs. The secretary, Mr. John Wallis, under difficult circumstances, did well; he was ably assisted by his good wife. The committee, who worked hard, will do well to remember another year that it pays to get some classes guaranteed and then to boom the show by advertising. Mr. T. J. Ambrose judged.

TWITTERINGS.

It is once more our pleasant duty to acknowledge the seasonable greetings and good wishes, almost overwhelming in number, that have reached us from readers of CAGE BIRDS. It gladdens us to know our journal has made the world-wide host of friends to which these greetings bear evidence, and to one and all we tender our heartfelt thanks, and reciprocate to the full the kind wishes showered upon us.

A Happy Christmas and a Prosperous New Year to all our readers.

For Mr. Bald's 10s. 6d. special, the donor is not competing, writes Mr. Walter Neilson, sec. Broxburn Show.

Shields C.B.S. next open show will be held on October 30 and 31, 1908, writes Mr. Wm. Duke, the secretary.

I find CAGE BIRDS very good for advertising in, having had more orders for birds than I wanted.—G. DEAR (Hythe).

Will Mr. Terry, Junr., of Gravesend, writes Mr. J. C. Wilmot (Bedford), please send me his address, which I have mislaid.

The Dudley and Dis. C.B.S. are holding an open show of Canaries on January 29th and 30th, writes Mr. J. J. Mullett, sec.

Ilkeston Show report, Class 16, No. 2, should have read 1st, C. and H. Twine, writes Messrs. C. and H. Twine (Hucknall Torkard).

The Reading and Dist. C.B.S., writes Mr. G. A. Charles, sec., intend holding an open show in November next, probably on the 18th.

Kindly notify that I have changed my address from 92, Hollings Road, Bradford, to 16, Lytton Road, Bradford, writes Mr. Walter Crabtree.

The ordinary meeting of the Oldham and District C.B.S. will not be held on Dec. 24th, owing to the festive season, writes Mr. A. Ackroyd, the sec.

I had so many replies to my advertisement, writes Mr. F. Horler (Bristol), that it would be impossible to answer all of them. I must thank CAGE BIRDS.

OBITUARY.

Mr. J. McKenzie (Stirling).

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. Hugh Moreland, that I have to inform your wide circle of readers of the sudden death of Mr. John McKenzie, of Stirling, on 6th Dec., at the age of 47, after only a day's illness. He was a member of the Border Fancy Club, the Falkirk and District Cage Bird Society, and the Stirling Ornithological Society. He had his birds entered for the Bannockburn Show, where the news of his death cast quite a gloom over those present, as he was widely respected in the district. There was a large turnout of fanciers and friends at the funeral. Much sympathy is felt for the widow and family for their sad bereavement.

In the article on "Budgerigar Breeding for Pleasure and Profit," which appeared on page 503 in our Christmas Number, our printers made the period of incubation to appear as 10 days; this should have been 16 days.

I have retired my champion singing Linnet from all singing contests, writes Mr. H. Allen (Leeds), and henceforth he shall only be used for teaching young ones. Visitors, as usual, will be welcome to hear him at any time.

At Lurgan Show, writes Mr. McCollum, the sec., class 34, No. 9, the property of Messrs. Sheridan and Fry, should have been marked "challenge cup" in place of class 36, which was a novice class, and entered in mistake.

Diss Show, report of the Amateur Classes, credits Parker with 1st in Yellow Cock Class and Parke 4th in Variegated Buff, writes Mr. A. Parke (Lowestoft). This should read Yellow Cock, 1st Parke, Clear Buff, etc., 4th, Parke.

Kidderminster Show report gives Hingley as 1st and 2nd in the Brit. (amalgamated) class, write Messrs. Potter and Bracey (Broseley Wood, Shropshire); this should be Porter and Bracey, we having won with our Bullfinch and Hawfinch.

Hucknall Torkard C.B.S. are holding their annual members' show and supper in the Coffee Tavern on January 4th next, writes Mr. A. A. Asbury, the sec.; also we have fixed the date for our annual open show for November 13th and 14th next.

The recent Burton-on-Trent C.B.S. Show was the finest held in the town for a number of years, we hear, and a big success, so that the officials mean to go on a larger scale another year. Some of the best birds in England were present.

Report says Mr. W. Cairns won gold medal at Kilmarnock Scottish Crest Club Show for best 1907 crest-bred cock or hen, with his clear crest-bred cock, whereas I won the medal with my 1907 green crest-bred hen, writes Mr. John McLay (Kirkintilloch).

The following gentlemen have consented to act as judges at Bathgate Show on January 11th, writes Mr. J. Livingstone:—Crest, Crest-Bred and Norwich, Mr. A. Chalmers (Kirkintilloch); Borders, Mr. Duncan (Coldstream); Mules, British and Foreign, Mr. Laidlaw (Langholm) and Mr. J. D. Leigh (Warrington).

The balance sheet of the recent open show of the Penzance and District F.A. (duly audited) reaches us from the hon. sec., Mr. J. Pearce Sampson, and proves to be a highly satisfactory document, the excellent sum of £7 17s. remaining in hand, testifying to the excellent management and success of this fixture.

Dunfermline, January 1st and 2nd; splendid prize list, numerous specials. Schedules from R. Bowie, The Gusset House, Dunfermline.—(Advt.)

I won 3rd prize with my Foul Green Cock at the late Wigan Show, December 6th and 7th, writes Mr. J. Sykes (Halifax), and I see no name is stated in your report.

I thank all fanciers for their support in making this our record show, of 623 entries, writes Mr. R. Gadsden, sec., Hamilton Cadzou Oaks. Specials are being sent out as early as possible.

Mr. S. H. May's British Goldfinch, 1st and extra specials Bristol, 1st and special Stratford-on-Avon, 1st and special Diss, has been purchased by Mr. P. Harris, Bedford Square, London.

We have this week received two advertisements from a Mr. Ramsay and a Mr. Reynolds, both of which were without addresses. If the senders will communicate, we will insert same next week.

I will give as a Christmas present, writes Mr. H. H. Cooper (Luton), a 4-lb. tin of "Colorine," carriage paid, to the sender of the first order opened every day during Xmas week, for a 1-lb tin or over.

I took 3rd prize at Northampton Show in the class for Blackbirds, writes Mr. F. Smith (Northampton), and this being my first time showing, I thought I would let you know. My prize card was on Mr. Howe's cage, which contained a Blackbird (mine was a Thrush).

Mr. C. Houlton, we hear, is one of the judges elected for the Liverpool Amalgamated Show on New Year's Day, to be held at Birkenhead, and he will also share the honour of placing the cards at the Green Canary Association Club Show in February with Mr. J. C. Barnes.

Report of Cockermouth Show states in York buff-marked class "H. C. Brown, Whitehaven and Egremont, winner." My bird was first at Egremont; 2nd Whitehaven. I also won the gold medal at Whitehaven for most points gained with three birds by a member; also special for most points in show by a member.—W. Irwin (Harrington).

TWO CHRISTMAS COMPETITIONS FOR READERS.

OUR NORWICH PLAINHEAD CANARY PLATE.

Where do they differ?

In connection with the art supplement accompanying last week's Christmas Number, entitled "Norwich Plainhead Canaries," we offer (under the following conditions), a prize of 10s. 6d. to the reader who correctly names the point in which the two suggested models differ. The opinion of one of our leading judges of the variety will be taken, and the competition will be decided on his reply. Postcards only must be used, and they must reach us not later than First Post, Monday, December 30th. The postcards will be placed by an independent person in a suitable receptacle, be well shuffled, and then drawn out, when the first one on which is written the correct solution (that of the afore-mentioned judge) will win a Cash Prize of 10s. 6d.

OUR FRONTISPIECE.

A Chance for Birdie Artists.

Our Frontispiece last week was designed to be coloured. We offer a prize of half-a-guinea (10/6) for the best attempt at colouring the same which reaches us from one of our readers on or before Monday, December 30th next. The medium to be employed is left to the discretion of the competitor. The finished attempt should be packed flat, or rolled in a tube, whorever possible.

In both Competitions the Editor's decision shall be final.

"CAGE BIRDS" GRAND XMAS LITERARY COMPETITION.

EIGHT GUINEAS IN PRIZES.

At the time we held our Foreign Bird Essay Competition, some few months ago, many requests reached us to extend that competition to the other sections of the cage bird hobby. We could not conveniently do so then, but we have now decided to hold a Christmas Competition to meet the wishes of readers, and the Editor offers four One Guinea Cash Prizes under the following conditions:—

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on any topic relating to Canaries. Competitors may deal with any one variety (such as the Norwich), or more than one variety (such as the Norwich and the Crest), and questions relating thereto, or may take the general management, breeding, etc., of Canaries from either the domestic or exhibition side.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on any topic relating to British Birds. The habits, appearance, and management, etc., of any one particular species may be discussed, or they may be dealt with collectively, or in groups, as may suit the knowledge of the essayist.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on Mule or Hybrid Breeding, whether in cage or aviary, and between any species of bird (either British or Foreign).

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay written from the aviarist's point of view, embracing the fitting up, stocking, and general management of an aviary, whether of Canaries, British Birds, or Foreign Birds, or a suitable combination.

An original Painting of birds, value Four Guineas, will be awarded to the best essay, in the opinion of the judges, out of all the sections.

Cash in Exchange for your Experiences.

There must be thousands among the readers of Cage Birds with much knowledge stored away in their heads upon the above subjects. Utilise the Christmas holidays to put that knowledge on paper for the benefit of your fellow bird-keepers, and in exchange for your experiences there may be a cash prize waiting that will help to buy some bird or other acceptable thing you are a-wanting. Turn your spare moments to account.

The Closing Date, remember is January 20th next.

RULES.

Each essay must be clearly written (or typed), on one side of paper only.

The length is left to competitors, but essays should not contain less than 1,000 words wherever possible.

Faults of spelling and grammar will not be counted against any essay, practical utility, interest, and simplicity being the chief essentials.

No name or address must be put on any essay, but each must be signed with a nom-de-plume, the sender's name and address being attached on a separate sheet of paper.

The Editor's decision will be final. Competent assistance will be called in to aid him in arriving at his decision.

All essays sent in (and any accompanying sketches or photographs) become the property of Cage Birds, but all which are published (over and above the winning essay) will be duly paid for according to their worth to us.

IMPORTANT HOLIDAY NOTICE.

ADVERTISERS, SECRETARIES and CONTRIBUTORS generally should bear in mind that A L MATTER intended to appear in NEXT WEEK'S NUMBER OF "CAGE BIRDS," must reach our offices not later than FIRST POST MONDAY NEXT, DECEMBER 23rd. Owing to the awkward date the Xmas holidays fall on this year, it is imperative this must be STRICTLY ADHERED TO. Matter arriving after Monday's first post cannot possibly be dealt with that week.—EDITOR.

We hear from Mr. Sheffield, the secretary, that Coventry Show, on Dec. 27th next, will, after all, be held under the rules of the Cage Bird Union. They are hoping for a bumping entry from fanciers, and will accept any entries that are posted at once.

We are giving a medal, value 7s. 6d., for the best 4th bird in Wibsey Show, on Boxing Day, and Mr. J. Sandiford is giving a medal for the best Coloured bird fed with his Colour food. These are in addition to the 1st of specials I sent you a week ago, writes Mr. E. W. Johnson, the hon. sec.

Jarrow and Dist. C.B.F.S. and South Shields C.B.S. have combined together to hold a One Day Members' Show, writes Mr. J. T. Carrick, in the Eureka Hotel, Frederick Street, South Shields, on January 2nd; judge, Mr. Shepherd, of Newcastle. Members of both societies please rally up and give it a bumper, and visitors please come in good numbers. The joint secretaries are myself and Mr. W. Duke.

It is to be hoped, writes "Well-wisher," that the St. Helen's Show, to be held on January 10th and 11th, will receive good support. It is nearly three years now since the society held its last open show, and if this one gets successful support, it will pave the way for the holding of an annual open show at this time of year. It is, I think, a suitable time, between the Xmas holidays and the Palace Show. The committee and members are all hoping for a generous entry, and all care and attention will be bestowed on exhibits sent.

The 237 entries at Reading Show we thought most satisfactory, considering the fact that the Society had been in a moribund state for four years—no show held since 1901—writes the sec., Mr. G. A. Charles. We propose holding an open show next year, as the support this year incites us in this direction. There were a large number of really valuable specials, which, no doubt, materially increased entries, being for most points in classes. We had success, too, in selling many birds at the show. We had a good gate, and no doubt this would have been better, but, unfortunately, the Reading Dog Show came on same day. The committee are much encouraged at the result.

The total entries for our Gateshead Show were 1217, writes Mr. T. Taylor, the sec., and the gate was the largest on record. The sales also came out well, and again constituted a record. So that, taken all round, the show proved a huge success. At one time on Saturday it was only with some difficulty that anyone could get about the hall, so full of fanciers was it. The following were a few of the visitors: Messrs. Cobb (Leeds), Wright (York), Dunn (Portobello), McWilliams (Carlisle), Porteous (Hexham), Swan and Riseborough (Sunderland), Duke (South Shields), Roberts, junr. (Blackpool), Currah and Son (Gosforth). Marshall (Blyth), Dixon (Bedlington), and a great many others with familiar faces, but whose names escape me.

At Forfar.

At Forfar Show, writes Mr. John McKinnon, Class 132 ought to read "Evenly-Marked Yellow or Buff Cock," and Class 133 ditto hen.

The Blackbird's Christmas.

A Blackbird's nest, according to a daily contemporary, has just been discovered in a hedge at Castle Cary, Somerset, with the old bird busily engaged hatching out three eggs.

The Border Fancy C.C.

The annual general meeting of Border F.C.C. will be held in Corn Exchange Halls, Grassmarket, Edinburgh, on 1st January, 1908, at 11.30 a.m., writes Mr. M. Jamieson, sec. Business: Balance sheet 1907, election of office bearers, fixing time of next contest, motion that no club member accept more than two engagements as judge in one show season.

A Noted Hawfinch.

I have been a reader of your most valuable paper, Cage Birds, writes Mr. Jas. Almond (Rishton), for four years, and I have always found it a great help. The bird with which I won a Cage Birds' competition prize was my noted Hawfinch (Toby) He is a hand-reared bird and has yet to face defeat. He has won first and special at the following shows: Burnley, Gt. Harwood, Hoyland, Blackburn, Preston, Blackpool, Bolton, and Wigan.

The Scottish International.

An error has crept into the prize list for our show, writes Mr. Jas. Winter, the sec. Class 78 reads: "Any Variety Canary Limit, 15s., classes 1 to 63 excluded"; whereas it should be classes 1 to 59 excluded. Also please intimate that I have received the following two specials since the issue of prize lists: 5s. for the winner of Gibson Cup; 5s. for the winner of Foreign Bird Trophy; presented by Mr. R. Eastman (president Glasgow and West of Scotland O.S.).

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL

Price ONE SHILLING. Post Free 1/2.

Superbly illustrated by the Champion Canary Artist Mr. H. NORMAN EVERY BIRD DEPICTED IS A VERITABLE MODEL, and shows the breeder what to aim for. Some idea of the popularity of this Practical Manual may be gathered from the fact that under the title of "The British Canary" it has passed its Third Edition, entering upon a Fourth Edition of 5,000 copies under the new title of "House's Canary Manual."

MR. HOUSE has thoroughly revised and brought this work up-to-date and incorporated a chapter on the "Roller or Singing Canary."

F. CARL, 154, Fleet St., London, EC.

A Jaunt from Liverpool.

A good number of the Liverpool fanciers have decided to make up a saloon party to the Scottish National Show, writes Mr. S. Hadwin. The fare by the L.N.W. and Midland route is 8s. 6d.; added to this is 20s. for a saloon, which amount would be divided amongst those going. To the Fanciers about here the fact that the Greens are at the Scottish International will be a great attraction. Will any Fanciers wishing to join the party please communicate with me as soon as possible, so that the necessary arrangements can be made? The train leaves Liverpool on the evening of December 31st, returning on the night of New Year's Day. All communications in connection with the above to be addressed to me at 23, Pembroke Place, Liverpool.

OUR GREAT COUPON SCHEME.

We are offering at certain Shows this season Extra Prizes to the value of 10/-, 6/-, 4/-.

A list of these Shows is given below. Intending Competitors must apply to us for a Coupon to fasten on their Entry Forms. Every Coupon bought from us will entitle one bird to compete for our prizes. The price of the Coupon is 6 ., and only birds entered for our prizes will be eligible. Prizes are offered for the Best First Prize Bird, Best Second Prize and Best Third Prize.

The Exhibitor who buys the most Coupons from us will have half the cost of them returned to him.

The Secretary who secures the most Entries for our Competition will be given £1 for his Society's funds.

Exhibitors must note that coupons will not in themselves entitle them to exhibit.

CANARIES.

A Bird with a Chill.

J. Clarke.—Try the following which I think will put your bird right, if not gone too far: Fresh daily in the drinking water fifteen drops of syrup of tolu, six drops of paregoric and three drops of acetate of ammonia. Let him have this for a week, then drop the acetate of ammonia and substitute six drops of good old Scotch whiskey, and let him have this on alternate days for a fortnight.

A Bird that Mopes.

E. Newman.—Let the first bird you mention have in two tablespoonfuls of water a piece of sulphate of soda about the size of a small pea twice in one week. The following week let it have fresh daily in drinking water five drops of tincture of steel and five drops of tincture of quinine. You may also give it occasionally a piece of sponge cake about the size of a walnut, over which put a few drops of sherry. 2. Rub a little vaseline on the legs a few times when the scaley covering you mention should come off easily.

Stuck in the Moult.

F.P.—I have known plenty of birds like yours that have stuck in the moult and have gone on all right. As you say yours is lively enough, I see no reason why this should not do the same. You may give it a tonic. Let it have in the drinking water on alternate days, for two or three weeks, five drops of tincture of gentian and five drops of tincture of quinine. You may also give it twice a week a half teaspoonful of egg food, to which add five drops of Parrish's Chemical Food. 2. Give this bird a little boiled milk sop out of which squeeze nearly all the milk and then add as much aromatic confection as will stand on a threepenny piece. Do not give any rape seed during this treatment.

A Hard Breather.

Fifer.—Let your hen have in the drinking water fresh daily for four days, six drops of acetate of ammonia, after which let it have fifteen drops of syrup of tolu and six drops of paregoric every day for a week. This also must be given in the drinking water fresh daily. I think this will put her right.

Wholesale Loss of Feathers.

Anxious.—Your bird has evidently dropped into a false moult and I should recommend you to remove it to another room, when probably it may be checked. Let it have a small teaspoonful of egg food three times a week over which put six drops of Parrish's Chemical Food. See that it is hung in a place quite free from draughts and cover over at nights with a warm cloth.

Clinging to Side of Cage.

New Reader.—Let me know if your bird gets in the position you say it does only at roosting time. Or does it do it in the day time? I shall be better able to advise you if I know. In the meantime let it have in the drinking water every day for a week or ten days five drops of tincture of steel and five drops of tincture of quinine. Should you see any difference in it after a few days of this treatment, let me know when writing.

YORKSHIRES.

A Swollen Oil-Gland.

T.C.—Your feeding is all right except that you are using far more hemp seed than I think advisable. Stop the hemp and give half a teaspoonful of maw seed two or three times a week instead. Don't interfere with the oil gland, but put a pinch of Epsom salts in its drinking water fresh every morning for three days, taking the water away at night and returning it each morning. And for one week after that give in its water eight drops of syrup of buckthorn and 10 drops of whiskey and then for another week or ten days give 10 drops of Parrish's Chemical Food in the drinking water in place of the buckthorn and whiskey, when I think your bird will get all right again.

Crossing with Lancashires.

Stanley.—Yes, you can use the cross you name, but must be very careful what kind of bird you use. Let the bird be a cock bird, running it with a small typical tight feathered hen of the opposite colour. You will get the best results by this. But my own candid opinion is that it is not necessary or wise to use this cross as there are plenty of good big birds suitable for your purpose to be had as cheap as those you are thinking of getting, and that will give better results all round by a great deal. You will be a long time working out the objectionable points you will get by the cross you write about.

A Squeaking Specimen.

Helpless Novice.—Your feeding seems to be all right and from what you say I don't think there is anything seriously wrong with your bird. The squeaking noise it makes is due to nervousness. I have had birds myself that have been as sound as a bell, and that did not make this noise when I was outside the room, but as soon as I have entered begun to squeak. Had I been in your place I should have returned the bird, as you say it squeaked when you bought it. Still it is very annoying to hear every time you enter the birdroom.

CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS.

Answered by W. E. GREEVES.

Crests versus Plainheads.

"Silliw."—There is a decided difference between the two birds. The Crestbred being bred from one crested parent, has a large percentage of crest blood. The Norwich Plainhead has none. The exhibition points of the two birds are the extreme opposite, the Crestbred being a much larger bird, heavily feathered, with large well-arched head and heavy overhanging eyebrows. The Norwich Plainhead is short and tight in feather and should show no browing. I should recommend you to pair a Crest with a Crestbred, if you want to breed good Crests.

ROLLERS.

Breeding Questions.

Cis.—The very smallest cage I could recommend a breeding pair being kept in is 2 feet long; a 30 inch cage is, however, much better. It doesn't matter at all whether "medium class" or any other class of bird is being kept. Both cocks and hens should have the following mixture daily: best canary seed, three parts, summer rape seed two parts, by measure. On one day a week, give a good maker's mixed seed for a change; also, a little of a good prepared canary-bread (or egg and biscuit) and a pinch of maw seed can be occasionally offered, not both on the same day. A feed of rape seedlings now and again, or a little ripe, sweet apple, will complete a diet on which breeding stock will winter in grand condition (kept free from damp and draught), and come into breeding condition at the proper time.

Matters of Management.

J.S., Montreal.—I think you make a mistake in letting the birds remain too long in the small cages; they should have a spell now and again out in a larger cage. I don't like the two parts rape one canary mixture; I prefer 3 parts canary to 2 parts of rape, or else equal parts of each. They should certainly have the opportunity to take a little grit frequently; also have a pinch of maw, or a little lump of egg-bread, now and again. A great point is to keep them in a warm, equable temperature, quite free from draughts. The water must soon get foul, and you ought to brush out, or otherwise cleanse the interior of the small pots. Rollers and Hartz Canaries are fed the same. Norwich and Yorkshires would not hurt on the above diet; but plain canary would do for them, with some rape mixed in now and again.

A Moving Affair.

A Slater.—I have heard it said that the jar of traffic will addle eggs, but don't believe it myself. I bred birds in a room close to one of the main railway lines, and passing express and other trains shook the room all day and night, yet I had no epidemic of bad eggs, but very good luck, and this for several years. Anyway, you mustn't move your birds from the house into a cold bedroom now, or the probability is you will ruin them that is, unless you have a fire in, to make the temperature about the same as that of the living room. You could shift them when the warm weather of spring comes, and they would take no harm. Pleased you liked CAGE BIRDS so much; recommend it to your friends.

Roller Not Singing.

Cambrian.—Probably your bird has never thoroughly thrown off the effects of the moult. Try a course of rather higher feeding than usual. In addition to the ordinary canary and rape, give maw and mixed seeds and apple, etc., as advised "Cis" this week. A little egg-bread should be given daily, say, half-a-teaspoonful. You can make a splendid egg-bread by taking three tablespoonsful of finely crushed Osborne biscuits, and mixing with it two tablespoonsful of yolk of egg flake (get a quarter-pound of the latter, finest quality only, from an advertiser in CAGE BIRDS). Of this you should take the necessary quantity, and moisten it with 2 or 3 spots of Parrish's Chemical Food (from the chemist): don't add more, as it only wants to be just damp, not a pasty mass. This treatment should soon bring your own, or any other backward Roller, on song.

Another Backward Roller.

J.K.—Feed your bird as regards seed, etc., exactly as advised "Cis" this week, and for egg food and medicine, note reply to "Cambrian." You cannot do more than treat on these lines, and keep the bird cosy and warm (not stuffy hot, of course) I think a fortnight or so on the egg-bread and Parrish's food will make a great improvement in him. Try it, and see.

MISCELLANEOUS CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by "OLD JUDGE."

Feeding Hens.

Skewen.—"Feeders" or "Feeding Hens" are usually birds of a common kind which are paired up so that they may go to nest about the same time as the birds to whose progeny they are intended to act the part of foster-parents or "feeders." Many high-class birds are poor parents, particularly so Crests, Lancashires, and Belgians, and breeders of these varieties invariably use feeders, the eggs of the parents and foster-parents being changed a few days before they are due to hatch. This answers both your queries.

Will they Breed?

L. Burdon.—In April the birds you mention would only be eight months old. They doubtless would breed, but it would not be wise to let them do so. Birds ought to be at least ten months' old before they are put up for breeding. You can hardly expect strong healthy progeny from immature parents. Bide a wee, as our Scotch friends say. In breeding Canaries, as in many other things, it is often a case of "More haste, less speed."

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

A Nude Chaffinch.

Payn.—I find it difficult to account for the condition of your Chaffinch—there is nothing in your letter to guide me. Had he moulted when he became hare, or has he failed to moult? Are there some quills (stumps) remaining in the wings? Have you tested the cage for the presence of red-mite? How are you feeding? If you will give some particulars, including the above, I shall be most pleased to try and help you.

About Muling.

Silliw.—You can turn the two Linnets and two Goldfinches in with the Canaries during the winter if you like, providing the accommodation is sufficiently spacious; in fact, this will be a good plan. If you mean, however, that the Goldies have only been caged for the week (that is, very recently caught), then an element of risk might attach to the plan, as they might not thrive on the plain diet given to Canaries, and I should not recommend a lot of niger and hemp being given the latter, unless in an outdoor place, aviary or large flight, or in an indoor (cold room) aviary or flight. If non-house-moulted Finches they are hardly likely to be "up" for breeding before May comes in. The simplest plan is to use a two-compartment breeder, and give the couple the full run of this. When the hen commences to build, if the Finch interferes with the nest, put in the centre slide, and only let him in with the hen for a short time daily, either early morning, or in the evening. Even if he does not interfere, it is best to shut him off when she is laying and incubating, unless his harmless disposition is known, as egg-smashing is a common proclivity of the Goldie, and even the Linnet sometimes indulges in it, or pulls out the nest. The hen will hatch and rear the young herself. If a three-compartment breeder is used, then two hens to one Finch may be tried—one in each end, and the Finch in the centre.

Bullfinch Off in Colour.

Novice.—Am afraid you can do very little now. You ought to have used plenty of fruits and berries with colour in them during the course of the moult, and after, to have ensured a good breast colour; or you might have tried colour-feeding, if the bird will eat soft-food. Canary seed alone is poor fare for a Bullie; let him have some sunflower, teazle and summer rape daily, and occasionally a little maw and linseed. The wild seeds are good, and should certainly be continued. Your Goldie may not moult now until next season comes round; though possibly he may fall into moult in the spring. You could not do more than try a change from a cold room to a warm one, which might start him casting his plumage. Should it do so, keep him in the room right through the winter.

Water Freezing.

Goldfinch.—I do not know of any method that will keep water from freezing in an outdoor aviary (outside, of course, supplying heat). It is a nuisance one has to face. By giving the water slightly warm in the first place, the freezing can be postponed a short time, especially when the frost is not severe. I do not know of anything one can add to the water to attain this end, and I should imagine such a thing, if obtainable, would be likely to make it undrinkable. Glycerine has a decided effect on a bird's bowels, whatever effect it may have in preventing water from freezing (have never heard it mentioned personally in the latter connection). If any reader has experimented in this direction, he may let you know in next week's issue. One of my own outdoor aviaries, which had once been a rabbitry, had a tap in it, and by leaving this running gently, into a trough having a slight fall, I had little difficulty with frozen water, though I always had to "pack" the pipe well with rags and straw. In an outdoor room containing cages (as I presume yours is), the best plan is unquestionably to arrange for just sufficient heat to keep the temperature above freezing point, and no higher.

About Linnets.

Chorister.—1. The cages used when contest singing are those known as "hop" cages, or "hack" cages. "Long jump" cages, as the name implies, is a larger cage, though of similar type, into which the birds are sometimes run for a change. You can get a regulation "back" cage from any of the cage-makers advertising in our columns. The "hop" cage, in some parts, is all wire on a wood foundation, but the "back" cage has always the top and back of wood. 2. A pediment cage is one with a pediment (that is a shaped piece of wood for ornamental purposes) at the top. It is a fair-sized single cage, intended for a songster Canary or Mule, as a rule. 3. No doubt the manager of "C.B." could let you have the back numbers containing the articles on Linnet singing; drop him a line. 4. A bird is said to be "sprung" when he is in high breeding condition, hence "springing" a Linnet means forcing it into breeding condition, and so into full song.

"Gasping for Breath."

J.S.—The phrase "gasping for breath" really conveys very little—your bird may have a bad cold, or the gasping may be due to a severe internal upset. You give no details to guide me to a decision; you should have stated other symptoms, if any, state of excreta, etc. Anyway, assuming he has a severe cold, keep him in an equable temperature, out of all draughts, and get a chemist to mix you one ounce each of glycerine, oxymel of squills and ipecacuhana wine. Of this, well stir half a teaspoonful into two table spoonfuls of drinking water, fresh daily. Tempt the bird to eat, with maw and ilger seeds. Write again if no relief seems afforded in a week's time.

One Easy; One Otherwise.

Novice.—1. There are certainly "grey" Linnets to be had, that is, with no red on the breast. All hens are "grey," whatever their age, and all house-moulted birds. Young cock Linnets are "grey," too; and old cocks as well until the approach of the breeding season. The red breast feathers, in fact, may be said to be the nuptial finery of the male Linnet. Young cocks are never so deep a red as old cocks, and a three-year-old male (and upwards) is usually the most gorgeously be-crimsoned of all. The older birds are richer (more nutty brown), in ground colour, too; though this varies according to whether they are "jonques" or "mealies," the former always being much the better in depth of body brown. 2. Your newly purchased Siberian Goldfinch ought, if he is a good boy, to fertilise eggs this coming season. I know many which did so last year. Still, of course, it would be folly for anyone to say one way or the other for certain; only time can prove that. One cannot even guarantee Canaries. The unsighted yellow Norwich ben should make him a capital mate.

A Hot Batch.

E.T.S.—Am afraid you overstep the limit in number of questions. Your harmless looking four in reality run out to above a dozen. The Cornish Chough has a long curved red beak and red legs; the Alpine Chough, a short yellowish beak and yellowish legs. The plumage is alike in both sexes, I believe. They require feeding on table scraps (meat, vegetables, etc.), flesh food, beetles, etc., the same as Magpies, Jays, and the Crow family generally. An outdoor aviary, 4 foot long by 2 foot from back to front, is hardly large enough; 5 feet by 3 feet would be decidedly better. The concrete floor should not be left bare, but be covered by a thick layer of coarse sand. The cock Bearded Tit has a black "moustache" (a pronounced black streak, broadly speaking) down each cheek, towards the breast. The hen has not this marking. Feed on the usual insectivorous mixture for small softbills, with plenty of mealworms, and other insect life, according to season. Bearded Tits are a resident species, and in a well-sheltered outdoor aviary, with snug roosting quarters, will winter all right. Questions respecting Red-headed Gouldians (foreign birds) must be sent to our Mr. Page. Iodine is no good for a "scurfy" head; you should have applied a mild sulphur ointment (from the chemist) or, failing this, a spot or two of paraffin, with the tip of a finger. I should think you might get an untried Chough for the sum named; but not a known winner. The amount you mention is a very modest one in fact.

Concerning the Lady.

Stanley.—Yes; an ordinary young Norwich hen, if a yellow, and of nice size and shape (substance) would make an excellent mate for your Goldfinch. It would certainly be better than a so-called sib-bred muling hen, with probably nothing else to recommend it other than a more-or-less dubious "pedigree." If you want a sporting chance of a light Mule, get a yellow Lancashire Plainhead hen, or a clear pink-eyed Yorkshire, from a known breeder; don't expect a good one for nothing, however.

White Jackdaws.

E. Schomann.—I don't think white Jackdaws are at all uncommon; in fact I fancy they are bred in considerable quantities on the continent, and many sent over to this country. I saw several at a well-known place in Covent Garden the last time I was round that way. If your birds are pink-eyed Albino Jackdaws then they are certainly rarities, and worth showing. Unfortunately, not many shows provide classes for Albino and rare-feathered birds. You would need to apply for schedules of the convenient shows advertising in our columns, and if a proper class is provided, enter your birds therein on the form sent with the schedule. The prizes vary, but will be found set out in each schedule. You would send the birds by rail, in proper show-cages; or take them yourself, if a metropolitan show. The procedure with regard to hand-washing birds is too lengthy to give here, you should consult "House's Canary Manual" (published by CAGE BIRDS) in which full details are given. You would "tub" a Jackdaw, however, as you would "tub" a fowl, or bantam. And keep an eye on its beak while about it; if the bird loses its temper and gets in a half-arm jab on the mark, it may knock you out.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

What Bird?

"Pate."—You have certainly given me a poser for the moment; I am inclined to think you have some European species, and not a Foreigner in the sense in which the term is generally used. However, I will think the matter over, and give you a reply next week. If you are aware of the locality the bird came from, it would certainly help out your description, and make naming an easier matter.

Parrakeets and Lories.

F.E.G.—You would find Greene's "Parrots in Captivity" as suitable as any of the cheaper works, and the plates, if somewhat over-coloured, yet give a fairly accurate idea of the general colouring of their plumage; copies are usually to be picked up by writing to the various second-hand booksellers for their list of Nat. History Books (2) I am the Editorial Sec. of the F.B.C. Subscription 10/-; entrance fee, 2/6. (3). The Lories are not difficult to keep in health, once they have got over the hardships of importation; they should have a full-sized Parrot-cage. As regards diet, supply plenty of soft, ripe fruit, a tin of canary seed, boiled milk sop, and also boiled rice; the two latter can be used on alternate weeks, so as to vary the diet. (4) Once Parrots are adult, after distinction is very difficult, and as this distinction varies with almost each species, you will see the impossibility of my giving you a general reply here. In aged birds, the legs and feet are usually heavily and coarsely scaled. In good-sized outdoor aviaries, many species of Parrakeets, such as Rosellas, Jennants, Blood-rumps, etc., breed freely and several species of Lories have been bred. Swainson's or the Blue-Mountain Lorry is one of the hardiest species, and a very handsome and brilliant bird.

Californian and Common Quails.

"River."—(1) They must not be put out of doors at this season, unless you purchase such as have been out of doors all the summer. I am doubtful as to their agreeing with the Common Quail, though I find that the Harlequin and Common agree fairly well together, but unless the aviary be very large, I really cannot advise you to make the experiment. It is in the breeding season that their pugnacity becomes most pronounced. My Common Quails have made no attempt to breed. Pile some brushwood up in one corner and you will probably have better luck next year. (2) Bib-finched cannot be termed free breeders, young have, however, been reared on several occasions, and given a strong and healthy pair, they are certainly probable breeders. (3) You would find the following much more preferable: 2 parts Partridge meal, 1 part each nuts' eggs and dried flies, half a part each silkworm pupae and ground oriaset, with a sprinkling of scalded grocer's currants, and some crumbled sponge cake, when dumping for use. The mixture you propose would answer the purpose well enough, but that named above would be more wholesome. Grocer's currants should always be scalded, so as to both cleanse and soften them, consequently they should only be added when mixing for use. Three or four mealworms per day as well as other insects are very wholesome for all softbills.

Parrakeets for Outdoor Aviary.

"Parrakeets."—From your description of their demeanour, I am of the opinion that you have a true pair of Quaker Parrakeets; if so, you will find one of them a builder bird that the other, this is the female, her beak is also larger than the male. In plumage they are practically alike. Your query re Moustache Parrakeet will be answered next week. You could keep about a score or rather more Parrakeets in your aviary, but about four pairs for breeding purposes would be ample. You would like pairs of Red Rosellas, Blood-rumps, Blossomheads, and White-eared Conures, make a very fine show, and none of the birds are difficult to keep in health. You must fix up from ten to a dozen log nests, high up in the aviary, some in the shelter and some out of doors, under the roofed-in portion. A pair each of green and yellow Budgerigars would make a pleasing variety as to size, and the larger birds usually despise the smaller fry. If you should have any luck with breeding, you will soon have your accommodation filled. Note: Parrakeets very often only play at nesting during their first year in new quarters.

The Rose-Breasted Cockatoo.

A. W. Brown.—Your bird is the Roseate or Rose-breasted Cockatoo (Cacatua roseicápilla). It is a hardy and freely imported species, but the majority of these birds do not enjoy much reputation as talkers in this country. However, in Australia, their native country, their repute is high in this respect, and recently in CAGE BIRDS several accounts have appeared of quite talented talkers. Make a pet of the bird, keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, also talk to it, and seek to train it by constant repetition; it should ultimately learn to speak a few odd words at any rate. There are so many rare species imported now-a-days, that the prospects of the Roseate Cockatoo are not great on the show bench. Still, if in fine plumage and tight and sleek condition, it might catch the judge's eye. Show it in a roomy parrot cage. Newly imported individuals can mostly be obtained for about 8/6 each—of course, an acclimatised and talking bird would be worth much more.

Food for an Amazon.

A. J. State.—Always keep a tin of seed mixture in the bird's cage, it will ultimately take to it. Give it about a tablespoonful of boiled maize daily till such times as you see it eating the seed mixture. Note: the boiled maize only keeps fresh one day, and the food vessel must be kept strictly clean. You can let it have as much banana and other ripe fruit as it will eat; also plain biscuit, dry, not soaked; nuts, shelled walnuts are best; a little dry boiled potato or raw carrot; dry crust stale household bread and a little green food. There should be regular supplies of cuttlefish and water ad lib. Do not give table scraps, slops, or any kind of animal food. The seed mixture should consist of canary, oats, hemp, dari, maize, wheat and sunflower seeds. A good way to get a bird on to the seed mixture is to put a thin layer of boiled maize over same, and usually the bird soon finds the seed mixture very agreeable and to its taste.

Plumage of an Amazon.

A.C.—Your bird is a Blue-fronted Amazon. If you continue to treat strictly as advised in previous replies, its plumage should gradually resume its normal condition, it is very often a tiresome task breaking a bird of this habit, some individuals never wholly give it up; in the majority of cases, it has its source in improper dietary, as in your case; however, there is every reason to hope for success with your bird. It will be patience and perseverance that will win the day, combined with a wholesome diet, such as you are now giving. If the trouble should become more pronounced, write again at once.

A Parrot with an Injured Foot.

T.B.—This is another instance in which the case is only fully met by consulting a vet., it is so difficult to judge of the extent of an injury by correspondence. However, if you wish to deal with it yourself, foment the foot with a warm decoction of camomile flower, or poppy heads, using a mop camel hair brush for the purpose, partially dry, and then put on the embrocation, also using a camel hair brush for the purpose; if done with care, it should not occasion the bird any irritation or pain. Till the foot is all right again, keep the cage tray covered with pent moss litter (from a forage merchant), and remove the grating for the time being. Diet the bird as regularly advised in this column. Keep its bowels moving freely, but not really loose, with either Epson Salts or Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water. On other occasions well colour the drinking water with chemical food. As regards a perch, use a natural one (with the bark on), about ¾ inch diameter. Hope the bird will soon improve, but had sprains or strains are frequently very troublesome, especially with a restless creature like a bird.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Photo (A. A. Asbury).—Many thanks for the interesting photograph; we shall hope to reproduce it in the near future.

Acceptable Advice (Bert).—We are indeed pleased to know our advice has proved so acceptable, and shall look forward to hearing the result next season.

Articles, etc. (H.S.N.).—We are much obliged for the contribution, and shall always be glad to hear from you.

New Society at Lowestoft (Fancier).—We cannot insert a notice such as you send us, except with the name and address of the sender attached.

Book wanted (New Beginner).—All the little "tips" you want on feeding, moulting, sexing, etc., will be found explained in simple language in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," price 7d., post free, from this office.

Late Eggs (J.W.R.).—We have kept no record of these "late eggs," but feel sure instances have been published of hen laying eggs during every month in the year.

Help and a Meeting (J. Livingstone.—Thanks for your promise of support, and we shall be pleased on our side to do whatever we can to help. No doubt one of our staff will be at the fixture you mention.

Not to be found (F. W. Willis).—We are unable to trace where the delay arose, but both answers have only come to hand this week. We do not know of any fault on your side.

Warning to Novices, etc. (J. Huggard).—While we are in complete sympathy with the views you express, your letter is not one we can see our way to publish, as it tends to throw the many straightforward fanciers under a cloud of distrust, and this, we are sure, would be rightly resented by them.

Opinion (No side).—Your only remedy, so far as we can judge from the stated facts, is to put the matter into a solicitor's hands and seek redress through the County Court; that is, if you are not agreeable to the return of the birds on both sides.

Report (D. M'D. Skinner).—Accept our hearty thanks for your kindness.

A Judge's Credentials (J. H. Adam).—The printing of such a letter as you send us would involve both yourself and this paper in an action for libel, and as, personally, we are anxious to spend as quiet and happy a Christmas as possible, we must forego the excitement of running up against the law.

Three Questions (Elm).—Any high quality enamel will do, bought from a paint-shop. For seed-eating birds, the usual plan is to have food and water vessels outside, and grit should be used on the floor of the cage in which the same are kept.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 135, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a report direct 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Redpoll (Mrs. Hoge).—Chronic softening of liver and acute pneumonia. Only birds in perfect health and plumage should be hung up out of door during sunshine this time of year.

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

A SHORT time ago the Bradford City O.S. removed from their old headquarters at the Travellers' Rest, to more commodious rooms at the Flying Dutchman, but I suppose they would not have done so had not their old host and friend, Mr. Horsman, also intended a move. Mr. Horsman has taken a house a few miles from the centre of the city, where for the remaining years of his life he hopes to breathe the fresh air of the fields. On Saturday evening last a deputation from the society wended their way to their old host's new home, The Old King's Head, Allerton, bearing with them a splendid framed testimonial for preseutation to him, this taking the form of a group of the officials of the Bradford City O.S. surrounding Mr. Horsman.

UPON their arrival, however, they were doomed to disapointment, as unfortunately they found Mr. Horsman ill in bed; but after a consultation they decided to present it to his better half. Mr. T. Fortman, the President of the Society, made the presentation, in which he was ably assisted by two of the oldest members, Mr. F. Ludbrook and Mr. J. S. Clarkson. Afterwards all joined in the singing of "Rule Britannia" and "Auld Lang Syne," and wishing their old and worthy friend speedy recovery, they turned their steps homewards.

THAT prominent exhibitor of Yorkshires, Mr. W. H. Shackleton, made his first appearance as a judge at the show held at Laisterdyke, on Saturday last, and well does he seem to have merited the position, his awards being very well received. I heard several fanciers remark that they thought he had judged very consistently throughout, finishing up with the same type as he started with; and this is no mean tribute to Mr. S., as he had a good morning's work in going through the 391 birds entered.

THE Harrogate C.B.S. Open Show kas also held on Saturday last, the grand total of 314 entries, staged in the 20 classes provided, giving an average of nearly 17 per class. The British were a show in themselves, and were worth going miles to see, many noted winners being on view.

WHEN visiting Laisterdyke, on Saturday, I dropped in at the headqnarters of the society, and in the room set apart for the "birdy" men, I noticed something that, from an artistic point of view, quite took my fancy. The worthy host had a dozen of CAGE BIRDS coloured postcards of Canaries, Mules, Hybrids, etc., beautifully mounted and framed in two sets of six, and well did they look.

SOME OPINIONS ON OUR CHRISTMAS NUMBER.

A very large number of congratulatory messages has reached us anent last week's Christmas Number, and we have to express regret that pressure on space prevents our acknowledging in this week's issue more than the few printed below. We much appreciate our readers' encouraging remarks.—Ed.

The Christmas number is grand. — D. H. TEDSTONE (Brecon).

The Christmas number was really good.—H. H. COOPER (Luton).

This week's supplement and plates are really good.—A. HIRST (Accrington).

Many thanks for the plates with CAGE BIRDS this week; they are beautics.—J. H. HILTON (Wigan).

Last week's CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. G. W. Francis (Lowestoft), was a wonder, and full of good things.

The Xmas Number is a splendid piece of work, and I am very pleased with it.—W. LAWTON (Glossop).

Many thanks for the beautiful coloured plate in CAGE BIRDS issue of the 14th inst., writes Mr. F. W. Willis (Wood Green).

The coloured plate in your Xmas number is simply grand, writes Mr. A. Parke (Lowestoft), and the models of Norwich makes one think how happy he could be with either.

The CAGE BIRDS' Coloured Plates I won at Reading Show arrived safely, and I am very pleased with them, and thank you very much, writes Mr. J. A. Lees (Oxford).

CAGE BIRDS Xmas number is a perfect treat, and is without doubt the cage bird paper. Your coloured plates are excellent, and I trust it may have the success it deserves.—JOHN MARTIN (Castle Douglas).

The coloured plates and supplements you issue from time to time are superb and all that could be desired, and your Mr. Norman stands out alone as an artist in cage bird circles. Last week's number was very good.—H. S. NEGUS (Cardiff).

I think the plate presented with the Christmas number about the best even CAGE BIRDS has given, which is saying a lot. The person who cannot find something to his taste in the Christmas number must be a peculiar creature.—A. E. CROSS (Woking).

The plate in this week's issue is grand, and a great credit to your artist, Mr. Norman. It makes one long to own a bird half as good as the two Norwich. The question is, When shall we get one to the type?—C. H. COOPER (West Ham).

Your coloured plate is a real knock-out to anything I have ever seen. Not only the two Redpoll-Bullfinch Hybrids, but the Goldfinch-Siskin, Goldfinch-Linnet, and Linnet-Bullfinch are a treat. Thanks to your artist, Mr. Norman, for such a grand plate.—JOHN DIXON (Wigton).

Allow me to thank you for the splendid coloured plate in the Christmas number, writes Mr. J. T. Wilson (Fulham). What a beautiful bird that Linnet-Bullie is! It almost tempts me to give up Budgerigar breeding and devote my time to breeding a Hybrid like it. But I have heard that Hybrid breeding is very uncertain, so I had better stay on what I know is safe ground.

The coloured plate last week was a gem of the first water, and I must congratulate Mr. Norman for giving readers such a treat, while the literary supplement was first class. CAGE BIRDS cannot be beaten for supplements and coloured plates; it is at the top of the ladder. CAGE BIRDS is to its readers what the sun is that shines from the sky—Glorious indeed, and very bright.—A. H. C. LEGG (Porth).

Heartiest congratulations upon your Christmas number just to hand. It is indeed a grand twopennyworth, and should have a big sale. Mr. Norman's picture of Hybrids is a delicious production, and well worth framing. I am slowly recovering from the effects of a nasty chill and "run down," but the Christmas number has acted as a splendid tonic—better than bucketsful of medicine.—J. B. WATERMAN (Dulwich).

I was delighted with last week's exquisite plate, "Triumphs of Hybrid Breeding." The more I see of these living little treasures, the more enthusiasm it instils into me to try year after year. Please convey my congratulations to your artist, Mr. H. Norman, for the delightful plate he has produced us once again; it certainly does him great credit. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.—A. J. MARLEY (Leyton).

THE "CHAMPION" LINNET.

Among its many proud possessions, says a Yorkshire contemporary, Leeds can boast of the champion singing Linnet of the world, and bird lovers will be interested to know how the owner of this phenomenal songster, Mr. Harry Allen, came into possession of this bird. About two and a half years ago Mr. Allen, who is a humourist, was singing at a private residence at Cawood, near Selby, when, having a little spare time, he received permission to catch a few birds. The champion Linnet was among them. It was then only some two or three months old, and he at once set to work to train it. At the age of five months, the bird took the first prize for quality at a contest in Newtown. Its fame spread rapidly, and when, soon afterwards, it entered for a contest at Batley, bird-lovers assembled from all parts of Yorkshire to hear it. It beat all competitors, notwithstanding that the contest was open to all England. Next came an All-England contest at Leeds, and again this wonderful bird came out at the top, Mr. Allen being then offered a ten-pound note for his rare acquisition.

Other All-England contests followed in rapid succession, and no fewer than five of these out of six fell to this feathered champion. At Bradford it defeated 34 of the best-picked birds of Yorkshire and Lancashire, the cup winner having to succumb to its entrancing melody. At Leeds, last year, it was eminently successful, and at Sheffield it wrested the first prize from 28 of the best time singers of Yorkshire. On that occasion it scored 57 points in two minutes, after having travelled 39 miles. In the Leeds district, it appears, the contests in which the Linnet engaged were contests of quality, but at Sheffield time was the test. The bird could not score unless it sang for three seconds at a stretch. The longer it held out in its two minutes the more points it scored. The champion ran up 18 "chalks" in one "hold."

Altogether, Mr. Allen's famous Linnet has won over a hundred first prizes. To the novice in bird matters this Patti among Linnets has quite an ordinary appearance. Darting about in its tiny cage in a back room of its new home in Beckett Street, the average city dweller might, at first view, see no more in it than a neatly-built sparrow. It differs outwardly in no way from the score or more of other Linnets which keep it in harmonious company, each in its small cage. But its owner takes one of these companions down from its hook and holds it in front of the champion. There is an excited movement on the part of the latter, a tight drawing-in of the wings, and then a quick outspreading of them, and the liquid notes pour forth full and sweet. In all his contests, with one exception, says Mr. Allen, the bird has won the first prize before he has been up one minute. He is a six-note bird, which is termed a good Linnet, running and turning like a German Canary, without the slightest click or jar in between.

WASHING EXHIBITION BEFORE THE CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Mr. W. Morris, of Stoke Newington, gave a washing exhibition at the last meeting of the City and Suburban A.C.B. In the washing competition which he also judged, Messrs. F. Pullinger, T. Monger, H. Hawes, W. Page, and T. Kelly, of the Novice section, competed, but no amateurs and champions would enter.

In deciding the winner, Mr. Morris's guides were (1) style of handling, (2) mode of washing, and (3) quickness, these being very conspicuous in the winner, Mr. F. Pullinger, with Mr. T. Kelly running him very closely. Whist the birds were drying Mr. Morris gave a few remarks emphasising the unnecessary way the soapsuds had been allowed to penetrate into the eyes, and the length of time taken over the operation; also the mechanical way in which the birds were handled. To illustrate his meaning, Mr. Morris commenced to wash a Yorkshire, pointing out that three basins were perfectly unnecessary, as it only required the bird to be held over the soapy water while he rinsed with the water out of the second basin, and so kept the second quite clear. During the process of washing he advised the members never to let a bird see them washing, as it had a tendency to excite it, and to carefully avoid "winding" it. If they used curd soap it would be the means of regaining the bloom upon the feather providing it was well rinsed. What apparently struck the members most was the perfect way which Mr. Morris dried his bird, doing away with the rolling up and placing it direct into its cage, where it at once began to groom itself. In answering a question Mr. Morris remarked that the birds should be placed two feet from the fire, and after the shivering stage be removed to the end of the room and then sprayed, after which it would commence to groom itself If a bird was exhausted during the washing you could depend upon it that it would not groom itself afterwards, with the painful result of rough plumage. It was a hard task for a novice to stage a bird in tip-top form, but when he did the reporters were not slow to recognise it and announce it in a most encouraging manner. The chairman then proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Morris, incidentally remarking that it must have been very gratifying to him to go right to the centre of Canary-land (Norwich) and take away the coveted honours that he did, which was seconded by Mr. A. W. Curtis, and Mr. Morris replied in a few well-chosen words.—V. WYNN, hon. sec.

ARE THEY RECORD LATE EGGS?

SIR,—As a reader of CAGE BIRDS, I saw a short time ago that one correspondent had a canary that had laid eggs in October. Not long after that I saw that another correspondent had a Canary which laid eggs in November. I, however, have one that has laid four eggs in this present month, December. The first was laid on the 8th. I think this is a record. Will any reader kindly answer if it is not?

J. W. REDHEAD (Kettering).

FOREIGN BIRDS AT THE HORTICULTURAL HALL.

SIR,—Your reporter states that owing to the hall being occupied till quite a late hour on the preceding night, several of the foreign bird exhibits had not time to settle down before judging began. This is likely to convey to exhibitors (especially non-successful ones) that there was delay in getting exhibits staged. This is not correct, for, as a matter of fact, the benching occupied by the foreign birds was the first to be completed, and the whole of the staging throughout the show was done by midnight. True, the hall was in possession of a large fancy bazaar at 7 o'clock, but the management had provided a body of workers which in a few hours transformed the hall from a large bazaar to a gigantic bird show, and all the exhibits staged some hours before the judges arrived, so any omission of honours cannot be attributed to late staging.

LANCASHIRE BOWL AT BRISTOL SHOW.

SIR,—The competition for the above mentioned trophy has created a great deal of excitement for the last five or six years around Rochdale and Oldham, where the particular variety is most popular. This year saw three well-known fanciers—Messrs. Buckley (Royton), Swallwell (Oldham), and Hardy (Oldham)—on a level mark, with a couple of wins each. Thus the excitement, for the one who scored this year was the proud possessor of the £10 10s. silver bowl, presented by the Bristol Fanciers' Association, the birds competing being 1907 birds, bred by exhibitor. Mr. Swallwell was not a competitor this year, and as Mr. Ben Buckley scored a v.h.c., whilst Mr. Hardy was 1st, 2nd, and h.c., therefore the latter was the winner outright, and the runner-up. The winning bird is of massive size, extra in head properties, well filled-in at neck, of good position and length. This fine Plainhead is bred from the yellow Coppy cock which stood first in its class for old birds, and last year was only shown at Nottingham and gained a first. The only other time out was at the Rochdale Good Intent Show, in November this year, when he again stood first. The hen is a buff Plainhead, and has never been exhibited. The runner-up was a buff, with a very neat coppy, well radiated, and of good stature. It was bred from a buff Plainhead cock, which last year won first at Nottingham, and this season gained premier honours at Rochdale Good Intent and Bristol (only times shown), and a buff Coppy hen that has been in the money every time exhibited. This is a striking example of like breeding like. Mr. Hardy also won both specials—one for best Coppy, and the other for best Plainhead. The long journey had a telling effect on the birds, and as a consequence, no doubt through the cold whilst travelling, Mr. Hardy lost his winning buff Coppy, which also included in his big wins the one for the bowl in the year 1905.

THE DIPPER IN CAPTIVITY.

SIR,—I was much interested in the article relating to the "Dipper," in last week's grand number; the plates could not be very much improved upon, and I am sure does your artists great credit. It is now some ten or eleven years ago since I first had my attention drawn to this very interesting class of birds, and I was a very strict observer of them for some months. I had three given to me, that were caught on the Right Hon. the Earl of Dudley's estate, and as they were old ones, I had very little trouble with them. For the first day I had them I turned them loose into a large aviary, which was 22 ft. long outside, 7 ft. wide, 9 ft. 6 in. high at the back, and 6 ft. 6 in. at the front. It was divided into two parts. One was 14 ft. long, was all bricked in, with a skylight, and the bottom was laid with quarries, covered all over the bottom with brushwood. The outside was 8 ft. long, and was laid all over with turf. Let into the turf was a wooden tub, 4 ft. square, and 6 in. deep; holes were bored all round 1 in. from the top, so that it would never have above 4½ in. of water in it at the most. Into this I put several very large "cinders," so that the birds could hop on these. There was one thing very noticeable about them—they were extremely shy, and it was very rarely you could see them feed. So I arranged some old bushes up one side of the aviary, and into these they would go as soon as anyone approached them. It was only by keeping very quiet and still that they would venture to come out to feed again. Now, what my friend, Mr. Sandy, called "Straw Bait," we here call "Jack Jumpers," and we can gather them very easily along the canal banks, from among the rushes. I and my friends have spent hours getting them. Now, I tried another plan for feeding them, which I found very successful, and that was by getting a lot of mealworms, and then some good straws, which I cut up in lengths one inch long, well mixing these with the mealworms, and in a day or so they would all be inside these short lengths of straws. These I used to scatter about the aviary and in the water. The birds thrived very well on them, and they got them out of the straws very quickly indeed. I never tried giving them egg food, but I supplied them with live ant eggs, in all stages, which they relished very much. I never gave them any dried flies or dried ants' eggs, so I am unable to give any opinion about these. But I am a great believer in live gentles, as I think there is no food better than these for any kind of wild soft-billed birds. I may say I can get any quantity of these where I live, so that I never stint any of my birds; there are always some of these in my aviary. The way I fed my Dippers on these was as follows: I got six boxes, about 1 ft. square, 8 in. deep; then I got a bucket half-full of wet, sharp, red sand, the same as the bricklayers use, and put into this; also about two quarts of gentles. I then mixed them well up in the sand, and filled up the boxes. It was very rarely you could go down to the aviary, and not see one of the Dippers on the look-out for one of the gentles. I used to fill these boxes twice a week, and that was all they needed whilst in my care. I used to throw amongst the grass a lot of very small red earthworms, but whether they picked them up or not I am unable to say. I think they are well adapted for aviary, but not for cage life, as we could not keep them so clean in a cage as we could in an outside aviary. I think, too, it is very unwise to try and keep them in a cage, for they are not suited to it, and at the same time they would not get the amount of exercise, to keep them in good health and condition. With regard to exhibiting them, I don't think they are suitable for exhibition, and their place, like the Kingfisher, should be in an outside aviary.

SUCCESSFUL HYBRID BREEDING.

SIR,—You may remember my writing you in reference to a Cirl Bunting, at the beginning of last season, and also about a cross between Thrush and Blackbird I was trying for. Well, I failed with this cross, but hope to get it this next season, and will let you know if successful. I also put up a Goldfinch and Bullfinch, which came off all right. I have enclosed a post-card with a male of that cross on my finger, as you will see, also a male from the same nest on my wife's finger. Don't you think they are very tame? I have not seen anything like it in CAGE BIRDS, only a parrot and a magpie. I should like to know if anyone else has got any so tame. They are an exact copy of Goldfinch—Bullfinch on the first plate of hybrids which you issued, except that they show the bar of Bullfinch across the wing. They have been fed on the simplest of diet since weening them from the egg-food—plain canary seed and hemp is all they have had. So you see it is not so expensive to rear hybrids as some of our experts make out. I am going in for hybrids for all I am worth this next season—Cock Bullfinch and Canary, Goldfinch and Greenfinch, Canary and Bullfinch, Redpole and Bullfinch, and Linnet and Bullfinch. I have not the time for getting them fit for show. I will here explain how I think I was successful first time of trying for hybrids: The Goldfinch was two years old, cage moulted; the Hen Bullfinch also was cage moulted. I penned them in a cage, box pattern, 12in. by 13in. by 9in.; so if they fought it was to be a "knock-out." I kept them there till late in the spring, and then turned them into a breeding cage, and fed them the same as I do my canaries. The Bullfinch laid all her eggs in a nest she made herself, but, of course, I had a Canary as foster parent to rear the young, which came off all right. So I would advise all who are trying for the cross to try this method of mating them, if they have failed otherwise. I must say that, had it not been for CAGE BIRDS, I should never have tried for hybrids.

[The photographs Mr. Brown so kindly sends are very interesting, and evidence to the remarkable tameness of his hybrids.—EDITOR.]

SCOTTISH NORWICH PLAINHEAD CLUB MATTERS.

SIR,—"Full of mis-statements" is the verdict of this "Will-o'-the-Wisp" of a secretary on my letter, in your issue of the 30th ult. (happily for the Scottish National, its "ex"; unhappily for the S.P.C., in full possession—certainly a valuable legacy to be the "sole proprietors" of). One thing certain is: they have a secretary with a reputation—a reputation secured for him by the Press placing him on a pedestal, and inscribing on it "a model secretary." Were I asked to write a truer inscription, it would be very, very different. I will prove this by his actions and words. When he retired from the secretaryship of the Scottish National he refused to give up the books of the society when called upon by his successor, and it was some time before wiser counsels prevailed, and he did so. The minute-book presented a terrible apology for one; minutes were written in ink up till the end of 1903, and in pencil till the 10th February, 1905; from that date till his "retirement" in 1906 no minutes are entered in the minute-book. "I have just as much regard (perhaps more than you have) for the Scottish National," are his words in his letter appearing in your issue of the 7th, in reply to mine. Oh, hypocrite! Who pulled down its show bills in the Glasgow and W. of S. Show on the 16th November? It is not words, but actions, that convince. He follows the quotation above with the words, "And I have good reason, seeing the part I took the first four years of its existence." Though you had done ten times more than you did, it was all undone when you turned traitor on it. Your own words, "I will do all I can against its interests," condemn you.

I will touch as briefly as I can upon the points raised in his letter. Re Kelso Show: Isn't it quite a sufficient reason when the E.P.C. say they don't support mixed shows? Get the conditions, and don't go floundering into mistakes, I repeat. Now as to Manchester: I was asked by the secretary and a number of members of the E.P.C. to go downstairs to their meeting, where the Kelso Show business was settled, but I refused on the grounds that I might be blamed for influencing its decision. I left the hall while they were deliberating. I had no hand in the decision, nor tried to influence anyone. Some are cowardly enough, I hear, to blame me as being a "wire-puller" in connection with the voting for the contest. I defy any member to say I ever tried to influence anyone, either by word or writing, in the smallest way. I certainly did write the President of the S.P.C. to try and get the contest brought off this year. I am no perverter of the truth—all my letters are founded on fact. If I unwittingly make a mistake (as I did unfortunately in my last, and which gave Secretary Smith the only semblance of a chance to controvert any statement contained in it), I at once apologise for it, which I now do. How I came to write October instead of Augnst (which I intended) I know not. However, I am glad it did not in the slightest alter what I meant to convey—that there was ample time between the meeting of the E.P.C. on 11th May and the intimating of the result about the middle of August, to learn that the contest could not take place in Glasgow on dates fixed. As for the other, it is immaterial whether expulsion took place at an adjourned annual meeting or the meeting after it; such a mere detail does not alter the fact that expulsion did take place. Next in order, I think, is "the contests take place in December." I am not surprised, Mr. Secretary, that you know nothing about such a condition. You seem to interest yourself in nothing, if you don't get it all your own way. Your predecessor managed to bring the contest off the four years he had to do with it, but you have killed the two you have had anything to do with. This does not alter the fact that it is one of the conditions. If the secretary of the E.P.C. says so, it is correct. Next, "predicted failure." I did not predict failure in a few weeks; give you plenty of rope and it will come the quicker. Special meeting in Glasgow; I was asked by a member, "Are you going, Mr. A.?" "No; they are making a proper muddle of the contest, and let them get out of it as best they can," was my reply. I am no coward, and would never have interfered with it at all but for the stabbing in the back of the E.P.C. executive. Next, it was very condescending of you to "promise members a copy of revised rules." Were they printed for your use only? You may remember when sending my receipt for annual sub. for 1907 you expressed the wish that any differences between us should cease. Don't you think your very first action would have a deterrent effect to such taking place?—viz., in keeping my name out of the list of members as eligible for election to office, and issued along with voting papers. It just amounts to this, it wasn't suiting your purpose to let me in. More secretarial work! Next, the Glasgow and W. of S. Show: This "Will-o'-the-wisp" tries to anticipate my thoughts when he says, "You would have caused Glasgow, etc., a great deal of expense for losing the contest." What rot! The show was passed before I penned a line. What was my real position in regard to Glasgow Show? When appealed to I gave two specials (value 20s.), cut up by them into three, and wrote them I would make some entries, and if their show was a failure to call upon me, and I would give them a subscription to help to defray it. I thought this letter had miscarried, as I got no acknowledgment, but saw it had been received from list of specials in schedule. Yet he writes: "I would not have minded it being a loss." I am too good a fancier to wish that any show should be a failure. Next, the "stink in the nostrils." I don't quite comprehend what he refers to here. If it is his exodus from the Scottish National, I can assure him that since his departure there have been no more "stinks." One other point I will only touch on, and that is the increase of membership. I am delighted with it; but I would like to see it composed of a permanent lot of breeding and exhibiting members; not of the fleeting sort, which are created for one year with the view of carrying the contest to a particular show. I was glad last year's correspondence resulted in getting scrutineers appointed, and I hope to get a rule passed that no member shall have a vote the year he is elected. This would stop the fleeting ones. It would be interesting to know how many joining in 1906 dropped out in 1907. Instead of "standing by your circular," if you had stood on it it would have been more to your credit.

THE NOVICE QUESTION—A POINT FOR LANCASHIRE SHOWS.

SIR,—"Lancashire Throstle" touches a knotty point when he speaks of the novice question. I think, with him, that something should be done with regard to the definition of the novice in the separate sections governing a show. Some shows provide classes for novices, but they define a novice as "one who has never won a first prize in open competition." I have this show season been fortunate enough (?) to win a first in the British classes, and later a first with a Hybrid. I am also a breeder of Norwich Plainheads, but haven't as yet been fortunate enough to breed a first prize winner. Of course, I could easily do it — I mean, win a first. It is very simple. All you have to do is go to Mr. Seed and buy "Little King," or Mr. Rukin's £1,000 Lizard, or Mr. Crisp's Challenge Shield Yorkshire. I have only one objection to it myself, and that is my pocket is too deep—I mean very low down. But, then, the idea of making a struggling novice into a champion simply because he wins a first with a bird he has given a shilling for, after steadying and moulting it, and otherwise caring for it, is ridiculous in the extreme. The other day I received a schedule and circular from one of our leading societies, asking me to become a member, at the same time telling me I must sign a declaration that I was a champion, because I had won a first with a British? But shall I? I don't think!—at least, not until that society has altered its rules a little with regard to the novice.

LANCASHIRE ROBIN.

ANOTHER SAD LAMP DISASTER.

SIR,—Could you kindly spare me space in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, to thank those who have sent me letters of sympathy, respecting my late misfortune. On Tuesday night, November 26th, I attended to the wants of the birds as usual in my outdoor bird room, and lighted the lamp for heating purposes during the night, at 10 p.m., and left everything in perfect order, the lamp burning quite satisfactorily, and the ventilators all open. But on the wife's going into the bird room at 8 a.m., Wednesday morning, a terrible sight met her eyes. The whole of my Yorkshires, except six, had been suffocated through the lamp smoking, 44 in all, and two of the six have since died. I have a 3 in. flue pipe fitted 15 in. above the glass, and carried outside to a position where no direct wind can get down it, but very little smoke seems to have passed through this. The lamp that I used has always proved satisfactory, burning for four months last winter. It is a double burner, with copper reservoir. The glass was not broken, but it was full of soot, and the lamp had burned out in 10 hours. The temperature of the room was down to 45. As I left the lamp it should have burned 14 hours. The room and everything in it was black as coal, as well as the birds. I washed those that were left, as they could not rest until I had done so; four of them stood it, but two have died. This is four years' labour lost, but I hope to have another try later on. I should like to tender my sympathy to Mr. Brotherhood, as I know what his feelings are.

THE RECENT BURTON-ON-TRENT C.B.S. SHOW.

SIR,—No doubt some of the exhibitors at the above would wonder what "unregistered" stamped on their cage labels meant when they received their specimens home. It was done in a spirit of mischief by my son (only a boy) whilst the stewards were packing for the return journey. He had stamped several before he was noticed. His explanation was that they (the exhibitors) had not registered the price on labels, so he stamped "unregistered" on them! I trust the exhibitors who read this will accept this explanation—for who would care for a boy who was not mischievous? Also allow me to thank the exhibitors for their hearty support of our first show. I am sure we did all in our power to oblige fanciers who wanted birds back on Saturday night, or wanted them kept till Monday. Out of 330 entries only two mistakes were made, and I think they can be rectified without any unpleasantness. A. EMERY, Hon. Sec.

APPEAL FOR A FANCIER IN DISTRESS.

SIR,—Kindly give me a little space to make an appeal on behalf of Mr. Benjamin Spiers, who has had the misfortune to lose his sight. The doctors at Moorfields Hospital have given him up, after nine months' treatment, and he has five young children, the eldest being only nine years, and in the other four he has one that can't walk and one that can't talk. He used to be a member of the North London Cage Bird Association, but not being able to attend to his birds he had a very poor season, only rearing six, of which three got into the cards at the Young Stock Show. But to keep the little mouths from crying out his birds have had to go bit by bit, and now the home is on the go. Mr. Spiers being one who used to be only too pleased to assist in the uplifting of the fancy, or a fellow fancier in distress, I therefore make an earnest appeal on his behalf, knowing there are fanciers who will only be too pleased to make a happy Christmas for one who has lost that which is so much needed in life. I shall be pleased to acknowledge any amount, no matter how small, as little amounts put together will make a big one. So fellow fanciers, send your mites along. J. H. NEAL (163, Junction Road, Upper Holloway, N.).

WHAT KIND OF NORWICH HAVE WE TO BREED?

SIR,—"St. Mungo's" letter, in the issue before last, anent the difference of judgment in the Norwich section at the City of Glasgow Show and another. The other was Dysart, judged by Mr. Ferguson. The City Show was judged by Mr. McFarlane. Report has it that Mr. Ferguson washed the buff cock that won the McLean Cup at the City Show, and was so enamoured (or professed to be) with this bird at the time of washing, that he expressed himself thus to its owner: "If McFarlane does not give that bird first at City Show, ask him the reason why." Yet, in face of his own reported statement, he passed it altogether at Dysart. Will Mr. Ferguson explain his position?

NORWICH CHAPPIE.

SIR,—For "St. Mungo's" and "Kentite's" enlightenment, I may state that the judge was not to blame for putting the buff cock out of the tickets at Dysart, as he would not show himself; he refused to get on the perches. The same judge wanted to wager me a crown that he would be first at the City of Glasgow; so that shows he knows a bird. This bird has the shortest tail and wings for his size that I have ever seen. His uncle is the champion buff cock of Scotland—ten firsts, and does not know defeat. I offered Mr. McFarlane £10 for this bird before he ever was exhibited. Referring to "Tom-Tits," a friend of mine stood first and special in the unflighted yellow cocks at the so-called Palace of Scotland. He has been shown twice since, once in a class of eight, and not a commended card. He showed a buff variegated cock (which he had on approval) at the Palace of Scotland, without getting a card. Now this was the best bird he had, but because it does not win, he goes and returns it. A fortnight later it wins first and cup for its owner. Mr. Winter's green hen, which has won all over Scotland get second at the Palace (Scotland's Palace), Mr. Ireland's yellow unflighted cock, first at Dysart in a class of 33, also stood cardless at the Palace; his buff variegated hen, which got nothing in a poor class at Govan Hill, got second at the Palace (Scotland's Palace, I mean), catalogued at £2 2s., and he took her home! I once sold four birds, three at 10s. each and one at £2, as I considered them dirt. Judge my surprise when I visited the contest between Scotland and England, judged by Mr. Cameron, to find the three at 30s. standing—buff cock sixth, yellow variegated cock second, yellow hen third. The yellow cock, second, was a fair bird, but the other three—well, 30s. was their value! So "Kentite," you have nothing to grumble at. "St. Mungo," if you are getting your stock together, do not get same in Scotland, as they have not got them. I hope you will be as fortunate as I was last year. I bred three winners in one nest. Yellow cock, first at Glasgow, the admiration of the hall; buff hen, first; and buff cock, second, the McLean Cup winner. Now, I will continue answering letters until this time next year, if the writers will sign their names; otherwise I will treat them with contempt.

ROBERT YOUNG.

THE LENGTH OF THE YORKSHIRE CANARY.

SIR,—In your issue of December 14th, I read with interest and amusement the letter, re "Length of the Yorkshire Canary," and I think that our friend must have a measure, the inches of which are not "standard length," if he can measure the birds as shown to-day to be anywhere near 7¼ inches, not to speak of his statement of 8 inches. If Mr. Gibbs will take the trouble to place two pots or boxes 8 inches apart, and ask some of the owners to let him put one of the long ones between, I think he will have a nice bit of room to spare between the two articles. Myself, I have never been so fortunate as to see a "Yorkie" that could be made to measure 8 inches, either a stock bird or show bird, and would like to know where such are to be found. SAMUEL DEAN.

PARRAKEETS AT THE HORTICULTURAL HALL.

SIR,—In your report of the Horticultural Hall Show, my pair of Red-vented Blue-Bonnet Parrakeets are described as a doubtful pair, but "given the benefit of the doubt." They have been to a number of shows this season and have only been, I think, under the same judge twice, and this is the first time they have been accused of not being a true pair, and they would not have been this time, I am told, but for a gentleman from Bedford telling the judge they were two cocks. This is the third time he has seen them, so I do not think he knows much about them. Anyhow, I have had them twelve months, and if he knows more about them than I do, it seems strange to me. Last July one of these said cocks laid three eggs, but am sorry to say without any results. The explanation, and only explanation I can give, is that the hen of the pair is paired with a cock Yellow-vented Blue-Bonnet, and when I part them to send to a show the others always fight for a day or two, and I expect they had been at it the show day, as I only put them together the day before. I think it best to give this explanation, as if I sent them to another show they might be disqualified for being two cocks, which they are not, but a true pair. H. H. COOPER.

RAVENS AND MOLES.

SIR,—In CAGE BIRDS for November 30th, under "Ravens and Moles," in the Wild Bird Corner, some of the remarks concerning the moles are, in my opinion, misleading. It is stated that "these rodents are most destructive, and since Hawks, Owls, Ravens, etc., have been so much persecuted, they have in some places increased enormously." I wish to suggest, firstly, that moles are not rodents (gnawing animals), but that they belong to the order Insectivora (insect-eating) animals. Secondly, they are not destructive, but very useful little animals to the horticulturist. The only mischief they are guilty of is to sometimes work the soil up very near the surface of lawns and flower beds. This is when they are easily caught by Ravens or man. But this is more than compensated for by the mole, when considering that it lives entirely upon the destructive wire worm, and other grubs. I trust you will excuse me for calling your attention to this paragraph, because it is a pity to unwittingly libel such a useful little fellow as the British mole. He is already far too little appreciated by farmers and others. J. W. CUTMORE.

[The above letter we forwarded to our Mr. Norman, who replies: "I must thank Mr. J. W. Cutmore for pointing out my error, respecting the classification of the mole—a slip upon my part. Respecting their usefulness I cannot quite agree with him. I have seen valuable crops rendered useless by their work, and meadow land in such a condition that the hay crop was not worth the cutting. They are, further, nightly doing their best to uproot any strawberry-bed, and as their principal food is the common earthworm, not the wireworm (although they are greedy, and will eat almost anything), I could, personally, do very well without them, leaving the earthworms to the Thrushes, and the wireworms to the Starlings and Rooks. The usefulness of birds of prey is not recognised as it should be. Owls were one time fairly common in the old park in my village, but have all been destroyed; consequently, the place is overrun with rats, and I only hope the destroyers of the birds are troubled more than usual by these animals."]

WITHHOLDING AWARDS & PRIZE MONEY AT KENTISH SHOWS.

SIR,—Although very much averse to entering upon a newspaper discussion, there are one or two items in Mr. Horrex's letter which call for some reply from me. Mr. Horrex charges "certain executive and ordinary members" of my association (the Kent County Cage Bird Association) with having boycotted the cage bird section of this society's show. The charge is entirely without foundation and altogether beside the fact. Certainly three of our executives refrained from showing, owing to personal reasons of their own, which I am not at liberty to detail, one having an old grievance, the other two a very recent one. The two latter are also members of the Dover F. and F. Executive, and one of them did as much, and probably more, real hard work in the interest of that society than anyone. He spent two days and one whole night in the show hall, and was one of the last to leave after the exhibits were packed up and in the hands of the railway company for the return journey. Mr. Horrex further refers to what he is pleased to term "something of a local executive split" in the K.C.C.B.A. The so-called "split" was the resignation of our chairman (who is now, and was at that time, the chairman of the Dover Fur and Feather Society) and a couple of others, followed by a third later, as soon as it was convenient for him to do so, because, forsooth, the members of the K.C.C.B.A. decided upon holding a show by a majority of 29 against 9. However, since that time the Association has done some excellent work, and most harmoniously, too, and their show was successful, in spite of adverse weather, in every detail. No, sir, the Dover F. and F. Society, in the matter of boycotting, are not the innocent, injured lambs their capable and energetic secretary would have your readers believe. Perhaps Mr. Horrex might with advantage to himself take the advice he offers to "Commune Bonum," in the matter of facts, etc.

GEO. SANDERSON, Hon. Sec., K.C.C.B.A.

SIR,—I was pleased to see in the current issue of CAGE BIRDS that the Secretary of Dover Society had the courage to try and explain away my "hard facts." To scan his letter in detail, he accuses me of rushing into print, instead of, as he proposes, writing to his committee for an explanation. This is rather a tall order for a non-exhibitor, and there is no doubt that his committee would have "laid my letter on the table," with an accompaniment of uncomplimentary remarks. Secondly, I never stated that in numbers the C. B. section was a record, but that it was a record reduction of prizes, one-sixth of these being disallowed, fourteen of which were first, without any authority in the rules stated in the schedule. Thirdly, I cannot see that the split in the K.C.C.B.A. explains why so little cancellation took place. Perhaps Mr. Horrex will make this more clear, although cancellation is, in my opinion, infinitely better than this serious reduction of prize money, making the premier award in so many cases 2s. 6d. for a 1s. 9d. entry fee. Now, to use Mr. Horrex's own words, "as to the awards," he makes no definite statement, but the only inference we can draw from his remarks is, that the judge knocked off the prizes in the hard-bill classes, as the birds did not merit first. Therefore the hard-bills had to put up with 2s. 6d. prize money as premier award, while the soft-bills, being of higher merit (?) gained first prizes. Should not the word "hardbills" in this portion of the letter read "softbills"? Now, I would like to ask, how many fanciers believe that the judge disallowed these prizes? Are not the awards put in the judges book, for each class, in Dover, as elsewhere? I think Mr. Horrex will have some difficulty in persuading us that this was not done. Presuming that this was so, have the Dover F. and F. Society, or any other society, for that matter, the right to knock off prizes wholesale? If a society wants to do this in 1908 let it be honest, and say so, then it will not be necessary for "Commune Bonum" to rush into print. The next little item refers to the first prize-winner in a class of eight, being better than the first prize winner in a class of four. This is information for the old hands, but "generally" is rather too strong a word for sometimes, aye, and oft-times, the smaller classes contain real good specimens. But surely this has no bearing on the present question, as, in three classes of hard-bills, numbering five, four and four respectively, no first was awarded, while in two classes of softbills, five and four respectively, first were given, and my contention is, that there was as good exhibits in the hard-bills, as in the softbills. I have seen the bulk of them this season, so know what I am talking about. My only remark in reply to the "news" about not receiving notice that the judge appointed would not be able to officiate until the day before is that I trust Mr. J. North is entirely restored to health now. As regards the number of exhibits, both "Commune Bonum" and Mr. Horrex's figures are wrong, as the correct number, as per catalogue is 425, my original statement being "nearly 450," while Mr. Horrex gives the number as 405. In conclusion, I should like to remind Mr. Horrex that my letter was not written from a "self-interested" point of view, and, perhaps, if they will only let us know exactly in 1908 what they are going to do, and get another C.B.U. license, we shall give them a bumping C. B. entry, a few of which may come from "COMMUNE BONUM."

THE CHALLENGE SHIELD AWARD AT DULWICH SHOW.

SIR,—Evidently the fogs we have been experiencing of late have very much clouded the brain of Mr. Morris. By what stretch of imagination he can accuse me of jealousy, I am at a loss to understand, seeing that I was not an exhibitor at the Dulwich and Peckham Show, and had no bird within 80 miles of the same; neither was I interested in one exhibit there. The only argument he appears able to advance is that he does not approve the method of judging. Seeing that the runners-up were perfectly satisfied with the awarding of the shield, and knowing Mr. Morris was not concerned at all in the affair, one can only assume that there is something more behind this than he cares to say. For years the Dulwich and Peckham Society has been looked upon as a most exemplary one, and its shows have been looked forward to with a great amount of pleasure by fanciers generally. Unfortunately for its reputation, things went sadly against it this year. Every fancier knows by the correspondence that has taken place the calamity which befell it. Many fanciers who visited the show did their utmost to get matters right. If strangers were willing to do their utmost to save the society's reputation, what ought we to expect of its members? Now, sir, Mr. Morris was a member of that society; he was present at the show and knew what happened; he also knew at the time how and by whom the awards were made. Surely, if he considered there was any cause for complaint, he should have consulted his society, or brought the matter forward at a committee or general meeting. It is generally supposed that loyal members of a society will do their best to uphold the same, and not try to damn its future. Mr. Morris appears to think differently, for he waits until his society is brought into disrepute, and his chief is assailed on every hand, and everybody appears to be trying to get their foot upon his throat; then he rushes to the Press and raises the cry of the awards, and does his best to lead Norwich Fanciers to suppose that the Norwich section was absolutely ignored in the shield competition; then he finishes up by saying that he lost his bird after it came home from the show, thinking, I presume, that the inference drawn by the fancy would be that the same had been brought about by some neglect of the management. I ask all fanciers, is this fair or just? I stated, in my first letter, that the bird was looking very badly the latter part of the first day. Many other fanciers can prove the same. If I thought that Mr. Morris voiced the general opinion of the members of that society, I for one should leave it severely alone in the future, and I feel confident that I should not stand alone in doing so; but I am certain he does not. My profound sympathies are with Mr. Woolhouse and his committee, and I can assure them that if at their next show I am alive, and in the fancy, I shall support them to my utmost (and I have the assurance of many fanciers to do the same), for I feel confident that the calamity which befel their last show will not be likely to occur again. Now, I am certain that the three judges Mr Morris speaks of are remarkably well able to take care of themselves, hence, if necessary, can speak for themselves. This I can say, that with the exception of Mr. Morris, every other exhibitor appeared to be well pleased with their awards. The childish remark about my appearing "hard hit," I can afford to treat with the contempt it deserves. My object has always been to uplift and maintain the integrity of the fancy, and not lower its standard. Personal abuse won't affect me; I have always been in the habit of accepting that from whence it came. E. BAKER.

[We have no intention of re-opening the question of the management of this show, which has already had a good innings, and anything further said concerning the show must be confined strictly to the award in question, otherwise the matter must close.—EDITOR.]

BURTON-O--TRENT.

The Burton C.B.S., a newly-formed society, held their first open show on December 14th, in the Staffordshire Knot Auction Room. Entries came up splendidly, numbering 330, so giving the society a good send-off. The quality of the exhibits was much in advance of anything seen at Burton for years. This was in evidence throughout the show. Many winners at other shows had to be content with cards, and, in some cases, not even that. Local bird-lovers were delighted with the feast provided, for most of them know a good bird when they see one. We may just mention that not one class had to be cancelled—a most satisfactory state of affairs at this the first venture. The showroom is a great improvement on the venue where they have hitherto been catered for; albeit the committee are so pleased at the support received that a strong endeavour will be made to obtain an even better one for a future occasion. In the Norwich section some grand exhibits were staged by Messrs. R. Hall, W. Neal, W. Whetstone, G. Gwilliam, J. Tyler, C. Birks, T. Gilbert, G. Herbert, and others. In Yorks., Messrs. A. E. Emery, G. Burke, and Jeffery were successful. In Mules, Messrs. P. V. Williams, and G. Lawrence were to the fore. British turned up well, some grand specimens being shown by Messrs. G. Osborne, E. Anderson, W. Gay, H. J. Chick, and P. V. Williams, and others. Foreigners proved very attractive to visitors, especially the beautiful King Bird of Paradise, shown by Mr. P. V. Williams; many expressed regret that the bird had lost its tail. The management was all that could be desired. The committee consist of the following: Chairman, Dr. Docherty; vice-chairman, Mr. T. Kirkland; treasurer, Mr. S. A. Dicken; Messrs. Hathaway, Secret, Parker, Elliott, Lee, Watson, Halliday, Hakes, Coltman, Cooke, Cameron, and Bellamy. Mr. A. Emery makes a splendid secretary, very obliging and courteous to all. He received very able assistance from Mr. C. P. Smith, as assistant secretary. The CAGE BIRDS competition resulted as follows: 1st, A. E. Wigginton; 2nd, S. Hakes; 3, Harris. The awards were made by Mr. J. Bexson (Derby).

SWINDON.

The Swindon F. & F. A. held its annual show on December 12th and 13th. There was only a fair entry for some reason we could not account for, and in many classes the first prizes were withheld. The exhibits were nicely staged in the balcony, and were well looked after by a good committee of fanciers. We only hope that they may have better support next year; they certainly deserve it. The Hon. Secs., Messrs. Northover and Watson, are deserving of the greatest of praise for the able manner in which they carried out their duties. They left no stone unturned to ensure the success of the show. The committee, too, worked well, and deserve credit. Mr. DeWinton judged.

LAISTERDYKE.

The annual open show of the Laisterdyke B.F.A. took place on December 14th, in the Board School, Lilac Grove Street. It is a splendid room, in fact, one of the best in Bradford, being very lofty and well-lighted, and in every way extremely suitable for a show. The entries numbered 391 in the 24 classes provided, being an average of just over 16 per class, and the quality throughout was excellent. Mr. W. H. Shackleton, the noted exhibitor, officiated as judge, and this being his first appearance in this capacity, great interest was taken in his placings, which were very well received. A grand list of specials was to be competed for, many of them being of exceptional value. The show was held under Yorkshire Union rules, and the patronage of the Y.C.C. and the C.M.Y.C.C. The secretary, Mr. J. Pownall, had everything in correct order, the work being gone through with all promptitude and care. He was ably assisted by Messrs. Turner, Lambert, W. Williams, T. Williams, Jagger, and a strong committee.

WAKEFIELD & DIST. ROLLER C.C.

The fifth annual singing contest was held in the Guild Room, Co-operative Hall, on Dec. 13th and 14th. The show was in every way a success. Visitors came from Belton, Worksop, and other places. The room had been beautifully decorated by the ladies. Entries were more numerous than last year. The show was opened by the Mayor, W. H. Kingswell, Esq., who gave great encouragement. The Secretary is Mr. J. Netherwood, to whom much of the credit for the success of the show is due. Messrs. C. Roehl and W. Whittaker judged.

BARROW.

The Barrow and Dis. C.B.A. held their tenth annual open show in Abbey Road, Barrow-in-Furness on December 13th and 14th. It was held at the Baths, almost within a stone's throw of Barrow Station. It is a place admirably suited for an exhibition of this kind; it has a glass roof which ensures good light. The exhibits were nicely arranged at a convenient height, doing away with the necessity for handling the birds. Entries hardly came up to expectations, in view of the excellent schedule sent out. This, no doubt, was owing to the clashing with Gateshead, but if not good in numbers they were well up in quality. Many really grand birds were present in almost every variety. Much credit is due to the Secretary, Mr. Wm. Willison, for his masterly handling of the show, everything going off smoothly and well. He was ably assisted by a strong committee of fanciers, of whom Mr. F. Wynn is president. The stewards were Messrs. I. Galt, Morrell, Crosby, Danson, Graves, R. Willison, E. Price, Higman and Scott, all of whom did good service, and everything possible was done for the comfort of the exhibits in their care. Mr. A. Wellings, of Prescot, judged, and his awards seemed to give satisfaction.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS AND DIS. F.A.

A members' show was held on Decemher 11th at the Camden Hall, when some excellent birds were staged. Entries turned up exceedingly well. The sec., Mr. H. G. Whibley, had tho arrangements well in hand, and in apple-pie order, and he deserves every credit. Messrs. Wraight and Knapp judged, and their awards appeared to give satisfaction. BRIT., LARGE: 1, 2, Warner; 3, Waters.

DOVE HOLES.

The first show of the Dove Holes F.S. was held in the schoolrooms on December 14th. The cage bird section was very well patronised considering that this was a new venture, and that several important cage bird shows were taking place in the Northern district on the same day. There was a lack of good staging (owing to no fault of the committee), and, in consequence, the birds were not shown to very great advantage, but they received every attention, and were all fit and well for the public inspection. Norwich (II), with the winner of special for best cage bird and British (13), were the best classes. In these, and the class for Mules, were some useful birds shown "not for competition." Messrs. Milner and Barton, the hon. secs., are to be congratulated on the success of this their first cage bird venture, and it is hoped even further support will be rendered another year. Mr. R. Bowker, who was to have judged, finding very large entries in the other sections, Mr. W. M. Marsden placed the cage bird cards. NOR.: 1, two spls, vhc, Walker; 2, vhc, Garner, W.; 3, Millward. YORKS.: 1, Foulds, MULES: 1, spl, Hargreaves; 2, Roberts; 3, Mrs. Fowler. BRIT.: 1, spl, Newlands; 2, Penner; 3, E. Fowler; vbc, bc (no name), Starling. FOR.: 1, spl, Newton; 2, Hart; 3, Coddington. MEMBERS, A.V.: 1, spl, Spencer; 2, Price; 3, Bennett; hc, c, Newlands.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

EDINBURGH (OPEN) O.S.

The Edinburgh (open) show was held on Dec. 13 and 14. For a Scotch Fancy and Belgian show, this event surpassed all previous open events this year, and presented a pleasing contrast with the open show recently held in Edinburgh. The Artillery Hall, Grindley Street, is well adapted for the purposes of a show and the exhibits were tastefully arranged around the hall, yellow cocks being first on the left and the young Belgians being last on the right. The staging rendered every facility for a minute inspection of the birds. Everybody seemed to be deeply interested. Groups were in evidence, handling the cages and discussing the merits and demerits of the winners. A West of Scotland yellow hen, which has been a steady winner, came in for extra attention through not being placed to-day, and owing to her superior qualities over the winners. The Scotch fancies totalled 288, or an average of 12 per class, and were of extraordinary quality and full of merit. It is evident that great attention is paid to the maintenance of heavy shoulders, which, needless to say, is necessary, by reason of the decadence of the pure Belgian. The Belgians and cross classes numbered 63 or 12 per class. In quality, however, they did not come up to the Scotch Fancy classes. Several nice Belgians were staged, but there were a number more of the Scotch Fancy blood than of the Belgian; indeed it has become so much a question of "which is which" that unless a halt is called the designation will have to be changed. An encouraging feature was the demand for Scotch Fancy. There were fanciers prepared to give handsome prices for what they wanted, but the owners were immovable. Good figures were forthcoming for the winners in the selling classes. Beyond all doubt there is a future for the Scotch Fancy. The Association has been most fortunate in the selection of office bearers. Mr. McLennan, the President, is very courteous, has the great advantage of being a practical breeder and exhibitor, and puts his experiences to good use at the show. Mr. Melrose, the Secretary and Treasurer, has worked many a show; his cheery, affable manner, makes him a great favourite. It is a pity he had not double the number of entries, which he would have been only too glad to have had. The committee, consisting of Messrs. Carson, Robertson, Hope, Mcikle and Drysdale, worked hard and harmoniously; everything went off well, and they cannot be too highly praised for the noble services they rendered. The executive are also to be congratulated upon the admirable arrangements of the whole proceedings. The cup and gold medal was won by Mr. McClure (Glasgow), with his foul buff cock. Scotch Fancy were judged by Messrs. Cook (Cowdenbeath), Webster (Greenock) McVee (Bonnyrigg), and Hailstones (Edinburgh), and the Belgians and Crossbreds by Mr. Brown (Edinburgh). The awards gave general satisfaction.

LONG EATON AND DIST. C.B.S.

First members' show was held at the Blue Bell, Long Eaton, on December 1st, under the patronage of Mr. Councillor G. Smith, President, and Mr. H. M. K. Berridge, Vice-President. There were prizes galore; 25 medals, two silver cups given by Messrs. Smith and Berridge, also nine specials. It was a grand show. There were some very good exhibits, especially in the Crest class, both old and young; it was a very keen class indeed. As the club has only been in existence since March last, we can safely say that with 30 odd members we are in a happy and prosperous position. There was, however, no competition in the yellow crested (young) class, as the members that had birds were not eligible to compete for the silver cup presented by Councillor Smith, nor for the gold medal given by the society for this class. The prize went to Mr. J. Turner, secretary, his being the only bird shown. There was also a silver cup given by Mr. H. M. K. Berridge for crest-bred hens (young). For an infant club I think it stands, financially, second to none, thanks to the gentlemen interested in it, and especially to Mr. H. M. K. Berridge. While we have such gentlemen with us we shall never fail. He has the heartiest wishes of the members of this club for 1908. Prizes were presented to winner by Mr. H. M. K. Berridge, in the show rooms. Mr. J. Lowe judged.

HAMILTON, CADZOU OAK.

The annual show held December 14th, proved a record for entries. The Norwich, however, did not fulfil the expectations of the Committee After providing a splendid classification, many of the classes were half-ones; still, the quality was all that could be desired. That well-known Glasgow breeder and exhibitor, Mr. McFarlane, had forward a choice selection and obtained the coveted red card in every class except one. Mr. Menzies secured leading honours in the unflighted hens, with a grand bodied one, neat all round and well put down. Crests and Crestbreds were a fine collection, the winning birds of Mr. Gardiner's, being outstanding specimens. Mr. Sandison, of Aberdeen, judged these varieties with his usual ability. Borders followed, and as was only to be expected, were in force at this fixture. To day the East gave battle to the West, and in the majority of cases led the way. The veteran, Mr. Bennett had forward a choice team, captured no less than 7 firsts out of 12 classes. Mr. McKenzie had also forward a fine collection and managed to capture 2 firsts, his well-known buff even again leading for quality and type. This lady is at the present, an outstanding star. Mr. Gilchrist succeeded in again securing another 1st with his well tried and oft described yellow uneven, which seems to be one of the cast-iron mould, always as fresh looking as paint (its 6th successive first, I've heard). For the West, Mr. Turnbull, landed the Buff hen class cleverly with a gem for style and type. She also secured the B.F.C.C. Medal, and looked at home behind her special cards. The Novice class was really a teaser, and brought together no less than 30 (the Novices seem to be able to breed them). After careful selection, Mr. Haddow found a buff cock which he proclaimed ideal, with the result that up went the red on No. 9, Mr. Henderson's bird, and the onlookers in the gallery got a more easy breath or so, after the suspense of awaiting the result. This bird was a really good one for size, type and carriage, and in extra fine bloom. These classes were under those well-known West-country judges, Mr. Haddow and Mr. Smellie, and their awards in the majority of cases were well received, there being present a large gathering of the "midget" breeders. Mules followed, and were provided with a splendid classification and came forward in great numbers. Mr. Douglas accounted for the light classes with a pair of grand Goldie mules, both buff. One is a real gem, almost clear, except two very light eye marks, and for size all that could be desired. Both birds, however, could be improved in their toilet. The winning yellow dark, of Mr. Marlin's, Mr. Bishop's winning Greenie, and Mr. Cunningham's Goldie-Greenie, also deserve special mention. Britishers were the feature of the show, such a collection as could rasily outstrip many great provincial fixtures, and the prizes were well distributed, showing that in this variety, a corner is almost impossible, as gems are always being secured in unlikely quarters. All the winners were gems. These classes were judged by the veteran, Mr. Pettigrew, of Glasgow, and the Hon. Sec. of the S.B.B. and M.C., Mr. Farmer, of Edinburgh. They seemed to give complete satisfaction to exhibitors. One special feature of Mr. Pettigrew's judging is, he does not quietly shelve a Britisher if he has any doubts about its appearance, but in a business-like manner, tests it, and gives his award accordingly. The hall is an ideal one for a show. The weather and light were wretched at the start, but brightened up early, to the comfort of the judges. The show was nicely heated, and judging, considering the heavy classes, through in good time. As this show was blessed by a large array of beautiful and useful specials, the task was no easy one. Catalogues were on sale early, and everything went as merry as a marriage bell. The management was all that could be desired, the secretarial duties being in the hands of an expert, Mr. R. Gadsden, one of the most capable wielders of the pen, affable to visitors and exhibitors alike, and obliging down to the smallest detail. The Society are to be congratulated on having such a gentleman at the helm. He was ably assisted by his colleague, Mr. J. B. Smith, in the financial department, and the stewardship of the exhibits was under that capable veteran, Mr. Shearer. A notable feature of the show, was that all exhibitors present got their birds home, and some were on the road by 4 o'clock (remember this another year). A very pleasing opening ceremony took place when Mr. Smith, introduced to the large gathering present, Provost Pollock, and the worthy and esteemed gentleman in an eloquent speech, spoke of the good that the Cage Bird Fancy had accomplished in the district of Hamilton.

CRESSWELL.

Second annual show in connection with the Cresswell and Dis. C.B.S. took place on Dec. 14th. The "Rose and Crown" provided a very nice light room of very fair dimensions for the staging of the exhibits. This being a radius show (10 miles limit), the entry, which numbered 170 birds (exceeding last year's by far), must be considered very satisfactory, taking into account that only members of the society were allowed to compete. The quality one is bound to speak well about, as many well-known winners were on view. Norwich made a nice display, as also did the Yorkshires. Crests and Crestbreds, too, contained several very choice ones. British and Foreign helped to give tone to the exhibition. Pair classes of various descriptions were of an interesting character, and Mules provided several good crosses, which were greatly admired. The staging was carried out in neat style, those responsible deserving praise. The room was nicely warmed, and this was appreciated by all (both birds and visitors), as the day was extremely damp and chilly. Judging commenced early, and was over in good time. Cards were displayed quickly by those capable stewards, Messrs. J. and G. Freeman. President is Mr. A. Metcalfe. The show committee consists of a band of genuine fanciers, most of whom are well-known figures in the cage bird world, viz., Messrs. T. Pearson (chairman), W. Baxby (treasurer), F. Lee, T. Stinson, J. Leam, R. Knowles, W. Doxey, F. Till, A. Burrows, A. Hooton, G. Wilson, J. Freeman, J. Pearson, D. Johnson, T. Simpson, W. Pitt, A. Drabble, J. Siddall, F. Barker, and J. Hodgekiss. With such as these, no wonder everything went off smoothly and well. Mr. C. Pressley acts as secretary, and has the society's interests at heart. Courteous, he is the right man in the right place, and a better official the club could not wish for. His ambition is that Cresswell shall progress and rank still higher in the exhibition world. Medal for most entries went to Mr. T. Freeman, amongst his team being several grand specimens. Mr. J. C. Barnes (Walkley, Sheffield), had the placing of the cards, and his awards were well received. PENDLETON AND SALFORD.

The 15th annual exhibition of the Pendleton and Salford C.B.S. was held on Dec. 13th and 14th, in the Pendleton Town Hall. Entries came up wonderfully well, numbering about 550 and the quality right through the show was superb. Yorkshires made a grand display, every class containing some well known winners, the most notable being Mr. W. Bescoby's clear buff and Mr. A. Burton's buff hen, two gems of the first water and hard to find fault with. Other grand Yorks. were staged by Messrs. Galling, Wilson and Dooley. Greens, both Yorkshires and Norwich, were well to the front, both in numbers and quality. Messrs. Clayton, Deacon, Moss, Walker and Jenkins staged birds of exceptional merit. Norwich, as might be expected in the Manchester district, were a hot lot as regards quality, although not in numbers, well-known winners at all the leading shows this season were on view. The principal winners were Messrs. Hirst, Cook, Dent, Trengove, and Raynes. Some exquisite birds were put down by Messrs. Bayley, Smart and Drinkwater in the Border classes, but perhaps the most striking specimen was the wing ticked buff exhibited by Mr. J. Smart, this bird being an ideal Border. In the A.O.V. Canary, Mr. Hampshire won with a grand Silver Lizard. British and Mule classes brought together many well known faces, including Mr. J. Almond's Hawfinch and Mr. J. Walsh's Wryneck. Members' classes too contained some very good specimens especially in the Yorkshire classes. The special prizes for members were won by Messrs. Cassin, Stocker, Fish (2), Durnford, Jones, Savage, Aspinall, and Whalley. The room in which the show was held is an ideal one for a cage bird show; it is very spacious and ample room is provided for both exhibits and visitors. The Secretary, Mr. W. Jackson, assisted by such well known and respected fanciers' as Mr. O Stringer, Assistant Secretary, Mr. S. Cook, Treasurer, and Messrs. Turner, Hindley, Mills, Pollard, Fryer, J. Wilkinson, Jas. G. Wilkinson, Fish, Aspinall, McCann, Clayton, Boswell, Holland and Skelton, had complete control. Everything was in first-class order and all the exhibits were well cared for. The judges were Messrs. W. Booth (Hyde), and Mr. H. W. Battye (Huddersfield), and we heard no complaints.

BANFF.

The Banff O. and F.A. held their annual show on December 11th in the St. Andrew's Hall. The entries numbered 220 all told, an increase on those of last year. Cage birds were nicely staged along the back of the room facing the light. The British made a grand display, as also did the Foreign. The hon. secretary, Mr. A. McKenzie, had everything in the best of order, and deserves every credit. He received every assistance from a very willing committee. Mr. John Lyon made the awards. NOR. YELL. READING.

The plucky endeavour of the Reading C.B.S. to resuscitate an interest in the cultivation of exhibition Canaries and British and Foreign birds was attended with a considerable amount of success in the fixture at the Palmer Hall, on December 11th. The exhibits were drawn from a radius of 30 miles, and it is hoped that in the near future this limit will be done away with. Mr. Robson finished judging in good time. The local exhibits were not in some classes so good as we have seen in past years, and there is plenty of fanciers' work to be done yet. The success of this venture, however, must encourage every member to increased exertion. Great credit is due to the officials of the Society. The Chairman is Mr. J. Brooker, and Mr. C. J. Howlett is the Treasurer. The committee consist of the following gentlemen: Messrs. Clark, Fraser, Yates, Lawrence, Hopgood, North, Mead, and Packwood. Mr. G. A. Charles proved as usual an energetic and indefatigable Secretary, and had everything in apple-pie order. He deserves great praise for the able management of the show.

BEGINNERS: READ "CAGE BIRDS" ANNUAL.

Do not overlook our XMAS COMPETITIONS during the Holidays.

CARMARTHEN.

This very old-established show was held as usual in conjunction with the local show on December 12th, under C.B.U. rules. Every year witnesses a very attractive and important event in the history of the ancient town of Carmarthen. The keenest of interest is taken in the cage bird section. The large, heated room, with its lino, clear, side windows, where the cage birds were staged, is admirably suited for the purpose. Elevated as it is, it being on the second floor, there is abundance of light. A good classification, particularly for British and Hybrids, was offered, and a substantial list of specials. The entries, on the whole, were a record, and would even have been greater had not two or three other societies in the district been holding their shows at just about the same time. There were some very good Norwich and Yorks. on view, and a few of the crack Swansea Borders turned up. The local Canary class was a strong one. Hybrids were very good, but few, and those sent came in for rather easy wins. Britishers were very good indeed, and as usual the two Goldfinch classes held the fort. The old birds numbered 24, all more or less of very superior merit. The Grey Pates (16 of them) were wonderfully promising youngsters, particularly the ticketed birds, and in each of these classes the committee allowed an extra 3rd to be awarded. Mr. S. Gwyther won Hyde's Special with a good dark Crest. Mr. Tedstone won special best in Crest and Pluinhead Nor. section with a rattling Yell. Nor. Mr. Tom Morris won special for best Yorks., and also special for best Canary in show, with a beautifully fine drawn typical clear Yellow, which will even yet improve to the increasing credit of its owner. The special for best local Canary went to Mr. R. Bevan, with a really good class var. Crestbred buff. Messrs. Williams and Morgan won special for best Goldfinch in show, whilst Mr. J. Griffiths won special for best local Goldie with a grand Grey Pate. Mr. Richard Jackson won special for best local Bullfinch, and Mr. Lohr special in gift class. Mr. Alf. Crabb once again acted as secretary and manager of the cage bird section, and a right royal efficient manager is he. He leaves nothing to chance, and deserves all the support fanciers can give. The cage bird stewards were Messrs. T. Evans, H. Lohr, J. Griffiths, Jackson, and A. Crabb. Mr. Jack Francis, the secretary for the whole show, is a fine fellow, and most finished in his methods of carrying out his huge task. Fanciers from far and near shared the spoil, and no one swept the deck—so to speak. For a one-day show, closing at four p.m., as it does, it is a show worth sending to, for the birds are away from home for a very little time. We learn that Mr. Manley's Waxwing, entered here, has died. No doubt the owner will miss such a good bird. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged.

BUCKINGHAM.

The seventh annual show of the Buckingham and Dis. F.S. was held on Dec. 12th. Some excellent exhibits were staged and the cage bird section proved highly successful. Much of the credit for this is due to the Secretary, Mr. G. Simonds, who worked with a will. Mr. G. H. Billett judged and his awards gave satisfaction.

NORWICH: 1, spl, 2, Lewin, both good typical birds, very tight, highly red-fed; 3, 4, hc, Simonds, third good red-fed yell., rather smaller than first and second, but good, sound bird; fourth and hc good birds, but in natural colour. BRIT.: 1, spl, 2, 3, 4, ex. 4, vhc, Simonds; vhc, Master Cooper; in this class, Mr. Simonds sent down a grand team of Britishers, this evidently is his Fancy, first spl, and second, two grand Goldfinches, first also took special for best cage bird in show, third good Bramhlefinch, fourth a good coloured Chaffinch, vhc, nice Greenfinch; vhc, Master Cooper, good Goldfinch.

LOUGHBOROUGH C.B.S.

Third Members' Show was held at the Cross Keys Hotel, Loughborough, on Dec. 11th. The entries were not quite up to those of other shows in number, but were quite as good in quality. Mr. J. H. Roe judged. Norwich were in strong evidence, and Messrs. Hallam and Dufner showed some very fine specimens. There was also keen competition amongst the Britishers.

KILSYTH.

Kilsyth and Dis. F.A. held their annual open show on December 14th in the Drill Halls, Kilsyth. Pres., Mr. Alexr. Hardie; vice-pres., Mr. Wm. Irvine; Treas., Mr. Jas. Paterson; Hon. Sec., Mr. Andn. D. Duncan; Executive, Messrs. D. McLean, J. Barrie, A. Methven, A. Wilson, T. McAulay, W. McGrenchan, Jas. J. Little, Wm. Inglis, A. London, G. Shillinglaw, R. Reid, T. Inglis, Jas. Pollock, and Wm. Morton. The show was held in two separate halls this year, which was a distinct advantage, and Cage Birds were separated and occupied a well-lighted hall, free from draughts, and one which provided ample room for the exhibits. There was a very nice turn out, there being some well-known winners staged. Scotch Fcy. class were cancelled this year for lack of support, but Norwich Borders and British classes were in advance of former years both in point of entries and of quality. There was a large turn-out of visitors at both halls, and Sec. A. D. Duncan, assisted by an able committee, are to be congratulated on having the exhibits and the general comfort of the visitors, so well looked after and the arrangements so complete. Nothing was left undone to ensure success. Friend Duncan is an ideal secretary, and has the Association's welfare thoroughly at heart. The Judges were:—Nor., Mr. G. Campbell (Glasgow); Bord. Fcy., Mr. G. Hislop (Stirling); Brit. Birds, etc., Jas. Clark (Rothesay). There were 27 classes. The Border Fcy. Cup, for best young Bor. Fcy., bred by a member, was won by that well-known breeder, Mr. W. Irvine, with a gem of a cl. Buff Cock. The cup now becomes his own property, having won it three times; he is also winner of Mr. Hardie's Cup for most points in any one class, which carries with it a badge for winner. This was a popular win Bord. Fcy. Medal winner was Mr. A. McWatt with an even-marked cock of exceptional merit, in lovely order first time shown. In the Nor. Section the spl. for best crest cock (open and conf. spl.) was won by Mr. Geo. Shillinglaw's even-marked Crest Cock, a beauty, staged in A1 condition. The Judges' awards seemed to give general satisfaction—grumblers being conspicuous by their absence. CANTERBURY.

Canterbury F.S. held their annual show at the Lower Corn Exchange, on Dec. 11th and 12th. At the time of judging the sun was shining brightly for the time of year, and being a very light hall, it was a most appropriate room in which to hold a show. Mr. J. W. Sargeant, the hon. treasurer and secretary, had the arrangements well in hand, and is deserving of much praise; his good working committee too are to be congratulated for having everything in readiness for judging at 9 o'clock. The judging was finished, and the cards were up ready for opening by 2 o'clock. The opening ceremony was performed by the Mayor of Canterbury, F. Bennett Goldney, Esq., who, in a very affable speech, expressed his great pleasure at being present. In the Norwich section, the principal winners were: Messrs. Gibbs Patterson and Taylor. In Yorkshires, Messrs. Gibbs, Reeve and Sales exhibited some fine specimens. In Border Fancy, Messrs. Lockett and Bowes were well to the front. Mules and Hybrids were exceptionally good, and Messrs. Taylor, Pilcher and Faux were the winners. In the British classes, Messrs. Wickham, Curd, Patterson and Brett carried off the prizes. Mr. F. J. Wickham, with a very fine Goldfinch, and Mr. Curd, with an exceptionally good Bullfinch, Mr. Patterson, with a beautiful Linuet, which was 1st and spl in the "any other variety of Finch" class, and in the "any other variety of British, not larger than a Thrush," Mr. Brett won with his Shrike, which was in splendid form. In foreign birds, Miss V. Conway Gordon won with her beautiful Pekin Nightingales. There were some good birds in the selling classes at very reasonable prices. In some classes, through insufficient entries, the prizes were withheld. Judge, Mr. J. Dobson.

MELBOURNE.

The fourteenth annual open show of the Melbourne and Dis. F.A. was held in the Public Hall, on Dec. 14th. The management was in the hands of a very capable committee. Mr. J. Hicklin is Secretary, and right well did he carry out his duties. It is an office for which he is well fitted. The show was smoothly worked; the comfort of the visitors was well considered and everything was done to deserve the success which resulted. The Public Hall is a good one for the purpose, being lofty, well lighted on both sides, and nicely heated. The pleasant temperature maintained was conducive to the well being of exhibits and exhibitors. Sad to relate, the entries in the Norwich section were insufficient to secure the classes standing, and the committee were reluctantly compelled to cancel them. The competition in the remaining classes was very keen indeed, and more than one set of winners could have been placed. Mr. J. R. Rae adjudicated.

YORKS. YELL. (6): 1, spl, 2, Wall, leader nice reachy bird, good position, level colour, second similar, good length; 3, Andrews, very near first; 4, York, racy looking, comes quickly to attention; vhc, Wall, another good one, winners well placed. BRIT., SMALL (11): 1, Poole, Blackcap, well-known exhibit, certainly top sawyer; 2, Hexter, Goldfinch, the Mansfield winner, looking very fit; 3, Dallman and Son, Bullie, in good form, tight as wax, not a feather awry; vhc, Barton, Twite, nice colour, and steady; hc, Dallman and Son, sweet Linnet, steady as a rock, wonderful quality of feather, lacked pencilling; c, Sale, hot-fed Goldie, stiff class; Greenfinch, winner Darley Dale, stood cardless.

GLASGOW AND WESTERN COUNTIES.

This Norwich, Mule, British and Foreign Bird Club held their show at the Good Templer's Hall, Glasgow, on Dec. 7, and it proved a record for Scotland, close on 650 birds being staged. Some grand specimens of the various varieties were on view, notably a grand buff Plainhead cock, shown by A. McFarlane, which we thought unlucky to lose cup for best bird. Mr. Malcolmson's unfl. yell. hen was an ideal Nor., and Mr. W. Johnston won cup for best Mule and cup for best Bird, with a grand Greenie-Bullie, which should do well with another moult. Mr. D. Donaldson won cup for best Plainhead, Crest or Crestbred, with a nice Crest, Mr. D. Hamilton taking cup for Borders with a clear buff hen and also Border Fancy Club medal. The British Bird Cup was secured by a boy of 14 summers, Master Mat Kerins. The winner was a grand Missel Thrush. The show for management could hardly be excelled, every one working like Trojans, from the genial President, Mr Pettigrew, down to the humble committeeman; everything was well arranged. The officials consisted of the following well-known exhibitors:—President, Mr. Peter Pettigrew, Vice-Presidents, Messrs. Alex. McFarlane, Alex. Brownlie, and John Young. Committee: Messrs. D. McKeuzie, D. Johnstone, J. Roddie, J. Erskine, J. Roulstone, G. McAlpine, J. Herbert. Treasurer, Mr. A. Malcolmson. Assistant Secretary, Mr. W. Jack. The Secretary is Mr. J. H. Adam, who deserves every credit for his able management of affairs. Norwich made a grand show, but Borders did not come quite up to expectations. Mules and British were grand—34 Linnets, 25 Lesser Polls, Greenies, 22, and many other classes equally well filled. Messrs. T. Knight, J. Lappin and J. Taylor judged, and their awards appeared to give every satisfaction.

HARMLESS TO OTHER ANIMALS.

HARROGATE.

Held on December 14th, in the St. James's Hall, a very nice place for the purpose, though on this occasion it was too small for the number of exhibits staged. Twenty classes were scheduled and with only one class at half prize money and with a total entry of 314 the Society may be considered to have done well with an average of 16 per class. They did especially well when it is remembered that there were so many shows being held on the same day. Open Yorkshires, with five classes, had 73 entries, some of the best birds in the country being on view in this section. Cinnamon marked Yorkshires were only moderate, 18 in two classes. Novice Yorkshires, with four classes, received an entry of 77, averaging over 19 per class. Many grand birds were to be seen in this section, and it would be hard to define the line as regards type and quality, which is supposed to divide the novice from the old hands. Norwich, with only one class, had 29 entries, and we think the Society might cater on a more liberal scale for this popular variety. Mules were a capital lot, while the British were simply grand, both in quality and numbers. An entry of 61 in four classes is distinctly good, and competition in this section was very keen indeed. The quality in the two Foreign classes was well above the average; 20 exhibits were staged. The local firm, Messrs. Hollins and Son took the bulk of the prizes in the class for large, while Mr. Pickles won in the class for small. The arrangements within the limited room at the disposal of the committee were first-class. The President of the Society is Mr. H. Milling and the Vice-Presidents are Messrs. Mitchell, Muson, Schuntz, Thorpe, and Bailey. The Secretary, Mr. Geo. H. Barnwell, makes a very able official. The extreme care and attention which he bestowed on the details of the show are deserving of great praise. His assistant, Mr. Wm. Brown, too, worked hard and well. The light during judging was very bad, but improved afterwards. Taking all in all we think the show was a great success and everything passed off without a hitch. Mr. H. W. Battye judged, and his awards were well received.

LEIGHTON.

The eighth annual show was held in the Corn Exchange on December 10th, but we were sorry to find that a number of the classes had to be cancelled through an insufficient number of entries We see no reason why Leighton should not have a capital show, providing the schedule is revised and the entry fee of 2s. (which is too much for cage birds) is reduced, and we are pleased to be able to state that the officers have promised to look into the matter before another season comes round. The secretaries, Messrs. A. and W. Page, and the committee, are to be congratulated upon the manner in which they carry out their duties, and we sincerely hope that another year they will be rewarded by seeing a very much larger entry. Mr. J. C. Wilmot made the awards. NOR., NAT. COLOUR (6): 1, Vaisey, capital all-round bird, good head and quality of feather, nicely rounded chest; 3, Gentle, excellent coloured bird for a natural; 4, Dr. Rose, sweetly pretty hen, in rare condition; vhc, Smith, smart bird, on the small side. CLACKMANNANSHIRE.

The Clackmannanshire and Dis. C.B.S. held their annual show in the Co-operative Hall, Alloa, on Dec. 7th. The entries came up very well indeed, in fact there was a record entry. The Scotch Fancy classes were somewhat short, but quality here was tip-top. Norwich were good, while the Border Fancy and British classes were all that could be desired. The Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. J. W. Boocock, is deserving of the greatest credit for the able manner in which he managed the show. He knows his duties well and what is more knows how to fulfil them. Mr. Frank Love is the President, and Mr. Peter Harrower is the Vice-President. There was some keen competition for the Society's cup, which was won by Mr. Robt. Cousins. Ramsden's medal and Hyde's special were won by Messrs. C. Burnett and P. Harrower, respectively. There were many visitors throughout the day and the show proved in every way a success. Messrs. Condie (Clackmannan), and J. F. Dewar judged, the former taking the Scotch Fancies and the latter the rest.

The Yorkshire Canary.

By T. C. CRAWHALL.

A Lecture given by the Secretary of the Northern Yorkshire Canary Club before the Jarrow and District C.B.F.S., on November 12.

The following lecture constitutes the first part of a series of lectures arranged between the Jarrow and Dis. C.B.F.S., writes Mr. J. T. Carrick, the sec., and Mr. T. C. Crawhall, secretary of the Northern Yorkshire C.C. It was entitled "Gleanings on the Yorkshire Canary—the Gentleman of the Canary Family." Mr. J. Campbell presided, and in a very pleasing speech introduced the lecturer for the evening. At the conclusion of the lecture, which was listened to with rapt attention, a good few questions were asked, Mr. Crawhall answering them to the satisfaction of all. The secretary, Mr. Carrick, moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Crawhall, and in doing so said he hoped it would not be long before he came amongst them again. Mr. R. Wilkinson, vice-chairman, seconded in a very encouraging speech, and the vote, on being put to the meeting, was carried with acclamation. Mr. Crawhall very suitably responded, stating his willingness to go down at any future time if he could be of any service to the Society and its members. The lecturer and myself then retired to a supper kindly provided by the host of the evening, Mr. R. Hutler, whose bird room was afterwards inspected. The very promising Yorkshires of this keen fancier were much admired.

Mr. Crawhall spoke as follows:—

I have called the Yorkshire the gentleman of Canaries, and surely he deserves that title, for to see a real good Yorkshire showing himself off, drawing himself up, bracing his wings, and moving his head from side to side, reminds us of those human beings who always dress to perfection, and are a pattern of neatness and trimness. Amongst all the members of the Canary family I know none that so takes the eye at first sight as the Yorkshire, unless it be the wee Border.

A Yorkshire Defined.

Before going on to consider how to breed a good Yorkshire, let us decide what a good Yorkshire is, and what is the standard by which it should be judged. It is generally admitted that the best Yorkshires at the present time are in the county of Yorkshire, and the exhibitors there are able to hold their own against all outsiders; but I hope, with the advent of the two new societies—the one in the South, and the other in the North—that before long there will be keen friendly rivalry as to who shall hold the palm for superiority. As you know there are in Yorkshire two societies who practically control the destinies of the Yorkshire Canary, viz., The Yorkshire Canary Club, and the Yorkshire Union. Under the protection of these two societies the Yorkshire has evolved from a large, ungainly bird, somewhat resembling a thin Lancashire, to the present standard, I will not say of perfection, but approaching to perfection.

These two societies have each adopted a standard by which Yorkshires should be judged. The standards and scales of points for judging are practically the same, the only difference I notice is in the question of length. The Union say that the length shall not exceed 6¾ in. The Yorkshire Canary Club merely state, length 6¾in. I here give you the scale of points for clear birds. Shape.—Head, small and round, skull narrow, 5. Neck, moderately long, straight, 5. Shoulders, narrow, rounded, well filled, 5. Back, long, straight, well filled; wings, long and evenly carried, 5. Breast, round and smooth, the body long and gradually tapering to a neat waist, 5. Legs, long, without being stilty; thighs well clothed, 5. Tail, long, straight, and closely folded, 5. Size.—Length, 6¾in., with corresponding symmetrical proportions, 10. Position.—Attitude erect, with fearless carriage; head, neck, back and tail in straight line, 20. Feather.—Close, short and tight, compact body feather, and close carriage of tail and wings, 20. Colour.—Pure body colour; back, legs, and feet clear, 5. Condition.—Health, cleanliness, and sound feather, 10. Total, 100.

The Importance of Shape.

By this you will notice that shape counts 35 points. This is divided into seven divisions of 5 points each—head, neck, shoulders, back and wings, breast and body, legs, tail. The next is 10 points for size, 6¾in. long, with corresponding symmetrical proportions. Not a great many points for size, yet some judges will go in almost entirely for size; but I will refer to this later on. The next division carries 20 points, namely, position. Attitude erect, with fearless carriage; head, neck, back and tail in straight line. Feather also carries 20 points. Thus you see attitude or position, and feather carry almost half of the total number of points, and five more than shape. Then, to make up the total, we have colour 5, condition 10.

You will see from this that the chief things to be aimed at when breeding Yorkshires for exhibition purposes are position, feather, and correct shape. The coloured plates which have been issued with the special numbers of Cage Birds will give a good idea of the shape that a Yorkshire should be.

The True Ideal.

During last show season I endeavoured to carry in my mind's eye the plate depicting the three champions of the previous season, and have compared the birds I have seen winning in this district with them, and I am bound to confess that, with a few exceptions, they are of a very different type to these three.

Very few of them have that fine, long-drawn wedge-shape about them. Most of them were longer, but we cannot be sure that the picture shows the actual length of the birds, for the artist had to get three birds into a certain space, and in order to get all three shown to advantage may, have reduced the actual size. You will notice how each of these birds is particularly neat in the head, with round, well-placed eye; the neck is well filled in, showing just the slightest sign of indentation; there is no prominent rounding of the breast; if we take a line from the shoulder to tip of tail, and from breast to tail tip, we have a gradual and even tapering of the body, thus forming a finely-shaped wedge. This is the side view; if we could see the birds from behind we should see the same wedge-shape running from each shoulder to tip of tail. Thus you might compare the bird's body to an elongated funnel.

Now we come to the legs. The thighs must show nicely, and be well covered with fine feather, the legs be of a good length, yet not too long to make the birds have a stilty look. The feet should grip the perch firmly, and the birds stand and look at you as much as to say "Aren't we beauties?" I think these coloured plates by Mr. Norman, which have been issued in Cage Birds from time to time, are most helpful to us who are so isolated from the leading breeders and exhibitors, as they show us the type of bird we want to aim for, and whether we are buying or pairing we want to keep our ideal before us.

The Vexed Question of Length.

To be successful it is necessary to have the true ideal before us. This is sometimes a difficult matter, especially when we see various judges choosing different types of birds. I suppose public opinion and judges' opinions are liable to variation at times. We cannot all have the same ideal, but I do think our judges should endeavour to come to some arrangement amongst themselves as to what is the correct type—the true ideal. Could they not have a conclave amongst themselves, and decide finally these vexed questions? At one show last season a very prominent firm of Yorkshire exhibitors got no higher than V.H.C.; yet when they go to the Palace they practically sweep the deck.

We have the authority of one judge—and that a very prominent one, too—that if he were judging where Union patronage was given he could not give a prize to a bird which exceeded 6¾ in. in length; but if judging at a show which was not held under Union rules, and all other things being equal, he would award that bird first, because length was the most difficult thing to obtain. It is quite possible that length may be the most difficult thing to obtain, but still, the Union controls the greater part of the breeders of Yorkshires, and they are not trying to breed for length but for type and quality; and by their standard, and also the Yorkshire Canary Club's, only 10 points out of 100 are given for length.

On Preparing for Hybrid Breeding.

By T. H. KINCH.

[A few hints on the preparation of birds for Hybrid breeding, and recommendations as to crosses to be employed, are given by the author, himself an "old hand" in this branch of our hobby.—Editor.]

The present is a good time to begin preparations for next season's Hybrid breeding. In the first place, all cages should be thoroughly overhauled, and well cleaned inside and out with turpentine, carbolic, or paraffin. They should be put out of doors for a few days, and then well scrubbed, and either enamelled or whitewashed inside and varnished outside.

After the cages have been got into order you can get your birds and place in them at once, in order that they may get used to each other and to the cages. A good plan also is to put a nest-box for them to get used to. Of course, this will want a good cleaning again before the birds start to nest. If they should be fresh caught birds, it will be some time before they settle down and get used to their new surroundings; but by the time the breeding season comes round, no doubt, if properly cared for, they will be quite steady.

Breeding Facilities.

All kinds of British Birds now-a-days can be got cheaply; they are within the reach of all. And a cheap cage can soon and easily be made from a box; this will answer the purpose just as well as a fancy or expensive breeding cage. I know of one budding fancier who two years ago made such a cage and got three young Hybrids at the first time of asking, from a cock Linnet and hen Bullie, both of which were caught after Christmas. As luck would have it, however, they proved to be all hens, and the next year he lost the Bullie through feeding it entirely on hemp, with no green food or buds, which caused it to be egg-bound. He then turned up the game in disgust. No doubt others have done the same, when things have failed to go quite right.

The Art of Crossing.

Both Mule and Hybrid breeding require a lot of patience before one can obtain the desired object, and breed show specimens. I was recently asked if success could not be reached in the Muling line by using a rare-feathered bird, or an Albino Finch. My friend, the querist, is quite "gone" on this theory; he thinks this will be the quickest way to get to the goal, but I much doubt it. Anyway, he is going to give it a good trial, and if he should prove successful, I shall be able to speak of his experience in Cage Birds. I always like to hear of anyone starting out in a new line; if it should end in failure there is still something to be learned from the experiment. Once he had great faith in the Cheveral Goldfinch; he tried for years, but could not breed as light a Mule as from the ordinary Finch. His hens were "sib-bred," and of his own breeding, and hens out of the same nest were used for both Finches.

The Redpoll-Bullie Cross.

I should strongly advise any new beginner to try the Redpoll-Bullie cross. Both these birds can be got very cheaply, and if the breeder is successful a beautiful Hybrid will be the result. I have heard of one being bred this season in an aviary amongst other birds. If any one has an out-door aviary, I should strongly advise him to place several cocks to a few hens, in fact, he might have double the number of cocks, so that if one does not take the hen, another may.

I believe that in the case in question there were three cocks to one hen. When she called to pair, the Linnet took no notice, but the Redpoll acted at once. Even in a roomy cage you might use two cocks to one hen, one would encourage the other, and you might then stand a better chance.

I intend to try this plan myself this coming season, but I feel quite sure anyone would stand a great deal better chance in an outdoor aviary. Those who intend to go in for Hybrid breeding, should now lay in a stock of various kinds of berries, also the beech mast, and give them to the birds daily.

The Bramble-Chaffinch Cross.

Another cross I should advise anyone to try is the Bramble-Chaffinch. Young from this cross have been got, but I believe only in an aviary; I don't think they have been produced as yet in a cage. But I am open to correction. Then one might try the opposite way—the Chaffinch-Bramble. I have had Bramblefinch hens go to nest and lay and sit well. If you get any eggs in an aviary I should certainly leave them alone and let the mother deal with them, provided, of course, the other inmates do not interfere.

I was very pleased to read of two good light Siskin Mules being bred in Scotland; I should certainly advise trying the Siskin in various ways; that is, with Canaries and British birds.

THE BREEDING AND EXHIBITING OF BORDER FANCY CANARIES.

By James Bulfield.

During the show season a little egg food once a week may be given. If a bird is out of sorts a dose of from 10 to 15 drops of whiskey in the drinking water will set it right, if given for a few days.

Preparation of Show Birds.

Having made up your mind to show your birds, enter at a certain show, obtain a schedule from the secretary, and go carefully through the rules, in order to avoid making mistakes. Note what classes are provided for your breed (in this case Borders). Having done this, ascertain which of your birds is most likely to win. Thenceforward you must keep your eye on those birds until they are safely sent off to the show.

Run the birds into their show cages whenever you have a few minutes to spare. The steadier you can get your birds the greater chance they will have of catching the judge's eye. To my own knowledge, steady birds have beaten better ones than themselves, but which lacked their steadiness. Three or four days before the show give the birds a good wash, using three bowls of lukewarm water, the first for getting the dirt out, the others for rinsing. Use a fine badger-hair shaving brush, and be sure you get all the dirt out of the neck, which is always the worst part. When finished roll the bird in a strip of flannel, and place in the drying cage before a good fire. Before doing so, however, use a soft handkerchief to get as much moisture out of the feathers as possible. In a quarter of an hour the bird may be taken out of the flannel and put back in the drying cage, after which he will soon be seen on the perches preening his feathers.

Every day before the show lightly spray the bird. On the night before the show pack your birds securely, making sure that the labels are on their proper cages, also that they are properly addressed to the secretary of the show you have entered. Having handed over the birds to the tender care (or otherwise) of the railway company, you must possess your soul in patience until your birds return (with the coveted first and special, as the case may be).

Do not enter at too many shows, or both you and your birds will most likely suffer. Let me impress upon you, in conclusion, that the maxim, "What's worth doing at all is worth doing well," holds good here. If you follow it you will be well repaid by the pleasure your birds will afford you; they will impart to you some of their cheerfulness, and will help to pay the seed bill by bringing you a few cards and cheques.

The foregoing is written by one who, though he has only been a few years in the Fancy, has been fairly successful, which, after all, is what we are all striving for. Take your losses with a good heart, remembering that your birds are only a hobby after all.

The Rise and Progress of my Foreign Bird Contingent.

By W. R. SMELLIE, M.A.

A Name Boiled.

When Mr. Cutthroat decides to favour everyone in general, and his mate in particular, with a song, the effort is killing. He straightens himself up, beak in the air, and swells out his throat with the air and style of a professional; but the air and the style are the most of it. If a Budgerigar happens to be arguing with a Waxbill, about a piece of grass, nothing of the song is heard; but if all is quiet then a low crooning melody, containing about three low notes, can be distinguished.

The vocalist himself, however, is by no means displeased with the effort, and shows off to his hen and expresses his self-approbation at the end by a few spasmodic jerks, not unlike jumps, only the feet never leave the perch. His singing not only captivates his own hen, but it also brings an admiring hen Spice Bird to him. Her own mate, however, takes good care that she gets driven away.

About a fortnight ago the Cutthroats began house hunting, and every available husk was thoroughly inspected. The favoured spot, however, was a little bark hut, made after the pattern of one shown in one of CAGE BIRDS coloured plates, entitled "Desirable Aliens." After building a nest of rough grass, the hen laid two eggs, but she did not sit them, and is now beginning the husk inspection again, so that I am saying to myself "Better luck next time."

Cutthroats are very fine birds for an aviary. In fact, the only birds I have that I am displeased with are Love-birds, and I have decided that they have to go. There is no better hobby than aviculture, and a mixture of British and Foreign seed-eaters is my ideal.

Amusing the Birds.

The rough sketch will show how the birds are housed far better than the most elaborate word picture, but roughly speaking, the outside flight is 8ft. by 6ft. by 6ft., partly open all round, partly boarded, and they have a little open hole in the wall through which they can retreat to a part completely indoor. I have 21 foreigners and 30 Britishers and Canaries. The foreigners mostly all sleep outside; some e.g., the Cutthroats, in husks, Budgerigars and others on perches, and others in transformed travelling cages, nest boxes, and little bowers of twigs. All sleep in the boarded-in part, and are in the pink of robust health. (See last week's sketch).

I keep all food in the indoor part, so that all have to come in, beside where I sit, for their food. This device keeps them tame and confiding. I have hoppers of Canary, white millet, rape, teazle and hemp seeds, but the foreigners live mainly on the Canary and white millet. Over and above this in the outside flight I give them various tit-bits with the double purpose of amusing them, and keeping them in health. Occasionally, I suspend a few millet sprays from the roof by a string about three or four feet long. The foreigners fly at this and cling on to it, the force they come at it making it oscillate and twist about in a delightful manner. Some hang head down and some head up, and as the spray turns round all are shown to the best advantage, while the blending of the colours of the under-part of their bodies is exquisite, and is seldom seen except when the birds cling to the spray in this fashion. This gives them a slight change of diet, amuses them and amuses me.

I also throw mealworms to them and find that all the small foreigners, except the Mannikins, are very fond of them. They have great sport stealing them from each other, and they eat them in a way of their own. A Chaffinch gives the mealworm a nip on the head, swallows it and is ready for another just while you cough, but these little foreigners will run for five minutes with one squeezing and sucking at it till nothing but the dry skin is left, and it is then discarded.

A piece of cuttle-fish bone is another necessary, and it generally has some beak or other grinding and scraping at it. Again, all foreigners are passionately fond of grass in flower, and from a railway embankment close at hand I procure an endless variety of grasses, the seeds of which vary in size from the delicate, microscopic ones to seeds almost the size of corn. All are appreciated, eaten with avidity and revelled in.

Foreigners also relish dandelion heads, hardheads, thistle heads, chicken weed, shepherd's purse, lettuce, etc. The Budgerigars also would sell their own grandmother to get an old stale crust to gnaw occasionally, and it does to keep their powerful mandibles out of mischief.

Regarding the price of these foreigners, I may say that, excluding the Budgerigars, they cost on a average about 2s. to 2s. 6d. per pair, and considering their beauty and the pleasure they give, they are dirt cheap. How they can be trapped, fed, imported and retailed at that price, so as to leave a margin of profit, is a mystery to me.

Thus, the main facts to keep sight of are:—The birds are beautiful, interesting and cheap to buy; they are easy to feed and easy to keep. What then, is the logical conclusion to these premises? It is obvious. Everyone who has a spark of love of Nature or love of the beautiful ought to keep at least some of these lovely mites, and thereby provide himself with an interesting hobby and an inexhaustible fountain of pleasure and knowledge.

THE YOUNG NATURALIST.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given after next week for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be children under sixteen years of age, and must state from where stories are taken.

Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*An Unfortunate Blackbird.

Last March I was walking down the garden when I saw a hen Blackbird with a broken wing. I caught it and put it with a cock Thrush. In about three weeks the hen built a nest of straw and mud. She laid five eggs, and sat for four days, then forsook the nest. She built again but died before she laid.—Sent by NELLIE SUTTON (age 11), 2, Pleasant Cottages, High Street, Great Wakering, Essex.

Jacob, a Dog, and Two Cats.

Some time ago my big brother seeing a little Ring Dove at a sale, bought it for his little girl. When he went into the house he asked: "What shall we call it?" She at once said: "Jacob," so that is how she got her name. In two years time my brother went away, and gave me the Dove. She soon became very tame, and one day I let her out of the cage in our house. Jacob did not try to get out of the room, so I thought it would be quite safe to let it out in the open and see what it would do. I did so; she did not fly away, so after that we always let her keep out in the garden until night, when she went herself into her cage. Jacob comes in the house when she likes, and she will eat off the same plate with a dog and two cats. If our cat has a piece of food, and Jacob wants it, she will go and get it away from her. I have taught the cats not to touch her, and so they agree together and never fight. She will sit on my shoulder as long as I like, and if I make her go she will show her temper by flapping her wings and making a noise, saying "Cock-a-loo." A few days ago a tramp, seeing Jacob, caught her and put her in his pocket, but my father who was at work near, went after him and took her from him.—Sent by WALTER NORMAN (14), Manor Lodge, Gt. Paxton, St. Neots, Hunts.

Good-Bye for Ever.

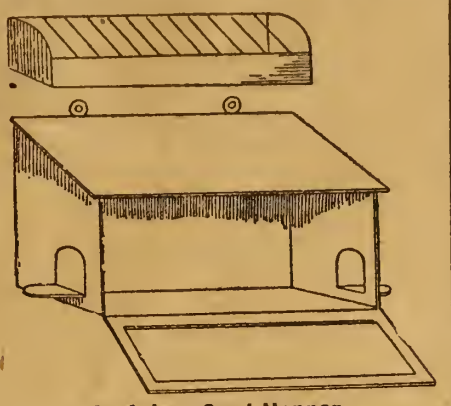
We have a Magpie and keep it in a large cage, but he is free to roam all over the house. One day he was perched against the door when a cat ran at him. He flew screeching and pecked viciously at the cat, who ran out of the house and never came in again.—HARRY SHAW (age 12), 16, Glover Road, Sheffield.

*My Little Joie.

Once I had a little bird and I called it Joie. I could do just what I liked with it. I could put my finger through its cage wires and it would twitter and fight and try to pick my finger. When we washed the cage we would hang it out in the sun, and Joie would look at you as if to say, "How delighted I am to be out here in this beautiful sun."

He sang most lovely, the best of all the birds we had. He was a Goldfinch Mule. We had it twelve years and one day father went to feed it and he found it was not very well. After a while the little bird had a fit, and died soon afterwards. We were very sorry, and now we miss it very much.—Sent by DORA BOSLEY (age 12), 5a, Broadlands Road, Portswood, Southampton.

ILLUSTRATED IDEAS



Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

No. 163.

AN AVIARY SEED HOPPER.

Sent by W. Howard, 5, Elgin Street, Ashton-under-Lyne.

I enclose a drawing of a seed-hopper, now in use in my aviary, which has been a great success so far. It holds a pound of seed, and it never allows the shells to be thrown out on the aviary floor, besides being the means of stopping the birds from throwing the seed out, and so causing a lot of waste. The cost of the hopper to make is sixpence only: two penny boxes; glass for door, penny; one pair of hinges, two screw eyes, and two hooks, twopence halfpenny; one length of cage wire, halfpenny.—W. HOWARD.

No. 164.

A SIMPLE HEATING APPARATUS.

Sent by R. H. Harrison, 81, Trevor Terrace, North Shields.

I herewith send an idea to heat an outside birdhouse, and keep the frost out. Place on the floor of birdhouse a small oil lamp, and then lay a brick flatwise at each side and at the back. On top of these place two bricks edgewise; on these bricks place a 10in. flower pot, and then another on top of it a size smaller, and then another smaller on top again. Fill the top one with charcoal, to confine and purify the heat. Care must be taken to see the lamp does not smoke. In a short while the pot will get hot and fumes will be consumed by the charcoal.—R. keep the place at a good temperature. All H. HARRISON.

WILD BIRD LIFE.

Moulting of the Mallard.

Some of the wild duck upon the pond have so far advanced in season that they are almost as gorgeous in colouring as they will be in the spring, and even now may frequently be seen mating. In the summer the Mallard loses all the beautiful sheen and brightness of plumage, and is hardly distinguishable from his sober-coloured wife; it is not an actual moult, for it is done without the loss of a feather. This change of dress takes place just prior to the moult, when he, like other water-fowl, casts the whole of the flight feathers at once, thus rendering him incapable of flight (which is the means of safety to most birds), but during the summer the food of the wild duck is plentiful, and he is able to live comfortably, and dabble about among the rushes and reeds while his flight feathers are growing. His mottle sober looking suit renders him almost unconspicuous, and he can do very well at this period without the power of flight, but later, when the wintry frost locks up the streams and ponds, where he has nested in safety, he will need those strong wings, for the Mallard wanders far in search of open waters and marshy mud-flats.

Where Birds Roost.

One sometimes wonders where the majority of our wild birds roost. It is well known the Sparrow will re-line an old nest to be used as a sleeping-place, and thus, it seems to me that the bird shows brain power considerably beyond many other species. But these cosy preparations for the winter are not made by all of them; country birds appear to be more careful in such matters than many town dwellers; possibly, overcrowding may have something to do with it. Many of our smaller birds would fail to pass the winter did they not take some precaution for warmth. A family of Blue Tits will crowd into an old nest or hole in a tree, or even in the centre of a thorn bush, which is also a favourite roosting site of the long-tailed Tit. The tiny Wren will occasionally chum with his fellows, and sleep snugly in a warm corner of a hayrick. The majority of birds no doubt roost out, the ivy round old trees in the woods giving shelter to many. One of the most interesting sights in wild bird life is to watch the feathered flocks settling down for the night. Choose the centre of a small wood an hour before sundown; if there are evergreens about watch them closely, for many birds will make use of them. The windy side of the copse is generally vacant, whilst the opposite side will be thickly tenanted upon rough nights.

Floating Birds.

It is generally thought that no birds but those that live along the sea coast are able to swim or even float upon the water, but instances have been recorded of such species as Crows and Herons floating for a short time, without any apparent inconvenience or fright. No doubt in cases of necessity other birds could do the same.

Roosting Wood Pigeons.

Wood Pigeons like to roost in company, like many other birds. A thick wood with tall trees appeals to them more than isolated places. Probably they are warmer, more sheltered from the wind, and generally safer than elsewhere. When retiring for the night they are exceedingly wary, they fly to the very topmost branches, where they sit for some time watching the surrounding country; they then flutter to the stouter branches, and settle down comfortably for the night.

Hawks and Pheasants.

It is contended by many Hawks only take the young, weakly Pheasants, thus preserving nature's method of the "survival of the fittest." One would like to think there were truth in this assertion, but it is doubtful if it should not be written the "survival of the quickest," for it is only the quick birds that get to cover first that are reared. Hawks differ considerably in the damage they do in the preserving fields. The place generally selected for the rearing of young Pheasants is a field facing the south or south-east, as plenty of sun is essential for their well-doing. This field is nearly always protected from rough winds by a wood or tall hedge, which unfortunately makes good cover for the enemies of the chicks. The bold Sparrow-hawk comes, without warning, drop over the hedge and pick up a chick before one is aware he is about. As a rule his visits are so regular that he generally falls a victim to his boldness. Occasionally a Kestrel departs from the straight path and becomes a stealer of game. When this is the case many birds will be lost before he is stopped, for he is much more cunning, and seldom comes from the same direction, nor at the same time.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 0d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

BRITISH BIRD EXHIBITORS

Read of Successes

WITH BIRDS I HAVE SUPPLIED!!

I have hundreds to pick from, being the largest dealer in British birds in the World, I can pick you out likely birds for moulting winners; beautiful cock Goldfinches, fit to win at once, 3/-, 4/-, 5/-; cock Bullfinches, ditto, 2/6, 3/-, 4/-; cock Linnets, beautifully marked and pencilled, 1/-, 1/6, 2/-; Greenfinches, 1/- and 1/6; large hen Bullfinches, 2/-. See last week's advt. for Testimonials. Estab. 1870.

J. SANDIFORD, Bird Specialist, Preston, Lancs.

SOME PEOPLE

have an idea that they cannot obtain good value from a dealer, but to convince them that this is not so, I ask them to send to me for anything advertised below on approval at my risk, and if it fails to prove entirely satisfactory, all they have to do is to return it, and I at once refund money in full. This is a plain, straightforward offer that is always strictly adhered to by me. Grand large Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, in perfect health and condition, and properly on hard seed, 2/- each, three 5/-. Few grand specimens for show or muling, and guaranteed now in full song, 3/-, 4/-, and 5/- each. Splendid large cock Brown Linnets, every one guaranteed red-breasted, 9d. each, three 2/-, six 3/6, or 5/- dozen. Special exhibition specimens, warranted in song, 1/6 each, three 4/-. Large cock Bullfinches, 1/6 and 2/- each; exhibition specimens, 3/- each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- each; few extra large rich-coloured hens, 1/6 each. Cock Larks, three 1/6, six 2/6, or 4/- dozen; specially selected cocks, guaranteed in song, 1/6 each. Cock Greenfinches, three 1/-, six 1/6. Cock Chaffinches, three 1/6, six 2/6, or 4/- dozen. Few Yellow cock Greenfinches, for exhibition, 1/- each. Grand lot Snow Buntings, all in full plumage, steady, and well on seed, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 3/6, or 6/- dozen; few extra special large cocks, almost white, well marked and ready for immediate exhibition, 2/6 each. Arrived on 11th inst., second consignment of the genuine Siberian cock Goldfinches, in superb condition, price 4/6 each; 28/- stick of seven. Few exhibition cocks, 7/6 and 10/- each. These Siberian Goldfinches are imported direct by me in single wicker cages, and must not be confused with the ordinary Russian birds now being sold as Siberians. I am the only direct importer in the provinces, and customers may rest assured that no dealer or advertiser is allowed to sort them over before being offered to the public. Handsome two-year-old white-legged English cock Goldfinch, guaranteed has bred Mules and in full song, 7/6. Twice cage-moulted clear-cut cheveral cock Goldfinch muler, in full song, and feeds from finger, 12/6. Extra large Pea-throated cock, grandly built with extra good show points, 6/-. Few good genuine pink-eyed Sib. bred hen Canaries, guaranteed light muling strain, 3/- and 4/- each. Handsome two-year-old cock Blackbird, hand-reared, finger-tame, and grand songster, guaranteed to sing anywhere and at any time, 10/-, with new cage. Ditto cock Song Thrush, 7/6, with cage. All on approval at my sole risk. See previous issues for countless testimonials. Inspection invited any time. Hundreds upon hundreds of birds always on view. By far the largest dealer in Midlands.

BIRD CATCHERS.

Buy from Maker, and get best value obtainable; it would never pay me to send out cheap and blown together goods. I have been in the trade for years, and still sell more nets than all other so-called makers combined. Every article is sent out on approval; cash or deposit system; if not thoroughly satisfied return them and your money will be refunded; not a single article has been returned this season, but testimonials come in, by every post, although I seldom publish them. Here is one selected from scores, guaranteed unsolicited:—"Great Baddow, Chelmsford, Essex. Dear Sir,—Please send me a pair Clapnets, as per CAGE BIRDS, 18ft. by 4½ft.; amount enclosed. I had a pair of a Birmingham man which were practically useless.—Yours truly, S. G. Crisp." You can't afford to keep buying, but take my advice and buy a genuine article. Clapnets, best superfine Irish flax thread, strongest and most invisible netting made, made rot proof, colour: tan, green, drab, grey; mesh: ¼in. 5-8th in. and ¾in.; working on improved steel sockets, etc.; fastest and easiest working nets obtainable, all complete, ready for use with working drawings, 66 sizes, poles, pegs, lines, sockets, irons, two nets (each one, size stated), carrying bags, 9ft. by 3ft. 6/-, 12ft. by 3ft. 7/6, 15ft. by 3ft. 8/6, 18ft. by 3ft 9/6, 24ft. by 4½ft. 14/-, 30ft. by 5ft. 17/6, 36ft. by 6ft. 21/-. Single nets, very successful, easy set, folds up, carried in pocket, own invention, 15ft by 4½ft. 5/-, 18ft. by 4½ft. 5/6, 24ft. by 6ft. 7/6, all complete directions. Lark Nets, Lark catchers will have no other, 22yds. long, 14ft. wide, small mesh, complete, 21/-. Baker, Herbert-st., Bedminster.

MY WORD!

If you don't read this you will make a mistake; you know that to purchase faulty and useless birds is like throwing your money away, therefore be wise in making your selection of whom you entrust with your orders. The best way to be sure of getting the uttermost value for money is to let me send you the birds you require carriage paid on 7 days' approval at my risk; my stock of genuine trained St. Andreasberg Rollers are second to none; exactly the birds you require, in full rolling song, not common Germans, but genuine trained birds, cocks, in full song, by day and artificial light, at 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, and 12/6 each; pure St. Andreasberg hens, 2/6 and 3/- each; if you require a first-class loud free songster, my Hartz Rollers are the birds to please; guaranteed cocks in full loud song by day and gaslight, 5/3, 5/9, 6/3 each; matched pairs for breeding songsters, 7/6 and 8/6 pair; neat travelling cages 2d. and 3d. each; if you have any birds out of condition, use Storey's Tonic, the best pick-me-up for all kinds of birds, 7d., 1/-, 1/6 and 2/6 bottle; Eggsups, the best egg food in the world, 8d., 1/- and 1/6 tins, post free; thousands of customers testify to high quality of my birds; read the following and note the dates. 8, Keudall Villas, Isleworth, December 14, 1907.—Bird safe to hand; it is singing all day, and has got a note like a Nightingale; I can recommend you to my friends. — W. Phipps to Mrs. Storey 4, Sanderson Street, Atherton, Manchester, December 14, 1907.—Bird you sent me is a champion; I would not sell him for double the money I gave for him. I am well satisfied. A. Partington to Miss Storey, 166, Dumfries Street, Treherbert, Dec. 15, 1907.—Received M.M. Roller on Saturday; it sang lovely directly paper was removed; I am more than pleased with him; please send me another.—J. Davies to Miss Storey. J. SANDIFORD, Bird Specialist,
PRESTON, LANCS. Telephone, 440.

THERE'S NO QUESTION

about it, if you want the best possible value for your money, you must buy your Rollers from me. I am the sole importer of the genuine Leipzig Roller, and by importing direct am able to save all middlemen's profits, and can retail these grand birds at prices far below those charged by ordinary dealers. I have a grand collection of pure St. Andreasberg hollow Rollers, all direct from Leipzig, and stamped on wing "Hans Weber, Leipzig," all are in full song, day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, waterbubble runs, soft roulades, piccolo trills, bell, harp, du-du and Nightingale pipes, etc., etc., and are guaranteed to be entirely from from Titlark or any objectionable notes whatever, price, 7/- and 8/6 each. Special Schoolmasters, which excel in the deep bass rolls, 10/- each. Few extra special contest Masters, guaranteed pure Seifert blood, 15/- each. These contest birds are gems of the very first water, and have a grand flow of the rich, round, deep rolls, not the thin, metallic, ear-piercing shrieks, and are perfect masters of their art. Pure Roller hens, guaranteed same strain as above cocks, 2/- each, two 3/6. Grand lot of exceptionally loud, free singing Hartz cocks, extra free songsters, and just the thing for public bar, etc., 5/6 each, or 31/6 stick of seven. Hartz hens, 1/6 each, two 2/6 or 12/- dozen. Roller song cabinets made specially for my Rollers, 2/6 each. Ordinary singing box cages, 1/- and 1/3 each. Elegant solid brass drawing-room hanging cages, with ruby cut-glass round and opal feeders, etc., 5/6, 7/6, 10/6, and 13/- each As a special Christmas offer, I will supply up till December 31st only, a free singing Hartz cock in full song in a 10/6 solid brass drawing-room cage for 10/6 complete, or a Leipzig Roller cock in full song, value 7/, in 10/6 cage for 12/6 the lot. This special offer of bird and cage is made instead of giving away almanacks, which are, in most cases, useless, and will only remain open until December 31st, 1907. As usual, all birds and cages are sent safely and warmly packed, upon full week's approval, either on receipt of cash, or CAGE BIRDS deposit system, and money fully returned if every satisfaction not given. Hundreds upon hundreds of unsolicited testimonials have been published in previous issues of CAGE BIRDS, and few more given below, please notice dates and full addresses. "Upper Grove, Sellack, Ross, Dec. 9th. Sir,—I am delighted with the contest Roller, he sings from morning till night, day and gaslight. Please send another as follows. Yours, G. Preece." "215, Ferndale-rd., Swindon, Dec. 9th. Sir,—The two Rollers arrived safe, and give every satisfaction. Please send the following for some friends, as I have recommended you to them. Yours, T. Poole." "2, Graham Buildings, Hillhouse-lane, Huddersfield, Dec. 9th. Sir.—The Roller I got from you is giving every satisfaction. Please send another at 10/- Yours, E. Schofield." "26, New-st., Leominster, Dec. 8th. Sir,—The two Rollers arrived safe, and am very pleased with them. They started to sing the minute they were unpacked. You will hear from me again. Yours, G. Vaughan." "99, James-st., Llanelly, Dec. 8, Sir,—Birds all arrived safe and am well pleased, Schoolmaster doing well. Yours, J. Davies." "13, George-st., Oswaldtwistle, Dec. 5th. Sir,—Having had birds from you for past two or three years, I can do no more than give you another order; all the others being satisfactory. Please send me another contest Master at 15/-. Yours, G. Rushton." "12, Hammersmith-rd., St. George, Bristol, Dec. 5th. Sir,—Schoolmaster is singing lovely, and am very pleased with it. He is the best I have heard. Yours, M. Hill." "Grimsby, Dec. 5th. Sir,—I am very pleased with Schoolmaster you sent me, I have had several, but none to come up to yours. Yours, G. Jacklin." "720, Swansea-ter., Brownhill, Blackburn, Dec. 2nd. Sir,—Glad to say I am very well satisfied with Roller received Nov. 16th. Please quote price for contest singer. Yours, L. Croasdale." "Leicester, Dec. 4th. Sir,—Seifert Roller arrived to-day. He is singing beautifully now as I write by gaslight, so I need not wait the week's approval cut, as I am well pleased with it. Yours, A. Smith." "1, Moss-lane, Platt Bridge, Dec. 2nd. Sir,— Please send me a Hartz cock. The Roller I had from you last year was a perfect little musical box. Yours, J. Meek." "Burleigh, near Stroud, Nov. 28th. Sir,—I am most pleased with Roller, it is a real beauty, and sings lovely. I am more than satisfied with it, and the straightforward way you do your business. Yours, A. Doel." "Cross-st., Bow-st., N. Aberystwyth, Nov. 28th. Sir,—Received Roller safe, and am well satisfied he is a champion for the price. I have always done my best to advertise you, as you have a genuine way of dealing with your customers. Please send following. Yours, T. Meredith." "Beech-st., Blackheath, Nov. 28th. Sir, I am highly pleased with Roller, he began to sing as soon as uncovered him, and is an excellent songster. Yours, S. Detheridge." "Hill-st., Elworth, Nov. 25th.—Sir,—Please send following. I am pleased to say the Roller cock I bought from you two years ago is still singing splendidly. Yours, W. Lee." "1, Church-st., Aber Bargoed, Nov. 24th. Sir,—Received Roller safe, and am very pleased with him. Please send contest Master at 15/- Yours, C. Seralls, Morton-rd., Pilsley. Nov. 28th." "Sir.—Received Roller safely, and am well pleased with him, as soon as put in new cage he started to sing, before even going for food. I had one from —— that I was ready to turn out, as he never gave us a note until yours started. Thanking you for honesty. Yours, T. Berringer." "287, Garscube-rd., Glasgow, Nov. 12th. Sir,—Roller arrived safe, was singing within an hour, and gives every satisfaction. Yours, A. Jardine." "34, Castle-st., Stranraer, Nov. 18th. Sir,—Please send Hartz cock, last I had from you was a topper. Yours, J. Raeside." I am confident that the Rollers imported by me are far superior to any others on the market, and I ask all sceptical persons to have one from me and one at any higher price from elsewhere, test them side by side, and keep the one which suits best. I shall be quite satisfied with result. I claim to be the only direct importer in Midland Counties, and by far the largest retailer in United Kingdom. Inspection cordially invited any time.

SOLID BUSINESS

E. TAYLOR

Bird Specialist,

3 & 7, Thornton Road, BRADFORD.

It is an accepted fact among all classes of civilised trading men, that, in order that business be carried through on satisfactory and solid lines there must be perfect confidence on both sides. That is to say that the buyer must be sure of the seller's honesty of purpose and the seller must have confidence in the buyer's financial rectitude. This is exactly the position of matters which obtains between E. TAYLOR'S business friends and E. TAYLOR himself. There is never any doubt in the mind of the customers as to E. TAYLOR being well able to serve his clients BEST, in Birds, Cages, or Appliances, and the pleasing result is a most harmonious helpfulness on both sides of the counter.

E. TAYLOR'S

IT IS HERE.

It is here, in this small announcement that you must look for the best quality of Norwich and Yorkshire Canaries, and when you study the prices and take the quality into consideration, you will see I sell genuine typical birds so cheap that it would be foolish to buy any more of those half bred, sickly, rubbish that some people try to sell you. I have the finest collection of birds ever seen in bird rooms; contradiction defied; inspection invited. Amongst my stock are winners of prizes at Norwich, Goole, Grimsby, Yarmouth, Derby, Thorne, Stalingboro', Pontefract, Palace, etc., etc., also many that can win when shown. Extra good value in Norwich cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each upwards; shapely Norwich hens, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6, 6/6 to 20/- each; matched breeding pairs, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-; for typical upstanding Yorkshires I take the lead; many winners and birds fit to win at present in stock; cocks, the right type, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 to 30/- each; racy Yorkshire hens, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6, 6/6, to 20/- each; matched breeding pairs, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- pair. WOLVERTON.

Several classes were provided for cage birds at the show held by the North Woolwich Fanciers' Society in the Three Crowns Music Hall on December 19th and 20th. Entries came up moderately, and, except in Norwich and British, the quality was nothing striking. Mr. A. E. Knight, the hon. sec., was most energetic and obliging, and he was well assisted by Messrs. Law, Bedwell, Howe, Wyatt, Battleday, Gill, Kelly, and Anderson. Mr. C. A. House judged. YORKS (4): 1, res, vhc, he, Anderson, nice show, non-fed yellow leading. NOR. (5): 2, spl, best bird in show, Kilby, very short, cobby, tight-feathered, grizzle-tailed yellow; 3, res, vhc, Marshall, stout, shapely yellow, a buff, and a yellow with broken tail, all birds of splendid quality and nice rich colour. BRITISH (8): 1, 2, 3, Marshall, very nicely-marked goldie, rich in colour, and in grand feather; 2nd, beautifully marked, rich-coloured Linnet; 3rd, large sound- [illegible] Greenfinch; res, David; vhc, Miss Bed- [illegible]; c: 2, 3, vhc, Marshall.

WELLINGBOROUGH.

The fourth annual show was held in the Town Band Club, Concert Room, on December 17th and 18th, with a total entry of 440. The Norwich classes were well patronised, and with Messrs. Bishop, Sandiford, Brookes, Cooper, Martin, Godley and several other noted exhibitors' birds on view, the quality was excellent. One of the principal features of the Wellingborough show was the number of Limit classes, and we noticed that in these particular classes, there were a good number of "Sold tickets" on the cages. The quality of the exhibits in the British bird classes was of a very high order, and this was what we quite expected, with the well-known brothers Howe on their native heath, with most of their champions on exhibition. The committee were ably led by the very capable and obliging Hon. Secretary, Mr. W. Howe, and were well supported by his brothers, Mr. Martin, and other members of the Committee. Mr. W. Vardy awarded the prizes in the Canary and Mule classes, Mr. J. Goodall taking the British.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.

This young society held its first show on December 21st, in the Co-operative Hall, a room well adapted for the purpose, plenty of light and space. Entries came up fairly well, and a number of grand specimens were staged. Mr. Nicholson makes an admirable secretary and had things well in hand, the management being first-class. With such a secretary and willing, hard-working committee, we see no reason why this society should not have a highly successful career. Mr. H. W. Battye judged. CL. YELL. YORKS. PORTH.

The first show of the Porth and Dist. C.B.S. was held on December 12th, in the Y.M.C.A. Rooms—a building quite free from draughts, but, unfortunately, somewhat low ceilinged, with no top lights. We heard, however, that there is a probability of the room being reconstructed before another year's show. The exhibits were nicely staged, and were well cared for by a most ardent and thoroughly enthusiastic body of genuine fanciers, who seemed to vie with each other in the amount of work they could put in. The quality was first-class, but the entries in some classes were rather low, no doubt owing to the clashing of show dates in the Principality. Taken on the whole, the entry throughout for a first venture must be regarded as a satisfactory one. Mr. Nicholas put down a grand team of Britishers, and captured the bowl for most points. The members' classes were well filled, and contained many excellent specimens. Mr. Challenger fulfilled the onerous duties of Hon. Secretary, and, considering this was his initial venture, we think he did remarkably well, as he had everything well in hand, and withal was courteous and tactful. We think in the near future this fixture will be one of the leading ones in South Wales. Mr. J. H. Payne judged the Canaries, and Mr. J. B. Evans British, Foreign and Mules.

NARBERTH.

The 20th annual show was held Dec. 11th, at the Victoria Hall—a very warm and commodious building. Numerous well known winners were staged in most of the classes. The judge had a difficult task in placing his awards. Mr. James Owens is a most courteous sec., and had everything in good working order; he was well supported by a body of willing helpers. The feature of the show was the British Goldfinch class, Mr. T. W. Richards staging no less than 12 gems, winning all the money prizes available. Mr. J. B. Evans judged and made a splendid job of it. The awards are as follows:—

NOR. CL. (8): 1, 2, 3, Love, trio of beauties, nice short chubby birds, with good quality, former yell., second cl. buff; vhc, Owens Bros., nicely staged exhibit, good type; hc, Matthews; c, James. TKD., ETC. (4): 2, Mrs. Thomas, nice size and type, feathered like silk; 3, James, well known, very typical, shown in fine style; vhc, Gwyther; hc, Williams and Webb. YORKS. CL. (4): 1, 3, Matthews, pair of straight 'uns, nice position, well feathered, shown in the best of style, yell. and buff respectively; vhc, Tucker; hc, Davies. TKD., ETC. (2): 2, Gwyther, fine length, nice wings and tail, well finished exhibit; vhc, Matthews. DK. MULE (5): 1, vhc, Miss Thomas, former lovely coloured Goldie-Bullie, good size, nice quality of feather; 2, Longden, well known Grecnie-Canary, wonderful level colour, beautifully shaped one, presses hard; 3, Richards, Goldie-Canary, good blaze and bars, very pretty; hc, Williams and Webb. BRIT. GOLDFINCH (20): A class fit to be seen at the Palace, not a bad one in it; 1, 2, 3, 4, vhc, hc, hc, Richards, most of these have been seen at the head of the poll at the big show, grand square cut faces (Mr. R. has a weakness for a good expansive square face and we don't blame him), nice tans and bars; hc, Pudsey Bros., very trim exhibit, nicely polished; c, W. Lewis. BRIT. (16): 1, Lowe, large, nat. col. Yellow Hammer, good ticking on head and breast, wins; 2, Richards, Bunting, nice feather and colour; 3, Mrs. Thomas, sweetly pretty exhibit, shown in fine style; 4, Johns and Richards; vhc, Richards, B. Prosser; hc, Johns. SELL. 7/6: 1, Longden; 2, B. and D. Prosser; 3, Tucker; vhc, Johns; hc, Williams; c, Owen Bros.; c, Phillips. CAN., LOCAL (8): 2, Owen Bros.; hc, Howen.

RUTHIN.

Owing to the fact that the Ruthin Shows Society is not this year holding its customary Christmas show, two bird fanciers—Mr. J. L. Roberts and Mr. John Williams—decided to promote a cage bird show, and this event, held on December 19th, was in every way a success. Fourteen classes were arranged—11 open, three local—and altogether there was a grand total of 180 exhibits, amongst which were some splendid specimens. The show was held in the new premises in Well-street, which afforded excellent light. It is to be hoped the show will become an annual one, and that next year the Town Hall will not be too spacious. The show was under the management of Mr. J. Jenkins, and the judge was Mr. John Williams (Liverpool). In addition to judging the exhibits (and his awards gave every satisfaction), Mr. Williams brought, for exhibition only, three of his champions, consisting of the noted Goldie-Bullie, Canary-Bullie, and a clear Goldie-Canary, and they were greatly admired. The two promoters deserve every commendation for carrying out the project with so much success. Mr. Aldrich and Mr. Gwylym Roberts acted as stewards.

YORKS., TICKED, ETC. (10): 1, 2, Salisbury, a yellow and buff, 1st very slightly ticked, in splendid fettle, wins easy; 2nd, nice buff, in splendid feather, good position; 3, Davies, nice bird, natural colour; vhc, Wilkes; hc, Thomas; c, Roberts. CLEAR (19): 1, 2, Salisbury, nice head, wings, and tail, fine length, position, and quality; 2nd good feather and style, nice carriage; 3, Jones and Owen, good yell.; vhc, Wilkes; hc, Thomas; c, Roberts. A.O.V. (11): 1, Jones, a Crest, a good win, nice top; 2, Jones, buff Norwich Plainhead, well fed and very tight; 3, Hughes, another fine Crest; vhc, Jones; hc, Price; c, Roberts. DK. MULE (20): 1, Ford and Williams, Goldie Bullie, very nice exhibit, shows parentage well; 2, Salisbury, Greenie Canary, good stout bird, well fed; 3, Pierce Williams, yellow Goldie, well known, not looking his best to-day; vhc, Salisbury; hc, Jones; c, Forbes. LIGHT MULE (7): 1, Williams, an easy win, looking well; 2, Owens Bros., very dark, wrong class some thought; 3, Roberts, very nice exhibit, beaten only in size; vhc, Williams; hc, Roberts; c, Jones. BRIT. GOLDFINCH (19): 1, Roberts, Peathroat, good blaze and brown, nice buttons, shines like silk; 2, Finney, another gem; 3, Salisbury, good bold face, in nice form; vhc, Richards; hc, Forbes; c, Ford and Williams. GREYPATE (19): 1, Salisbury, very steady, well cut blaze, but void of sheen; 2, Jones, another good one, very steady, not so big as winner; 3, Finney, best blaze and tannings, but rather rough; vhc, Jones; hc, Williams. A.O.V. BRIT. (11): 1, Jones, fair-sized Bramblefinch, very steady; 2, Forbes, good Hawfinch; 3, Jones, Yellow Bunting, deserves his place; vhc, Jones; hc, Owens Bros. FOREIGN (4): 1, Foulkes, Indian Rock Parrot, stood close to the door and greeted everybody; 2, Richards, Zebra Finch, very pretty exhibit; 3, Jones, Siberian Goldie. SELL., 12/6 (15): 1, Powell, nice yellow Yorks., staged to perfection; 2, Jones; 3, Salisbury; vhc, Salisbury; hc, Richards; c, Roberts. GIFT (4): 1, Salisbury; 2, Salisbury, Greenie Can.; 3, Powell. LOCAL, BEST CAN. (13): 1, Williams; 2, Fox; 3, Hughes; vhc, Roberts; hc, Davies; c, Hughes. GOLDFINCH (18): 1, Edwards; 2, Williams; 3, Hughes; vhc, Thomas; hc, Rickman; c, Humphries. A.O.S. BRIT.: 1, 2, Roberts; 3, Williams; hc, Williams; c, Roberts. Mr. Salisbury won the silver cup for most points in the show, and all prize winners who attended the show were paid same day.
